PREFACE

In this unpretentious volume I have attempted to present some of the highlights of family history and to assemble as many Gilman pedigrees as possible. It concerns the descendants of Edward Gilman of Hingham, England, and his wife, Mary Clark, who came to America in 1638.

For the basis of my work I have used Alexander W. Gilman's comprehensive English publication "The Gillman or Gilman Family"; Charles H. Bell's outstanding "History of Exeter"; Lancaster's century old "History of Gilmanton" and Arthur Gilman's well known "Gilman Genealogy," all of these works having been published in the past century.

These invaluable sources of information have been supplemented by scores of town histories, genealogies, war records, wills, deeds, and vital statistics. A number of privately printed family histories have been generously given to my use. College archivists have been most courteous. The great Genealogical Libraries of Washington, New York, Chicago, Boston, and Concord have afforded a wealth of information. Most important of all, many Gilmans have taken great pains to assemble their family records from old Bibles, letters and other sources in a fine cooperative spirit. Three able Genealogists, Prof. A. F. Gilman of Chicago, Clarence A. Torrey of Dorchester, Mass., and Samuel Copp Worthen, President of the Genealogical Society of New Jersey, have placed their findings at my disposal.

There are a number of inaccuracies in the old Gilman Genealogy, which, with new information, have been corrected. I know that there will be errors in this volume which I hope its readers will pardon. One who has made even the simplest attempt at genealogical work knows the difficutiles involving similarity of names, errors of recording clerks, family records presented in a confused order, and town histories which are sometimes far from accurate.

My task has been a very pleasant one and I hope its fruits will be of some value to present as well as future generations. I have made friends, some of whom I may never meet in person but their interest and friendly attitude have been an inestimable inspiration. It has left me with a feeling of satisfaction that I belong to the people whom I have recorded in these pages.

EXPLANATIONS

Since there are many objections to Roman numerals, Arabic figures are used in the Genealogical enumeration. Each individual is numbered in order of his recording, his numeral being used when reference is made to him.

When a male has descendants, the number indicating his eldest child is placed in parentheses after the father's name.

In case two or more children of the same family have no record their names may be combined under the same number.

The descendants of Gilman women are included in the mother's record and do not extend beyond the second generation.

The Genealogy is arranged in three sections, a section for each of Edward the Emigrant's sons, Edward, John and Moses, in order of their birth.

When there is any doubt concerning the authenticity of a record it is indicated in the text.

The towns, Belmont, Alton and Gilford were often referred to as Gilmanton in their early days, Lakeport became Laconia. Exeter included Brentwood and Newmarket at an early period.

Edward Gilman, the Emigrant, whose descendants we have recorded, was of the third generation of Gilmans whose records are in an unbroken line back to the birth of Edward his grandfather who married Rose Rysse in Caston, Norfolk, England, June 22, 1550.

CHAPTER .I

"In Days of Old, When Knights Were Bold."

A few years before the birth of Christ there lived a great warrior and states, man, Julius Caeser. It was he who conquered Gaul, crossed the Channel in his Roman galleys and revealed the Isle of Britain to the Roman world. It was, however, not for him to conquer this new race of people. A full century passed before its complete subjugation by the Romans, but the work of civilization quickly followed the path of the sword. Linked together by magnificent roads which reached from one end of the island to the other, the cities of Britain were thoroughly Romanized.

For 300 years peace and prosperity reigned. Finally evils sapped the strength of the whole Roman Empire and, in the 15th century, Rome was obliged to withdraw her legions from Britain to protect herself from the Goths. It was then that the savage Picts from the North and the barbarians from Ireland bore down on the Britains who, in desperation, hired a band of Pirates from Jutland to aid them. Jutland was a part of Germany, the home of the Saxons or Angles. Crossing the Channel in their huge flat bottomed boats they quickly scattered the Picts and took possession of the coast lands granted to them. During the next 125 years hordes of Angles came over and, by the might of fire and sword, pushed the Britains back. Moreover they brought their families with them and settled the land as fast as they conquered it.

In the end Britain become Angland or England. A Teutonic society had been built upon the wreck of Rome by the Angles who brought with them their entire system of village life and culture. Pagans they were, but not savages, and the base of this new England was the freeman, not the slave. Years later a Saxon king married Bercta, daughter of King Cheribert of Paris. She was a Christian and brought a Christian Bishop with her. The king gave her a ruined Christian church in Canterbury for her worship, permitted missionaries to come from France and eventually was himself converted. Canterbury became a center for Roman civilization, arts and letters, long since fled before the Angles.

Frightful internal and external wars wracked the country for centuries. It was conquered by Cnut the Dane, and by William the Conqueror of Normandy, when the blood of foreigners again mingled with that of the English. The wars between the clans of England were worst of all. The Britains who had fled into Wales stood against the other English clans for generations but finally Llewellyn, Prince of Wales, succumbed to the might of King Edward 1st and the fabric of Welsh greatness dissolved at a single blow.

To all appearances Wales became utterly barbarous, stripped of its Roman civilization by ages of warfare and isolation from the culture of Christendom. This savage mass of herdsmen, clad in the skins and fed by the milk of the cattle they tended, maintained no higher organization than that of the clan and only united when in battle against the invader. Strangely, there still lingered in the hearts of this wild people a spark of poetic fire. The intense patriotism of the early bards, their joy in battle and their love of freedom burst forth in ode after ode, depicting famous deeds of their kings and heroes and handed down from generation to generation. In this way the Welshmen kept an account of the succession of their kings. They were also recorded in writing, through the monasteries from which Welsh chieftains obtained a primitive culture. A few of these men made pligrimages to Jerusalem.

About the year 843 there lived in Glynllyson, North Wales, a knight known as Cilmin-Troed-Dhu, or Cilmin of the black leg. He came there with his father's brother Mervyn, either from the Isle of Man or from Mervyn's possessions in the North of Britain and founded the Fourth Noble Tribe of Wales, probably known as the Cilmins. Cilmin's uncle, Mervyn Vryshe, King of the Isle of Man, married Esyllt, only daughter and heir of Conan, son of Roderick, King of the Britains. Conan died and Mervyn and Esyllt became King and Queen of Wales in 818. Their son was the last Roderick the Great and ancestor of the Tudors.

Thus we can picture Cilmin-Troed-Dhu as a warrior living in a world that knew little else than the power of conquest. His clan were barbaric herdsmen, his abode no doubt crude, but as luxurious as his high station afforded. His education and religion were the evolution of four centuries since the English occupation of Britain, conserved by the monks in their monasteries. We must believe that he was outstanding in his generation, for, in the ensuing sixteen centuries, his descendants held a high place, each one in his day. The following is quoted from the Cambrian Register, published in 1790, "Cilmin-Troed-Dhu-He lived in the time of Mervyn Vryshe, King of Man, being his brother's son, with whom he came from the North of Britain . . . his posterity were wise and discreet men in all their ages and many of them learned in the Laws and Judges under the Kings and Princes of Wales, as Mongene Ynad and Apnerth his son, whose law book is still extant, fairly written on parchment." As nephew to Mervyn, King of Wales, and as cousin to Roderick the Great, Cilmin must have had considerable prestige, aside from the fact that he was chieftain of one of the noble tribes of Wales.

Cilmin's stronghold was not far from Carnarvon, close to the beautiful mountain Yr Eifl (The Rivals) and once dedicated to fire worship. The whole district is reminiscent of the Druids and the Town of Fortresses is the finest example of an ancient British 'Station.' The remains of a great number of small houses or cells are spread over the mountain. Nearby are several circles of stones; below is a Cromlech or ancient tomb, the whole being surrounded by a double range of walls. On the summit is a Carned. This was the scene of the legend of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu.

Glynlysson Park, now the seat of Lord Newborough, stretches where the domain of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu once lay. The pretty Llifon River runs through the grounds to which it gives name "Sparkling and foaming at intervals over its.

rocky bed as if it were still startled by the denisens of the rocky mountains," just as it did a thousand years ago.

As the legend has it, far up in the mountains, across the swift stream which marked the boundary of Gilmin's domain, lived mysterious demons. Thunder clouds shrouded their kingdom and fierce lightning and rumbling accompanied their rites, as any one living near could testify.

Gilmin became the friend of a Necromancer dwelling in the vicinity, who knew all the secrets of nature except one, which was in a Book, written by no mortal hand and guarded by a Demon whose abode was near the forked summit of Yr Eifl. The Necromancer, although a magician, had no power to obtain the mystic Book and he craved to know the secret it contained. He confided the anguish of his soul to his friend. Our Knight, Cilmin, was young and afraid of no mortal man nor of the Devil himself. He promised the Necromancer that the Book should soon be his.

Armed to the teeth, he mounted his favorite steed and safely crossed the dangerous rocks and swift currents of the Stream. The Necromancer had urged him to be particularly careful not to touch its waters as evil would certainly befall him. Cilmin spurred his steed over the stony way and up the craggy steep into the mountain and Tref-Y-Caeran, the Town of Fortresses, an immense rampart of huge stones honeycombed with cells of every form and ending in a point almost inaccessible. Here was the resort of the Demons whose chief lived on the highest pinnacle of the rock with a hideous giantess who executed his bidding and wrought terrible havoc to the country. Their constant study was the Book which, in their hands, taught only evil, but to Christian eyes would disclose much good. The giantess lived in a cell called to this day Moel-Carn-Y-Guwch and now rises to a cone, being crowned by a huge pile of stones, like the runins of a fortress; but at that time the stones were in the lap of a giantess and she intended to heat them red hot at the Demon's fire and cast them down on the neighboring fields to destroy them. When she saw Cilmin riding up the steep she was so surprised that she started from her seat and let the stones fall from her apron. The place is still called "Apron Full of Stones."

