 D. Nov. 19, 1840 in his 24th year He was one of the three who were blown up on the Eastern Railroad in Hampton N.H. Apr. 24, 1840 while charging a rock. By the explosion he was blown about 12 feet, broke his jawbone in three places, fractured the skull in his forehead, a great number of fragments of stone were blown into his flesh and a number still remained at his death. He was an amiable young man through life, Beloved by all who knew him; a firm believer in his Lord through sickness til death, and died in full expectation of a glorious immortality beyond the grave.