Then followed a fearful combat between the Giantess, the Demon and Cilmin. The Knight, by the help of his good sword, was able to fell the Demon and to snatch the Book held beneath his serpent wing. Spurring his horse he began to descend the mountain with the whole city of Demons howling at his heels. Keeping them at bay the Knight came crashing down the steep. When he reached the stream of Llifon his gallant steed, all foam and lather, fell exhausted and dying. Cilmin hesitated not a moment, but rose on the back of the noble animal and made a desperate leap. Just as he touched the opposite bank one foot slipped and he felt as though a red hot grasp had siezed his leg beneath the water and he heard a fiendish laugh as he dragged himself away from the stream and sought the hermitage of the Necromancer. He gave him the Book so dearly gained and it is a pity that the Necromancer was not able by his magic to restore the leg to health again. Henceforth it remained coal black and the Knight was lame to his dying day. He was known as Cilmin-Troed-Dhu or Cilmin of the black leg.

This myth is a tale of the middle ages, probably written by one of the monks of that time. Reformers of this period did not dare to expenly express their views and wrote entirely in a symbolical language. This mork of the Roman Church evidently wished its reformation. Cilmin may have been a Crusader whose mind had become freed from superstion by travel and correct with other thinkers in Italy, Constantinople and Palestine; the Necromancer I wise monk, acquainted, through the monasteries, with all the learning of his ime; the Book, the Bible, which was withheld from the people; the Demons the evil members of the clergy, who typified superstion, fear, ignorance and the lower passions; the Brook, the boundary between error and truth; "Whoever crosses the stream of error must bear its mark and go forever limping on his way." However one may interpret the tale, there was in truth a Knight, Gilmin-Troed-Dhu, living in this very spot in the year 843.

The coat of arms used for centuries by the Gilmans is given by Vincent, the Herald in "Welsh Coats of Arms," written about 1620, as the coat of arms borne by Gilman-Troed-Dhu. At the close of the 15th century the control of the use of arms had become very lax and some had assumed arms without the proper sanction. To rectify this state of affairs the Crown appointed Officers of Arms, requiring them either in person or by deputy to "Make visitations through out the whole of England and examine the coats of arms in use, deface or rectify those borne improperly and record those which were then borne properly by inheritance." At least three visitations passed through the country and genuine arms originating before that date and properly in use at that period were then registered. It is an established fact that these three visitations weeded out all those not entitled to bear arms. At this time the Gilman arms were officially recorded. The Glynns, also descendants of Cilman-Troed-Dhu, were likewise permitted to bear this same coat of arms, but the male line of the Glynns is now extinct. The arms and crest vary considerably in different branches of the family but the black leg is ever; present. The crest of the Norfolk Gilmans is a demi-lion issuing from the cap of maintenance. Their motto is "Si Deus Quis Contra" (If God be with us what can avail against us) or "Esperance" (Hope).

At this time it seems appropriate to call attention to the varied spelling of the Gilman name. The letter C in Anglo-Saxon originally had the sound of G. Y was also used for I in the 14th century. Thus Cilmin became Gilmin Kilmyn, then Gylmyn, Guylmyn, Guilmyn, Gilmyn, and Gilman or Gilman. It was frequently spelled two or three different ways in one document. Few names have retained so closely their original sound and spelling.

It seems incredible that the pedigree of an obscure Welsh chieftain should have been recorded for so many generations back in the days when spelling was an art and records were only for the royalty. It involves a tale of medieval history worth the telling.

Through battle, murder and intrigue the line of English kings wound its bloody way from the days of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu down the next six centuries to a man named Henry Tudor whose accession to the throne hung by a slender thread indeed. His claim was based upon the fact that he was the grandson of John of Gaunt who, in his day, was head of the house of Lancaster, which, together with the House of York, claimed accession to the throne. John of Gaunt's career had, been a stormy one politically and matrimonially. Having contracted two marriages of convenience, at the death of his second wife, he married his mistress, Catherine Swinford, mother of his five children to whom he gave the name of Beaufort and whom the King legitimatized, although this act was later revoked by parliament. The death of Henry VI and his son left the House of York without an heir but the Lancasters survived in Henry Tudor, son of Margaret Beaufort, daughter of John of Gaunt and Catherine Swinford. She had married well, choosing Edmund Tudor, Duke of Richmond and son of Owen Tudor a Welsh squire of great prominence, whose wife was Catherine of France, widow of Henry Vth. Henry, son of Margaret Beaufort and Edmund Tudor, was less than a year old when his father died. For years he was kept in Brittany, half guest and half prisoner. His claim of blood was a disputable one but the Battle of Bosworth and treason finally gave him the throne.

The stigma attached to the Beaufort name may have inspired Henry Tudor to offset the tainted blood of the House of Lancaster by the honorable ancestry of the Welsh Tudors. A commission was sent to Wales, assisted by Welshmen of letters in their examination of ancient manuscripts carried into Wales in the 7th century when the Britons were driven out of a large part of England. These mendrew up the exact pedigree of Owen Tudor which they presented to his grandson, now King Henry VII, who must have been gratified with a continuous and authentic line back to Coel Godebec, King of Britain about 300 A.D. One of the links in this line was none other than Mervyn Vryshe, King of the Isle of Man, King of Wales and uncle of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu. Mervyn's son Roderick was the ancestor of Henry VII. In this interesting manner the origin of Gilmin-Troed-Dhu was brought to light although it shows no blood bond with the Tudor family as is is sometimes claimed.

After a rule of twenty-four years, Henry VII passed on, leaving his throne to Henry VIII who inherited his father's friendly feeling for the Welsh people. He invited many Welshmen to his court, placing them in his retinue and it is not strange that we find the descendants of Cilmin in Henry's court 700 years after this valiant Knight had laid down his arms forever.

PEDIGREE OF CILMIN OR GILMIN TROED-DHU.

"The Grove," Highgate, London

CHAPTER II

English Cousins.

Seven centuries rolled over Glynllifon since the days of its gallant chieftain, Cilmin-Troed-Dhu, and we find his descendants still in their ancestral home. However, many changes had occurred and others were soon to come. In the British Museum, Harleian Manuscript No. 1960 gives a list of the descendants of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu, containing many other names than those in the pedigree published in this book. There were many younger sons who doubtless carried their tribal name into England. Early English records during this period tell of Gilmans appearing in various localities in England. Their arms were a man's leg couped at the thigh, denoting unmistakably their origin as descendants of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu of Wales. They were the nucleus of several branches of the Gilman family of England. We shall refer to them as our English cousins as they were undoubtedly related to our own ancesters, the Norfolk Gilmans.

Mr. William Alexander's able work on the Gilman or Gillman family gives many fascinating stories about these cousins. Some of these tales have an historical as well as a personal interest, Undoubtedly closely connected with our own branch were the Gilmans of Highgate, London, who, at an earlier date lived in Great Yarmouth not far from the Gilmans of Caston and Hingham. There was at least one marriage between the two families on record. James Gilman, son of John of Yarmouth, a graduate of the Royal College of Surgeons of London, located in Highgate, a suburb of London. His acquaintance with the poet and philosopher, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, begin in 1816. Coleridge, in order to allay the pain of an incurable disease, had acquired the habit of taking large doses of opium and realized that he must put himself in the hands of some firm person of medical experience. He made the acquaintance of Dr. and Mrs. Gillman in a call at their home one evening. It proved a case of mutual admiration. The Gillmans arranged a special room for him, raising the roof to accommodate his huge book cases. His room overlooked the beautiful Nightingale Valley with its shady walks and the picturesque villages of Hampstead. No opium entered the house except for severe pain. Mrs. Coleridge came for Christmas and was a constant correspondent with Mrs. Gillman. Charles Lamb, noted humorist, dined with them every Sunday. "The Grove," the home. of the Gillmans acquired a unique distinction. Notables constantly sought him, among them Emerson, the American essayist. Coleridge discoursed so enchantingly that his visitors seemed bewitched. His trembling limbs and tottering gait never entirely ceased but, wherever he appeared with his snow white locks and soulful eyes, old and young took off their hats to him. He was buried at Highgate Old Chapel, a monument being erected to his memory by the Gillmans, Dr. Gillman composing the epitaph. Dr. Gillman died in 1839, leaving two sons, Anthony, who died unmarried, and James, a minister who evolved a scheme for insurance for the poorer classes in the Prudential Insurance Company, then a small struggling concern. It proved successful and he became chairman of the company. His son, Alexander William Gillman, born in 1843, was educated at the Royal College of Chemistry. After several years of research he reduced the process of brewing to a science and was a consultant to the largest firms in this business throughout the province. Having always had a taste for research he embarked upon the task of writing the "History of the Gillman or Gilman Family." This monumental work contains copies of ancient wills, records with fac similes of family arms, colorful historical sketches and scores of pedigrees, all linked together very cleverly and always with the background of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu in evidence. Its compilation involved years of expensive research and travel combined with a thorough knowledge of his work. We have endeavored to pass along a very small portion of his findings among the English Archives, those which relate to our immediate family history. Mr. Gillman's family still live in London where they are of considerable prominence.

Another most interesting and important family story is that of the Gilmans who were ousted from their ancestral home at Glynllifon and whose pedigree is unbroken down to the present day. It seems that Robert Gylmyn, heir to Glynllifon, married Jane Pulleston and had five sons. The mother died and Robert married a second time. The son of this marriage, after his father's death, was given preference over the children of the first wife and came into possssion of Glynllifon. He assumed the name of Glynn and was entitled to wear the Gilman coat of arms but the male line is now extinct. The Gylmyns, deprived of their heritage, went to London where they found positions of honor in the court of Henry VII and his son Henry VIII, the Tudor kings whose Welsh ancestry we have recounted. Of Richard we have many records.

Richard Gylmyn became a member of the famous "Ye Yeomen of Ye Guard," a special body guard for Henry VII consisting of fifty men of the best rank, over six feet tall and of fine physique. That Richard joined the Guard late in Henry VII's time is shown by letters and official documents still on record. His grandson, Henry, was Keeper of the Naval Stores in the time of Queen Elizabeth and was also a Commissioner of the Navy. There is a sand shoal off the mouth of the Thames called the "Gilman Sand" marked to this day on all charts and by two buoys with the names East Gilman and North Gilman painted on them.

John, another son of Richard of the Guard, was devoted to the court of Henry VIII as Groom of the Royal Ante chamber and other important offices. He was later "Gentleman Harbinger" to Queen Mary. His second wife was Susan Hornboldt of Flanders, lady in waiting to Ann of Cleves, fourth wife of Henry VIII. It is probable that John Gylmyn married Susan shortly before she left Flanders with her Queen, as he was in Flanders with the Earl of Hampton to arrange the preliminaries of the royal marriage. On Dec. 11, 1539, the Lady Ann was conducted to Calais where a large party of English noblemen were waiting to receive her. A list of a portion of this retinue is in the British Museum, including the name of Mrs. Gylmyn. The manuscript reads, "The names of the noblemen and other of the Queen's trayn that attend on her Grace to Calais."

King Henry was very much disappointed at the first sight of his bride. The fact that neither could understand the other's language did not better matters. He tried in vain to escape the engagement. They were married in January and divorced in July. She was granted Richmond Palace where she remained until her death seventeen years later. John Gylmyn was devoted to his king until the death of Henry and named his son after him. The king was Godfather and gave him a very handsome baptismal gift recorded as-"A standing Cuppe of silver wt a cover all gilte and twoo pottes of silver all gilte wt covers wighing all to githers fiftie ounces or thereabouts." The child Henry became the father of Lieut. John Gilmyn who went to Ireland with the Earl of Essex in 1599. The Earl was unsuccessful in his errand and returned to England only to lose his head by order of Queen Elizabeth. Lieut. John Gilmyn remained in Ireland and married Elinor, daughter of Cnogher O'Callighan, Esq., of Clonmeen Castle, County Cork. From this marriage sprang the Gillmans of Ireland. The patent granting the title of Baronet to Sir John St. Leger Gilman in 1799 was spelled with one 1 although the Irish family have since preferred two I's as a rule. The Irish Gilmans are a distinguished branch, not only in Ireland, but in Canada and United States as well. Henry Gillman, a descendent of Lieut. John, came from Ireland to Detroit in 1950 where he married an American girl and raised his family. He devoted his life to literary and scientific pursuits and was a writer of note. He was U.S. Consul to Jerusalem 1886-1891 where his son was Assistant Surgeon in the British Opthalmic Hospital. After completing his studies in European medical centers Dr. Gillman returned to Detroit where he has been eminent as a specialist. These Irish cousins are the only branch of the family who can trace their lineage without a break back to Cilmin-Troed-Dhu.

The Gilmans of China were so called because of their tea trade with that country and the fact that they lived in Singapore for many years. Their earliest recorded ancestor was Anthony Gilman,, which indicates a connection with Richard, Yeoman of the Guard, who had a son Anthony. A later Anthony was Cashier of the Bank of England. Richard James Gilman made a fortune in China, later retiring to his estate in Hampshire, England. James Ellis Gilman was an East India merchant at Singapore where his four children were born. After some years he returned and founded the London branch of the firm which was carried on by his two sons, Ellis and Henry Edward. The writer of this book had the pleasure of visiting the latter and his two sisters at Sutton House, Kent, in 1902 and found them a most cultured and interesting family. We also spent a most delightful Sunday with their young nephew James and his charming wife in Maidenhead on the Thames. James was just out of Cambridge, a celebrated cricket player and the proud father of a baby son. The day was spent in punting on the river and in music and conversation. It will always remain a delightful memory.

Among the Gilmans who, in all probability, left the ancient domain at Glynllifon was a certain John Gylemyn to whom a grant of land was made in 1261. Eight years later he is referred to as Marshall to the King. As he travelled about the country in the conduct of his duties we find many records of him and his two sons, who served as Governors of Canterbury Castle and were also members of Parliament. (British Museum Library Records). About this time a Geoffry Gilmyn was appointed Governor of Canterbury Castle and he was undoubtedly another son. These Gilmyns came from Bristol which is very near South Wales. Their arms were a man's leg couped at the thigh. We have reason to believe that this family was a forerunner of the Norfolk Gilmans as Geoffry Gilman appeared in Caston at this time.

In reviewing the foregoing pages, one is given the impression of a cultured and honorable people. While not of the nobility they were definitely of the 'gentry,' being for the most part land owners and professional men. Often associated with court life, they evidently escaped its intrigues which so frequently proved the ruination of whole families and their posterity as well. Passing from these interesting cousins we find in Norfolk the origin of our New England Gilmans

St. Andrew's, Hingham

CHAPTER III

The Norfolk Gilmans.

As Maine is to United States, so Norfolk is to England. It bulges far out into the North Sea, the old town of Yarmouth on its Eastern extremity. It has always been a fisherman's haven as well as a seaport. Ships may follow on twenty miles up the broad River Yare and anchor at Norwich which was a flourishing seaport eight centuries ago and the oldest manufacturing town in the kingdom. Wool came around the coast in early days from Bristol and other coast towns and the mills of Norwich made it into cloth. It was a likely way for the Bristol Gilmans to have come to Norfolk.

The earliest Gilman record connected with Norfolk is the name of Geoffry Gilemyn on a Norwich register about 1310. This is undoubtedly Geoffry, Keeper of Canterbury Castle and brother of William, Member of Parliament. There was a Reginall and his wife Cecelia Gilmyn who owned land in Shipham near Caston probably related to him also. Later a Raff (Ralph) Gilmyn dies in this same locality and leaves all of his houses and lands to his cousins. There is no doubt of a close relationship between Ralf and Edward Gilman of Caston but absolute proof is lacking.

With the marriage of Edward Gilman and Rose Rysse at Caston on June 12, 1550, we come at last to an unbroken line of Gilman records down to the present day. He left houses, lands and estates to his four sons, John, Robert, Edward and Lawrence, and to five daughters. Unfortunately we cannot trace the posterity of this entire family but the descendants of Robert and Edward have left consecutive records. These two brothers left Caston and moved to nearby Hingham. This ancient market town, a few miles from Norwich, lies on a gentle slope near a small lake. It once had three stock fairs a year and its market was held weekly at the Cock and Ringer Inns. Hingham is at least a thousand years old. In 1316 the handsome old church of St. Andrew was built upon the site of an older building. It is constructed of small dark flint stones, and its lofty tower, containing eight musical bells, is reached by stone steps. For six hundred years the sexton has mounted the stairs twice each day to ring the curfew and the bell for daily service. In places the footsteps are worn several inches deep. Before the Reformation chapels and numerous images decorated the church. It has some fine stained glass windows brought from Germany and on the floor are stone tablets to the memory of many Gilmans, each of which bears the family arms and crest.

In a niche on the North wall in the nave of old St. Andrew's is a bronze bust of the famous liberator, Abraham Lincoln, with this inscription beneath—"In this parish for many generations lived the Lincolns, to whom, greatest of that lineage, many citizens of United States have erected this memorial in the hope that, for all ages, between that land and this land and all lands, there shall be malice toward none with charity for all."

Few realize that Abraham Lincoln's pedigree goes back to Hingham and to a long line of respected ancestors. The fact that Richard Lincoln was buried in the middle aisle of St. Andrew's is evidence that he was one of the class called "Gentry." He died possessed of a considerable estate but the children of his fourth marriage acquired all of his property except a small amount of land which was granted to his son Edward by the Chancery Court. This Edward Lincoln undoubtedly married Bridget Gilman, sister of Edward Gilman the Emigrant, and their son, Thomas, came to America with his aunt Mary Gilman Jacob in 1633 on the ship Bonadventure, settling in Hingham, Mass. He was registered on the ship as the nephew of Mrs. Nicholas Jacob, sister of Bridget Gilman Lincoln. Thomas Lincoln was called 'the Weaver' and his brother Samuel was the direct ancestor of Abraham Lincoln.

In this little town of Hingham where the Lincolns and the Gilmans grew up together, Robert Gilman's line was represented by Mr. Samuel Heyhoe La Neve Gilman and in Norwich by Sir Charles Rackham Gilman and his brother John Henry Stother Gilman. Sir Charles was knighted by King George VI in 1898. Charles Story Gilman, Barrister at Law, Inner Temple, London, was his only son who left no male heirs. John Henry had two sons, one of whome is Father Geoffry of the Roman Catholic Church in San Jose, Cal., and the other is Charles Randon Gilman now living in Suffolk, England. Mr. and Mrs. Gilman were engaged in very strenuous defense work during the past war which resulted in over strain and necessitated a long period of recuperation. Mr. Gilman was in active service during World War I. Young Richard Gilman, their son, is the only known male descendant of the Norfolk Gilmans in England at the present time. He was inducted into the Royal Marines at the age of eighteen and became a Lieutenant. He is now completing his education. His sister Ann joined the W.R.E.N.S., serving four years. She is now at Cambridge being one of a select few to be accepted after passing the entrance examinations.

Mr. Samuel Heyhoe LeNeve Gilman of Hingham, England, was a man of great culture. He left in his beautiful residence, at death, a valuable library, a large collection of paintings by Van Dyke, Poussin, Gindo, Holbein, Carlo, Dolce and other celebrated artists. There was much silver plate, carved woods and other valuabe objects of art, indicative of a man of wealth and refinement. A rather interesting bit of history is connected with his grandmother, Hester Le-Neve, who was the daughter of an ancient and distinguished family. There is an epitaph on a tomb in Westminster Abbey which reads thus—"Here lyeth the body of Richard LeNeve, Esquire, who, after several engagements for His Majestie's service, wherein he behaved himself with honor and applause, being appointed to His Majestie's ship the Edgar, was unfortunately killed in the flower of his age, being but twenty-seven years old, after he had signalized his valor to administer in that sharp engagement with the Hollanders which happened on the eleventh of August 1673." Hester LeNeve, his cousin, married Samuel Gilman and the name LeNeve has been continued among the Gilmans to the present time. Samuel Heyhoe LeNeve Gilman died in 1860 leaving no children. His brother Edward Case Gilman, however, had a son Edward who went to Canada, married there and returned to England after thirty years, leaving in America four sons and two daughters who have many descendants in Canada and United States.

Our particular interest now centers upon one Edward Gilman, grandson of Edward and Rose Rysse Gilman of Caston and son of their son Edward. Until recent years he was believed to be the son of Robert. The late Col. Charles E. Banks, genealogist, discovered a deposition which Edward the Emigrant made in 1637, when according to his record he was fifty-two years old. In this deposition he mentions his father as Edward.

Early in the seventeenth century the little town of Hingham, England, was torn by the same religious dissension which prevailed throughout the kingdom. Many Puritans were still within the Church of England, among them Robert Peck, Rector of Hingham. He headed a group which held prayer meetings in private houses, which was regarded with suspicion. Not only this, but, since the Reformation, he had dared to make drastic changes in the church itself. Removing the altar railing he lowered the chancel a foot below the church level. For these acts he was ordered to appear before the Chancllor's Court. Rather than risk the judgment of a prejudiced court he decided to take refuge in America as many others had done before him. Numbers of his parishioners decided to accompany him, some for religious reasons and others for the sake of adventure in a new field of opportunity.

Among his followers were Edward Gilman and his family. Five years before this time his sister Mary, her husband Nicholas Jacob, their two children and her nephew Thomas Lincoln had gone to America with friends and neighbors from Hingham. They had settled in a little community near Boston, named Hingham in memory of the home town in England. Perhaps this fact influenced Edward, as he had probably had letters from his sister telling of the new country. At any rate he sold his considerable property for about half its value and made arrangements to take three servants along with his family.

During these years of pilgrimage it is difficult to realize the frightful hazards and hardships which the passengers of these little boats endured over a period of weeks and months. Few of the vessels weighed over five hundred tons and few were equipped for passengers. Unsanitary, and with no facilities for the preservation of food supplies or water, sickness was inevitable. Many never survived to see the land of promise. The Diligent, on which the Hingham pilgrims sailed, was probably above the average in size and accommodations but, at best, the voyage was long and perilous.

It was a company of one hundred and thirty-three which embarked at Gravesend on April 26, 1638. After a voyage of fourteen weeks they arrived at Boston Harbor on the 10th of August. It may be of interest to picture this little family which was to found our American ancestry.

Edward, the father, hereafter known as Edward the Emigrant, was a man fifty years of age when he left the land of his fathers and staked his fortune and the future of his children upon a life in the New World.

Mary Clark Gilman, his wife: One can scarcely conceive the courage it must have taken for this mother to leave her quiet country home and to usher her children into unknown vicissitudes.

Mary, the eldest child, had just married John Folsom, a Hingham lad. The fortunes of the Folsom and Gilman families were to be interwoven for generations to come. The children of this couple were truly "Early American."

Edward, the eldest son, had just turned twenty-one. Without him as his right hand man his father would scarcely have dared to make this venture.

Lydia, about nineteen, the future wife of Daniel Cushing, also a passenger on the Dilligent with his parents and whose name became famous in American politics.

Sarah, a young girl of sixteen who later married John Leavitt, a member of a prominent New England family.

John, a lad of thirteen, undoubtedly full of enthusiasm for the adventures which lay ahead, and destined to become a leader among the pioneers.

Moses, youngest of the family, a boy of eight, soon to forget his quiet English home in the excitement of his new surroundings.

This was the family group which disembarked from the Diligent on that August day over four hundred years ago, glad to set foot again upon good old mother earth and doubtless glad to be alive. Together they made their way with others of their company to the little settlement of Hingham, fourteen miles to the south of Boston. There they met old friends and relatives who had come over some time before and no doubt were eager to hear home news and to tell of their own experiences in this new world. From this stock has emanated, down through the years, men and women who have molded the destinies of our country. They have fulfilled their obligations to their chosen land with loyalty and honor.

CHAPTER IV

The New World.

Hingham, they found, was a very small plantation, as it was then called, strung along a little stream with steep wooded hills on either side. On a knoll stood the church, built of logs with thatched roof and surrounded by a palisade. The Gilman family was at once plunged into pioneer life of the most rugged type. Military service was required of every one of age, for the Indian was a constant menace. The men were always armed whether at church or a town meeting. Bullets were legal tender, passing for a farthing. They learned the Indian method of warfare-fighting from behind trees-and sections of big timber were kept specially for training grounds. A barrel of powder stood near the church door. As for the service, a hawkeyed watchman sat in the war of the great bare room tapping the heads of dozing men with a long pole and gently tickling the ears of nodding ladies during the lengthy sermon. Peter Hobart had an independent spirit and a liberal mind and was devoted to his parish. In his diary was given much of the town's history. It is now in the files of the Massachusetts Historical Society. If is said that the Rev. Peck of Hingham, after a short sojourn in America, returned to England as soon as he learned that its bishops had been deposed.

Whether Edward's coming was expected by his sister, Mary Jacob, we do not know, but it was undoubtedly a joyful reunion. Lydia Gilman soon married Daniel Cushing, eldest son of Mathew, whose posterity has given men of distinction to the nation. Six children were born to them. Mr. Cushing had a general store and along with his daily accounts he recorded many of the town's events and considerable of its gossip;— the time Israel Leavitt abused Mr. and Mrs. Norton with base speeches, Mr. Norton being the minister; the time his boy and the minister's son imbibed too freely; the hasty marriages and other items of popular interest. His record is a valuable one as well as amusing. A photographic copy of it is a unique addition to Massachusetts Historical literature. At the age of seventy, his wife having been dead several years, he enters in his diary his courtship with the widow Thatcher as follows,—

"Nov. 27, 1689, bargained with E.T. Dec. 3, 1689, E.T. denied the bargain. Dec. 13, 1689, Agreed again. May 1, 1690, Agreed."

The wedding followed soon after this entry. The bride was Elizabeth Jacob Thatcher, his first wife's cousin. His son Daniel married her daughter and the two families were further connected by several intermarriages, a common occurrence in those days. Sarah Gilman and her husband John Leavitt made Hingham their permanent home. Mary Gilman and John Folsom lived there a few years before their removal to Exeter, N.H. Edward Jr. and his father evidently failed to find the opportunities they were seeking and after three or four years moved on to Rohoboth and Ipswich, Mass., where Edward married Elizabeth Smith, daughter of Richard Smith of Norfolk, England, who presented them with a tract of land which Edward Jr. later sold to his own father when he moved to Exeter in 1647. Attracted by the water power there which might be utilized for mills Edward the Emigrant soon followed him with the remainder of his family. It is possible that the greater portion of this journey from Ipswich to Exeter was made by water through the Great Bay up the Exeter or Squamset River to the falls where its waters mingle with the tides from the sea and about which the settlement of Exeter was clustered.

Edward Jr. acquired rights to set up saw mills and soon became a business and civic leader in the town. By the year 1652 the family was well established in Exeter. Edward Jr. was the principal mill owner and his father lost no time in obtaining important grants and various properties.

The following year their first catastrophe befell the family. Edward Jr., whose future held such brilliant promise, made a voyage to England for mill gearing and was lost at sea. The blow was a heavy one. His business was carried on by his brothers and his children were also cared for by them. Probably grief over the tragic fate of his eldest son hastened the death of Edward, the Emigrant, as he passed away a year later, completing his great adventure with all honor and a certain glory. He had established his family in the land of promise, thus giving them a heritage of inestimable value. He left to America a posterity that was preeminent in the affairs of government and in other walks of life. He had bequeathed to his country a legion of loyal Americans. His wife Mary, who had so faithfully shared his vicissitudes, passed her remaining years with her daughter Lydia Cushing in Hingham, Mass.

A few years after Edward the Emigrant's death two more Gilmans came from Hingham, England. They were his brother John's two sons John and Charles. They remained in Exeter a brief period when John married Elizabeth Goddard of Portsmouth and he and Charles together with a cousin, Israel Folsom of Exeter, went to Piscataway, New Jersey, where they founded a branch of the Norfolk Gilmans which has lived up to all the family traditions. Genealagists have confused these two brothers with the sons of Edward Gilman Jr. who was lost at sea, and it took Mr. Clarence Torrey, a genealogist of note, to rectify this mistake. In establishing his own connection with the Norfolk Gilmans he discovered old English records and also American data which adjusted discrepancies in our family history. Mr. Torrey is descended from John Gilman, nephew of Edward the Emigrant, who founded the New Jersey branch of the family.

These were days of real hardship. There was not a wheeled vehicle in the town. People who had horses rode them, their wives behind them on a pillion. Houses were built of logs with a view to protection from the Indians. Every home had its spinning wheel, as the settlers dressed in homespun cloth. Later on, fine clothes were imported from England, luxuries from Boston and slaves from the South. Lumber and shingles took the place of logs and bark. School houses and teachers superceeded the haphazard education which necessarily prevailed in the early days, but lessons of perseverance, ingenuity and bravery were learned which laid the foundation of a great nation. The people as a rule wrote their own wills and the perusal of a large collection of early documents exposes the illiteracy and ignorance which was prevalent at that time. There are many Gilman wills in the Probate Records of New Hampshire, the earliest being those of John and Moses, sons of Edward the Emigrant. Without exception these wills are well written and indicate men of education and of means. The Gilmans acquired large milling interests, both lumber and grist mills which proved to be most profitable. They were also possessed of hundreds of acres of farm lands as well as much property in Exeter.

Mr. Charles Bell in his History of Exeter, refers to the Gilman family thus,— "It is no disparagement to any other family here to say that in numbers and in everything that constitutes respectability, the Gilmans stood at the head."

Shortly after the arrival of the Gilmans there came another important personage, the Rev. Samuel Dudley, son of Gov. Thomas Dudley of Massachusetts who successfully guided the religious life of the town until his death. He had no less than eighteen children by his three wives. Several of them married into the Gilman family and the Christian name of Dudley has always been widely used by them.

When New Hampshire separated from Massachusetts, John Gilman, now referred to as the Hon. John, became Councillor, the Council being the Supreme Judicial body. He was also Speaker of the House of Representatives for many sessions. Moses, youngest of the family, was selectman in Exeter for several years although he preferred business to politics and amassed a considerable fortune.

Both John and Moses built substantial homes for their large families. The dwelling of the Hon. John is said to be the oldest in the State. It is of interesting structure, the upper story projecting a foot or more beyand the lower loop holes and the door had a portcullis that could be instantly dropped. A short portion of the wall is now stripped to show the original square logs. A century later Brigadier Gen. Peter Gilman added a wing to provide a place for entertaining Gov. Wentworth and his staff who were frequent visitors. These rooms were ornamented by panelling and elaborately carved woodwork, a portion of which is now displayed in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. The work was done by Ebenezer Clifford, noted woodcarver and the house is now known as the Gilman-Clifford or Garrison House. The home of Moses was burned by Indians but many of its sturdy timbers, though charred, were used in rebuilding and may still be seen beneath its roof. This task his son completed about 1707 and it has been in the possession of the family for nine generations. The late Mr. Frank Peavy, grandson of Sarah Gilman and Samuel Peavy, spared no expense or pains in restoring the old house and adapting it to modern living without destroying its original lines. It is known as Gilman Terrace and is one of the show places of Exeter.

Before the close of the century the children of the three brothers, Edward, John and Moses were married and had homes of their own. Two sons of Moses, Jeremiah and John, married Mary and Dorothy Wiggin, grand daughters of Gov. Thomas Wiggin on their father's side, their mother being the daughter of Gov. Gov. Bradstreet and the grand daughter of Gov. Thomas Dudley of Massachusetts. John became one of the most prosperous land and mill owners in town, his estate being inventoried at 43,000 pounds.

John and Nicholas, sons of Hon. John, were both men of prominence, the former being an officer in the Indian Wars and Nicholas a Judge of the Superior Court, a man of wealth, leaving an estate valued at 34,000 pounds. His son, the Rev. Nicholas Gilman, when he accepted a pastorate at Durham made out what he called "A carnal scheme" or what he considered a list of the necessities of life which were to be included in his salary as was the custom in those days. The following are but a few items,—

"Pork, 500 fbs. of hogs that weight 150 to 200 fbs.

Beef 600 fbs. upward, that is well fatted.

Sugar ½ a hund., such as may be had for 17.10 pounds per hund.

Apples, such as are good for winter, 20 bushels.

Malt, for beer for a year, 20 bushels.

Cider, 10 barrels.

Rum, ——gals or wine.

Molasses, 10 gals.

Turnips, 5 bushels and 3 of potatoes.

Winter rye, 15 bushels.

Candles, 30 pounds."

He further requests,—"Pasturing 4 cows and a horse, and keeping an horse shod through the year, the pasturing to be good and handy, and the wintering to be on good English hay . . . and keeping summer and winter stranger's horses. Wood, 40 cord, if I should need so much for firewood, to be hauled to my door in 4 ft. length, all to be brought to my house one year after another, without my being put to any trouble or charge for the procuring or purchasing of any of them. In money, an 110 pounds for the first year, and then additions of 10 pounds per year for 4 years and then 150 pounds per year to be payable bills of credit," etc. He cautiously provides that in case the value of money depreciates he shall be paid proportionately more.

There was much intermarrying of cousins, Many present day Gilmans can trace their descent from each of the three sons of Edward the Emigrant, through the numerous intermarriages during this period. The Dudley, Thing and Folsom families were so intermingled with the Gilmans that their pedigrees form a network, the intricacies of which might well puzzle the most experienced genealogist. For instance, the mother of Col. Antipas Gilman was Lydia Gilman Thing, grand-daughter of Hon. John Gilman; his first wife was Joanna, daughter of Capt. John Gilman, his father's cousin. Her mother was Abigail, sister of the above Lydia Gilman Thing. His second wife was a widow of a Gilman whose maiden name was Gilman. Another instance,—four Gilman cousins, John, Antipas, Andrew and Israel, married four Thing sisters. The grand daughters of John and Antipas married the two grand sons of Andrew. Practically every family had a John and an Abigail. This duplication of names has proven confusing to genealogical research.

The glimpse we get of the Gilman women of 250 years ago shows that they lacked none of the courage and spirit of their menfolk. On one occasion the Governor levied a special tax over the head of the General Assembly and sent deputies to Exeter to collect. They called first at the house of Edward Gilman Jr. Two of his aunts were there, the wives of Hon. John and Moses. They warned the officers that they had kettles of boiling water ready for them if they came to demand rates. In fact they were so jostled around by the citizens that they departed in haste. Among the Essex Court files in 1668 it is recorded that complaint was made against Mary Gilman Folsom for snatching an execution out of the hands of the Marshall and tearing it up. The Court found her guilty and ordered her to pay treble damages, but the execution was "respitted." This same Mary Gilman Folsom is the ancestress of our lovely Frances Folsom, who, as the wife of President Cleveland, was mistress of the White House and later became Mrs. Preston of Princeton. She was greatly interested in the Gilmans and the writer prizes a very charming leter from her. She frequently visited New Hampshire where she had a summer home.

Moses Gilman spent his latter days with his son Caleb and passed away in 1702, leaving many valuable bequests in lands and houses to his children. He was a wealthy man for those days. His posterity is known as the Newmarket Branch due to the fact that he located in Newmarket, later a part of Exeter. In a few years the Hon. John died, leaving a large family well equipped to carry on the work of progress which he so ably had begun. His posterity is known as the Hon. John Gilman Branch. The descendants of Edward who was lost at sea are known as the Gilmanton Branch, since his grandson Edward was a pioneer of that town and his family settled there.

During this period the French and Indian Wars came to an end. For many years the colonists had been obliged to fight for their homes. Indians lay in wait for them constantly and men. women and children had been mercilessly slain or carried into captivity. The Gilmans played a prominent part in fighting the savages who were spurred on by the French. Col. Antipas was captured and taken to Canada, later released and returned home. Stephen Gilman was slain and Andrew and Jeremiah, brothers, were captured. Andrew made his escape but his brother was never heard from again. No further development of the country was attempted until the wars came to an end and fear of the Indians was banished.

The Gilman spirit of adventure again manifested itself in the settlement of Gilmanton; but that is another story.

Gov. John Taylor Gilman

CHAPTER V

Revolutionary Days In Exeter.

Many Colonial families had made their home in America for a century past. Their children and grandchildren were born on American soil. They could not feel that strong affection for the mother country their forefathers must have experienced. They had built this new world through peril, toil and hardship and felt a just pride in this accomplishment with a natural desire to have a voice in such important matters as taxation and legislation. Their sense of justice had often been outraged by acts emanating from England and the breach between the two countries was gradually widening. However, the colonists had their own way of dealing with situations which often proved most efficacious.

Many of the Gilmans were largely interested in the lumber industry and the law which reserved all the finest trees for masts for the Royal Navy was a standing grievance to them and to all the colonists. The New Hampshire lumbermen regarded this claim to the most valuable trees on their lands as one which they had a moral right to disregard. A letter was sent to the two Justices of the Peace in Exeter charging that mast trees had been felled by Jeremiah, David, and James Gilman and four other persons and ordering the Justices to execute the law upon them. The Surveyor General got little satisfaction from the Justices and sent ten Deputies from Portland to mark lumber which had been cut from the mast trees. The party duly arrived and spent the evening at the public house of Samuel Gilman in the fashion of the time. In the meanwhile a number of men assembled at another public house, disguised themselves as Indians and sallied forth. They seized upon several of the Surveyor General's Deputies, frightening them thoroughly, scuttling their boat and leaving them to find their way back to Portland as best they could. Still another man was sent to enforce the law but he was told confidentially by Simon Gilman that the people of Exeter had hired three Natituck Indians to kill him and were supplying them each with a quart of rum a day 'that they should not fail in their work.' The Deputy took this confidence in all seriousness and beat a hasty retreat.

When the odious Stamp Act was passed, a Deputy was sent to Exeter to distribute the stamps. By various and sundry inuendo's he was given to understand that his presence was not desired, and, recalling the experiences of other Deputies, he tendered his resignation to take effect immediately and no stamps were ever sold in Exeter. The Stamp Act was repealed but a tax on tea was soon imposed upon them and the town resolved not to use any foreign tea and to endeavor to prevent its use until the tax should be taken off. Samuel and Nicholas Gilman were on a committee to instruct the General Assembly to send a protest to the Crown. When an attempt was made to force the duty laden tea upon the colonists against their will, the people of Boston dumped it into the harbor. Every school boy knows about the 'Boston Tea Party.' To punish the Bostonians the British closed the port to all commerce but supplies were poured in from all parts of the colonies and people determined to do without imported goods. The common resistance found expression in assemblies and conventions and finally in the first Colonial Congress which bound the colonists in a far reaching boycott of English trade. Theophilus and Samuel Gilman were on the committee to select delegates for this Congress.

The spirit of revolution was in the air long before it was openly voiced. One winter night in 1774, just before Christmas, Col. Nicholas Gilman, Gen. Folsom and Dr. John Giddings with about seventy-five armed men made the trip to Portsmouth and, with the aid of some of its principal citizens, stripped Fort William and Mary of cannon, small arms and gunpowder. It is said that these supplies were stored in various places in Exeter and neighboring towns, even under the pulpit of a meeting house in Durham. Events now came thick and fast. On the evening of April 19, word came that the British had marched from Boston. About daybreak an express came, summoning volunteers to march for Cambridge. Bells rang and drums beat to arms. In the absence of their leaders, Nicholas Gilman and Nathaniel Folsom, younger men organized a company. Sgt. John Taylor Gilman, the future Governor, was most active in this task and John Ward Gilman was Lieutenant of the Company. Some cast bullets, others made cartridges. Twenty-five of their muskets were from the stock given the Exeter Cadets by Gov. Wentworth who little dreamed that he was furnishing arms that would once be used against the mother country. The Company reached Cambridge the second day and were assigned to the Harvard College quarters for about a week. The emergency having passed, some returned home and others joined permanent military organizations.

Hostilities had been waged between Great Britain and her colonies for over a year before the great crisis came. The Continuetal Congress was in session and delegates had their instruction to declare the thirteen colonies free and independent states. All was suspense in Exeter.

On the 18th day of July, 1776, a currier rode into the town bearing that world famous document, the Declaration of Independence, proclaimed two weeks previously in Philadelphia by the Continental Congress. No faster means of communication was known at that time.

The news spread like wild fire and before long the entire village was as sembled at the Court House. For the reading of this immortal document to the people, John Taylor Gilman, a youth of twenty-two, was chosen. His resonant voice faltered but once when a rush of emotion became too great, and for a moment he paused to regain control of himself. This young man was later to become a member of the Continental Congress and Governor of New Hampshire for fourteen years. His younger brother Nicholas entered the war when he was twenty-one and rose to the rank of Captain. He was a member of Washinggton's military family for a time. At the close of the war he was New Hampshire's representative to the convention in Philadelphia which framed the Constitution of the United States. His signing of that document secured its ratification. He was a member of Congress until his death. Nicholas Gilman, father of these two young patriots, served his country as Treasurer of the State of New Hampshire during the entire war. It was said that he furnished the brains of the Revolution in New Hampshire. It seems unfortunate that neither of these two sons left a male heir. Nicholas never married and John's only son died unmarried when a young man. It was for their brother Nathaniel to carry on the name. Although too young to enter the Revoltuion he was later very prominent in New Hampshire affairs.

Exeter had never willingly bowed to Royal commands and this little village harbored more activity in the struggle for liberty than any other town in the state. Brigadier General Peter Gilman, Speaker of the Assembly for 12 years and later a member of the Governor's Council and perhaps the foremost citizen of the town, had received numerous honors from the Royal Governor and had many times taken the oath of allegiance to the Crown. Now, in his old age, he remained loyal to the mother country and the Committee for Safety was compelled to request him not to leave Exeter without permission. However, he retained the respect and confidence of his townsmen throughout the war in which he took no part.

It would be unwise to attempt to follow the Gilman family through every phase of the Revolution. They were in the fighting line both as officers and as privates and as statesmen at home planning the conduct of the colonies and financing the war from the state's meagre resources. Revolutionary records bear the names of over fifty New Hampshire officers and men from the Gilman families. Practically all of the officers had formerly been with Rogers Rangers. General Stark himself had been next in command to Rogers in the French and Indian War. Trained in such a school, familiar with Indian tactics, and inured to hardship, their method of warfare often baffled the British. A handful of such men, burning with patriotism and employing the cunning of the redmen, could cope with twice their number without betraying the fact that they were poorly armed, ill fed and few in numbers. There were Gilmans among these men too.

Israel Gilman had three sons who were Colonels in the Revolution. Col. David, a very tall, dignified man of superior intellect, held a Colonel's commission in seven different states, being one of the most reliable officers on Gen. Washington's staff. After a long campaign he was seriously injured in executing a dangerous mission and forced to tender his resignation. Washington presented him with his own sword as a token of esteem for "A soldier, a man, and a gentleman." Col. Gilman was present at Major Andre's execution.

The years 1779 and 1780 were known as the dark days. Everything looked discouraging. A convention was called to meet at Hartford, Conn. John Taylor Gilman was the sole delegate from New Hampshire. He made the journey on horseback and was gone six weeks. There was not enough money in the treasury at this time to pay his expenses.

Victory finally came with its terrible aftermath of debt and reconstruction but it brought too, a surge of confidence and the determination to build a republic upon the firm foundation already laid by the colonists. In this the Gilmans took a leading role. Col. Nicholas having died at the close of the war, his son John Taylor Gilman was chosen for his father's office as Treasurer of the State. In this position he continued until he was appointed one of the three commissioners to settle the accounts of the several states. He was then elected Governor, serving for eleven years and later for a period of three years, making fourteen years in all. His brother Nicholas, after signing the Constitution served as U.S. Senator until his death. Many Gilmans represented their districts in the State Legislature while others went about the important work of rebuilding the business life of their community.

Phillips-Exeter Academy

From a hotbed of revolutionary activity Exeter was transformed into a charming colonial town, with peaceful elm shaded streets, dignified white homes and the impressive campus of Phillips Exeter Academy which was formally opened in 1783. John Phillips, a Harvard graduate, was its founder. He came to Exeter first as a teacher but soon engaged in business in which he became wealthy, his marriage to the wealthy widow of Nathaniel Gilman augmenting his own fortune. He contributed to the funds of Dartmouth and assisted his brother Samuel in founding the Phillips Academy at Andover but his greatest interest was in the Exeter Academy. The beautiful site upon which the buildings now stand, a tract of about two and a half acres, was the gift of John Taylor Gilman. His brother Nicholas bequeathed $1,000 for the promotion of sacred music. It has educated many men of note and the sons of three presidents, Robert Lincoln, Ulysses Grant, Jr., and Francis Cleveland.

The Gilman fâmily has contributed in a large way to the colonial architecture which has endured to the present day. We have already described the historic Gilman-Clifford House, known as the Garrison House, and the Moses Gilman home of Mr. Frank Peavey, Gilman Terrace. The Nathaniel Gilman house has been restored by its present owner, the Academy. The home of Molly Gilman and Major Jonathan Cass, parents of Gov. Lewis Cass., Secretary of War, built in 1740, is still kept in repair by Mrs. Templeton, whose late husband was a descendant of Molly Gilman. The Gilman-Ladd house built in 1721 was probably first the home of Nathaniel Ladd, Jr., son of Elizabeth Gilman and Nathaniel Ladd. His wife was said to be Catherine Gilman, daughter of Edward Gilman and Abigail Maverick. It was bought from the Ladds long before the Revolution and Nicholas Gilman, State Treasurer, made it his headquarters as well as his home during the war. Daniel Webster frequently visited him there and it was to this house the Declaration of Independence was rushed. Later Gov. John Taylor Gilman inherited the house, a large rambling structure now owned by the New Hamshire Society of Cincinnati and is a remarkably fine memorial of Revolutionary days with many rooms restored to their original state and others filled with historic relics of Colonial times. It is open to the public at certain times and its invaluable contents are carefully guarded. A fine portrait of Senator Nicholas Gilman, many pieces of old family furniture and other Gilman relics have been retained in the house.

I know of no more fitting way to close this chapter on the Gilman family in Exeter than to recount the last evening Gov .John Taylor Gilman spent with those he loved. "According to tradition, on the night before his death, he was brought down stairs by his negro servant to enjoy for the last time the company of his family. Realizing that his time was nearly spent, he gave full instructions about his burial and the manner in which he wished to be remembered insisting that his family should not wear mourning for him. 'Spend upon the living, not the dead,' he said. A few minutes later, feeling very tired, he left the room remarking, 'I have no disposition to leave this precious circle; I love to be here, surrounded by my family and my friends.' Then he gave them all his blessing and said, 'I am ready to go and wish you all goodnight'."

Che Old Tavern Gilmanton, N.H.

CHAPTER VI

Gilmanton, Today and Yesterday.

Nestled in the hills of the Suncook Range with placid ponds and meadow brooks near by and the great Winnipisaukee a few miles distant, lies the quaint and romantic little village of Gilmanton, unspoiled and still fragrant of another day. Its farms and pastures reach to the summit of its slopes. From Peaked Hill the State House over in Concord may be seen, but in the village itself one views only lovely, peaceful pictures of lofty elms, quiet streets and old New England homes. No factories, no garish business blocks, no railways mar its tranquillity. Old families remain and new ones, reverencing the past, have restored and retained all the old time atmosphere possible. They love the rare old colonial town, so reminiscent of bygone days, and have preserved its antiquity with loving care.

The old Tavern, with its twenty-one rooms, was once a stopping place for weary travellers who might refresh themselves with a mug of hot toddy, a glass of ale or, mayhap, with just a draught of nippy New England cider. There were eds for those who would stay the night and stables for their tired horses. Directly over the kitchen was the old ball room. One can picture this in the years folowing the Revolution, as the scene of old time quadrilles and minuets, the maids and young matrons in picturesque colonial costume and their partners no less attractive in the dress of the day. Not long ago a group of Gilmanton residents purchased this fine old landmark and the "Gilmanton Old Tavern Association" was formed to aid in the work of its restoration. At one time a book and antique shop occupied the lower floor, and recently a school of weaving has been inaugurated. It is hoped that the Tavern may become a community center for future generations. The old church has been restored with dignity and the new library is a little gem of simplicity in its setting of the old village. It is a favorite vacation spot for artists and writers who work undisturbed through the long summer hours in this lovely nook. Many of the large colonial homes are veritable museums in themselves. The mellow luster of antique furniture, the colorful braided rugs on the wide board floors, polished to a satiny smoothness, the gleam of brass andirons in huge old fireplaces, reminiscent of savory pots of stew hanging on the crane, all take us back to days long gone. Up in the attic, no doubt, are leather covered trunks, bulging with heirlooms, gowns our great, great grandmothers wore, full skirted and gathered into a tiny waist line, a pumpkin bonnet perhaps and even great, great grandfather's tall best beaver hat. There would be letters 'tied with ribbons blue,' some faded flowers, a golden curl carefully laid away. How many tales are interwoven in these old relics! Old Gilmanton homes are like this.

The Gilmanton of pre-Revolution days was a far different picture—a few straggling log cabins in the wilderness, connected with the outer world by a narrow winding trail, hazardous in winter and difficult in summer. Its charter was granted by King George as compensation for services rendered in defence of the country, to twenty-four persons by the name of Gilman and to one hundred and fifty-three others, which accounts for the name. The Charter specified that the Proprietors should build seventy homes and settle a family in each within three years unless war with the Indians should occur. The Crown also reserved the right to all of the 'Mast trees' for His Majesty's Navy. The list of Proprietors included the following Gilmans,—Nicholas Sr., Nicholas Jr., Nicholas 3rd, John Sr., John Jr., John 3rd, Captain John, Jonathan, Peter, Andrew, Daniel, Thomas, Joseph, Trueworthy, Jeremiah, Caleb, Robert and Nehemiah. Among this group were one Judge, one Major, two Colonels, one Captain, one Lieutenant, two Doctors and one Reverend.

Although the Charter was drawn in 1727, it was nearly forty years before settlement actually began. Indians were constantly on the rampage and the Proprietors did not dare expose their families to such frightful risks. They held town meetings in Exeter and did much planning. Many forfeited their shares by nonpayment of assessments, and others sold to more optimistic spirits. At last the long struggle was at an end. The French surrendered and the Indians were subdued and driven back into the wilderness and the Proprietors of Gilmanton once more turned their attention to its settlement. In 1761 a block house eighteen feet square was built for shelter and the rock which served for a fireplace is still to be seen. The iron work for a saw mill was carried in by horseback, requiring many tedious trips. A gristmill was necessary for grinding corn and grain and this also was brought in on horseback. The mill stones were not such an easy matter. They were taken on wheels as far as the cart path went from Exeter and thence by sled in winter to the mill brook. This mill was sold in 1770 to Edward Gilman, Jr.

Mrs. Benjamin Mudgett was the first white woman to set foot in Gilmanton. The day after Christmas, 1761, when near the end of their journey of twelve miles on foot, she sank down on the snow and said "I may as well die here as anywhere; if I attempt to go further it will kill me, and if I stay here I shall but die." She did go on and lived to be a very useful citizen. The snow was so deep that winter that an ox, plunging into a hollow, could not be extricated and lived there the remainder of the winter, his owner carrying fodder to him every day. The spot retained the name of "Ox Pit" for many years. Captain Summersbee Gilman and his family were the first to pass with wheels over the new road from the town to the grist mill and, going up Carret's Hill, the cart upset and all the crockery brought from Exeter with so much care was broken. Capt. Gilman had previously raised a house when, there not being enough men, the women stood at the foot of the posts to guide them to their places in the sill. Antipas Gilman and many other proprietors prepared a home before bringing their families. The first town meeting was held in 1766 at Samuel Gilman's home. He had arrived in 1762, being the fifth to reach Gilmanton. The town grew rapidly as roads were improved and schools and churches were organized.

Then came the Revolution. There were exciting times even in this little village. Deputies were sent to three different conventions in Exeter. Col. Antipas Gilman represented the town at the third meeting at which very drastic measures were adopted. Twelve men enlisted immediately and later thirty-five joined Stark's Brigade, occupying the right wing in the Battle of Bennington which led to the surrender of Burgoyne's Army. Of these men there were three Gilmans—Sgt. Peter, Corporal Dudley and Private Edward. Many of the officers and some of the men in that battle formerly belonged to Rogers Rangers, famous in the French and Indian Wars. Although they had once made powerful allies for the British, they were now terrible foes. The New Hampshire troops led on by the spirit of the Rangers, never faltered in the privations of the camp or the dangers of the battle field, nor would they lay down their arms until independence was gained.

It seems that the profiteer was abroad in the land then, as now, since the Gilmanton town meeting chose a committee to 'fix the price of things.' Then, as now, 'a tax was raised to hire soldiers.' A committee was also appointed to see that the families of non-commissioned officers and soldiers, absent in the Army, were supplied with the necessities of life. In the more severe campaigns they voted the soldiers more pay. So rapid was the depreciation of paper money that the Continental War Tax caused great financial distress both in the Army and at home. Four months pay of a soldier would not buy his family a bushel of wheat and the pay of a Colonel would not buy oats for his horse. However, they submitted to the distress and privation without a murmur, buoyed up by the hope of independence.

The war over, Gilmanton turned its attention to home affairs. Reports of the annual town meetings, serious enough at the time, invoke a smile now. On one occasion it was voted to accept the report of Col. Ezekiel Smith on town business attended to and "to pay his attendance and eight bowls of toddy." In March, 1789, it was voted to repair the bridge over Suncook River, and Ezekiel Hoyt was authorized to "Buy rum for Suncook repairs." At the next annual meeting it was agreed that "The Selectmen procure a barrel of rum to continue the repairing said bridge." However necessary the Selectmen may have considered rum in bridge repairs they evidently felt it out of place at public meetings, as they decreed that "No person may, on any public meeting day or any court day, sell any spiritous liquors within fifty rods of the place where such meeting may be held, on penalty of twenty shillings for every such offence." In 1815 the following rule was adopted, "It shall be the duty of the Selectmen or Overseers of the poor to put up at auction that part of the town paupers who bring themselves or their families to want by intemperance or other vices . . . and such others of the paupers as they think proper, providing that no person shall bid on the keeping of such paupers unless he is able to provide for them comfortably during the year he is paid for keeping them." One or more sets of stocks were to be erected at the House of Correction (the jail) and "All persons who neglect their lawful employment and misspend their time and earning at the taverns and grog shops shall be sent there and detained according to the rules of said house."

Gilmanton Academy, which had long been the dream of its residents, began to materialize. Wishing to insure for their children education in the higher branches, the citizens bent every effort to promote this project. Some assistance was obtained from outside, and, in 1795, the Academy was erected. Col. Antipas Gilman, now in his later years, was most active in its establishment. After thirteen years of successful operation it burned to the ground. Nothing daunted, the residents again raised subscriptions and, in just a month's time, the framework of the new building was erected. Many a successful Gilman acquired all of his advanced education in that honored institution. The men and women who learned to conjugate verbs, parse and diagram sentences in the good old way and who spent long hours over the spelling book in Gilmanton Academy, spoke and wrote the English language far better than the average college graduate of today.

The wilderness, like the Indians, ceased to be a menace; the little village gently merged into the country, where farm houses with fine long lines dotted the winding roads, their friendly lights a welcome to wayfarers in the night. Meeting houses and schools were made comfortable and well equipped and Gilmanton folk busied themselves on their farms and in their simple village industries. The men who had served so faithfully and well during the Revolution now interested themselves in the administration of the new government. The joy of independence pervaded the air for many a year.

The Gilman family, for generations a leading element in the life of Gilmanton, with its characteristic spirit of progress and enterprise, gradually left this peaceful spot to pioneer in the new West or to seek broader fields of opportunity in the great cities of the country.

For forty-five years the "Gilmanton Old Home Day Association" has issued invitations each summer to its wandering children to return and celebrate with those who have remained in the peace and enjoyment of that lovely old town. They welcome anyone whose forefathers may have been a part of Gilmanton life in the days when to live meant to work, and when the common welfare was each man's goal.

"Landmarks."

The Revolution was followed by a long period of widespread migration among the Gilman family, when this sturdy English stock filtered through the entire nation, leaving its imprint upon the political, educational, economic and artistic life of the country. It has been mpossible to follow all of these family trails. Some of them have been lost in the march of time and the immensity of the land, but others have left enduring landmarks.

Pioneering still had its appeal to those who had benefitted by the hardships of their forefathers. They were now in comparative comfort, but new pastures beckoned alluringly, and thus it was that many Gilmans crossed over into neighboring states. Portland, Maine, was then a thriving city, and it was near there, in the town of Yarmouth, that the Rev. Tristram Gilman built his home in 1771, still known in Portland as the 'Gilman Manse.' On a hill behind the house is "The Ledge" on which a watch used to be kept while the Rev. Tristram preached. The Manse passed out of the family after his death but was bought by his grandson Joseph E. Gilman in 1881 and appropriately furnished with antiques. It is one of the show places of Yarmouth of today.

After the Revolution the region around Mr. Vernon and Hallowell, Maine, was settled by Gilmans from New Hampshire. Nathaniel and his wife, Sarah Branscombe, chose Waterville for their home and raised a very prosperous family there. Their son Nathaniel became a millionaire and his sons were very wealthy in their own right. The Saturday Evening Post once published an article about George Gilman, one of these sons, the founder of the A. and P. Tea Co., and his country home "Black Rock" near Hartford, Conn. Another son, Frazier, carried on various business projects in three states—of him later.

Ephraim Gilman

Ann Crawford

Eliphalet Gilman went from Gilmanton to Hallowell in 1785. His son Ephraim located in Alexandria, Va., before the turn of the century and made a fortune with his merchant ships. He married the lovely English Anne Crawford. A descendant, William Douglass Gilman, a prominent manufacturer of Chattanooga, Tenn., is the possessor of two exquisite portraits of Anne and Ephraim Gilman which have recently been restored by a New York artist. Ephraim's nephew, John Stratton Gilman, located in Baltimore where he engaged in the steel business and the iron clad Monitor which sank the Merrimac in the Civil War was a product of the Gilman-Abbott mills. Mrs. D'Arcy Paul and her son Gilman D'Arcy Paul of Baltimore are of this family.

Perhaps the most venturesome journey of all was undertaken in 1788 by Joseph Gilman, Chairman of the Committee of Safety during the Revolution and member of the Governor's Council. He had invested in lands near Marietta, Ohio, and decided to establish a home there. The country was then a wilderness, hundreds of miles from civilization and infested with Indians. With his wife he made the perilous journey and soon became a leader in this land of promise. He later was appointed Judge for the Northwest Territory. His son, Benjamin Ives Gilman, went back to England and returned with his bride to Marietta, Ohio, where they raised a large family, two of whom became outstanding men of their day. Dr. Chandler Robbins Gilman was one of New York's most prominent physicians in the early part of the past century, being Professor of Obstetrics and Medical Jurisprudence in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons. His brother, Winthrop Sargent Gilman, was widely known for the part he played in the famous Lovejoy tragedy which took place in Alton, Ill., about ten years before the Civil War, when feeling ran high on the subject of slavery. The Rev. Lovejoy had been advocating emancipation in his newspaper. His printing press had been destroyed but a new one had been procured by friends and Mr. Gilman allowed it to be stored in his warehouse. When an enraged mob attempted to destroy this one also, a number citizens gathered in the warehouse to protect it, among them Mr. Gilman. On this memorable night the mob fired the building, destroyed the press and killed Rev. Lovejoy practically in the arms of Mr. Gilman. His warehouse ruined and his business wrecked, he moved his shipping interests to St. Louis where he was most successful. He returned to New York before the war broke out, and engaged in the banking business.

A few years after Joseph Gilman had broken the trail to Marietta, Molly Gilman, the daughter of Theophilus Gilman of Exeter, married Capt. Jonathan Cass and they, too, migrated to Marietta where their son, the famous Gen. Lewis Cass, spent his youth, later to become U.S. Senator, U.S. Ambassador to France, and U.S. Secretary of War.

Another clergyman, Rev. Samuel Gilman, graduated from Harvard in 1811 and two years later became pastor of the Unitarian Church at Charleston, S.C., where he remained until his retirement. He was an author of prominence, many of his religious poems being used in our hymnals of today. His ode, "Fair Harvard," written for the 200th anniversary of the college, is still sung at all Harvard festivals and his "Ode to Freedom" was widely circulated by the N.Y. Tribune during the Civil War.

The War of 1812 had little effect upon the movements of the family. New Englanders were not in sympathy with the party which was responsible for this conflict and few volunteered. However, the State Militia was ordered out with Capt. Nathaniel Gilman at the head of one of the Exeter Companies which included several Gilmans The campaign was a bloodless one as far as they were concerned.

Going back to New Hampshire, we find other Gilmans moving into Vermont and Canada. In 1939 the picturesque Gilman-Knight farm house at Stanstead, P.Q., Canada, was the scene of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the old homestead. The figure of that valiant gentleman, Capt. John Gilman, its founder, is the outstanding character in the annals of that family. His descendant, Mr.

Frank Hawes of Summerville, Mass., published a most interesting brochure "The Gilman-Knight Farm" in honor of that occasion which contains much family history. Another of his posterity, Charles Gilman Fairman, has writen a short history, going back to an earlier Capt. John Gilman, son of Moses the 1st. It is on file in the Newberry Library in Chicago, entitled "Captain John Gilman."

Gov. John Taylor Gilman had one son who had died unmarried. One of his daughters married the Rev. Ichabod Nichols of Portland, Maine. Over a hundred years later her grandson, Dr. John Taylor Gilman Nichols of Boston, married Helen Gilman, grand daughter of Nathaniel Gilman, who was a brother of Gov. John Taylor Gilman; thus were the two families again united. This family is represented today by John Taylor Gilman Nichols, a prominent buisness man of Boston, whose son, Lieut. Com. John Taylor Gilman Nichols, Jr., took an active part in World War II.

"Gilman Mansion," Brunswick, Me.

About ten years before the Civil War, Charles Jervis Gilman moved from Exeter to Brunswick, Maine. He became a U.S. Senator and was one of the delegates who nominated Abraham Lincoln for President. His beautiful colonial residence, built in 1779 by Mrs. Gilman's grandfather, Capt. John Dunlap and inherited by her, is one of the show places of the the state. Its twenty-four rooms are furnished with rare pieces of antique furniture, valuable portraits, the cradle in which Gov. Dunlap's children were rocked exquisite bric-a-brac a collection of pewter, crystal chandeliers and gold embossed wall paper from France, and, among other historic relics, a certificate to Nicholas Gilman signed by two presidents, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison. The staircase curves from the first floor to the garret in a graceful unbroken spiral with a wonderfully artistic effect. To wander through its rooms, to which the personality of past presidents clings in some subtle fashion, is like geting a glimpse into the past. The mansion is surrounded by stately elms and lovely formal garden's and an old sun dial standing sentinel over all, once owned by Gov. Dunlap's brother who was Mrs. Gilman's father. A long view of the river adds to the charm of the historic place. Its gracious hostess is the widow of Mr. Gilman's son, Charles Ashburton Gilman.

In this period we read of Arthur Gilman, the architect, who made a reputation in Boston and New York as the designer of the Boston City Hall and Eastern Railway Station, the State Capitol Building at Albany, and many important buildings in New York City.

This country, which was developing so rapidly and apparently growing in strength and prosperity, fostered a terrible cancer at its very heart. This people which had fought for its own freedom from tyranny, had, for a long time tolerated the institution of slavery. The Proclamation of Emancipation by Abraham Lincoln, in whose veins flowed Gilman blood, brought on the war. The Gilman family has cause to be proud of its sons in this conflict as in previous ones. Each man's record will speak for itself. Perhaps one veteran deserves special mention not only because of his war record but on account of his longevity. Dr. Zeeb Gilman, born in 1841, was a medical student at Dartmouth when the war began and left college to enlist in the Cavalry. He later received his medical degree from Dartmouth and also from the N.Y. College of Physicians and Surgeons. He recently died at Redlands, Calif., at the ripe old age of one hundred and five years, the oldest Dartmouth graduate and the oldest Civil War survivor.

The period between the fight for the preservation of the Union and the early years of the new century was marked by the career of Daniel Colt Gilman, perhaps the most famous member of the family since Gov. John Taylor Gilman and his brother Senator Nicholas. He resigned the Presidency of the U. of California to become the first President of Johns Hopkins University which he organized on entirely original lines, obtaining the most advanced scholars from abroad for post graduate teaching. Its scientific curriculum attracted serious students and it became, in many respects, our foremost seat of learning and research. His daughter Elizabeth Gilman inherited her father's brilliant intellect and independence of thought. She has been in the public eye for many years as a social and political reformer.

Other venturesome young men had gone to Wisconsin and Minnesota before the war, one of whom was the Hon. Charles A. Gilman of Gilmanton, N.H., who identified himself with the development of Minnesota, known as Governor Gilman. He built lumber mills, made roads, assisted in promoting the Great Northern Railway and was a factor in opening up the vast resources of Northwest Minnesota. He was Lieut. Governor and Speaker of the House for many years. His portrait hangs over the great fireplace in the handsome retiring room of the State Capitol at St. Paul. He built a very fine residence at St. Cloud on the banks of the Mississippi River shortly after the war. In later years he gave a portion of the grounds to the city of St. Cloud to be named Hester Park in honor of his wife. A small town grew up near his mill site and he named it Gilmanton in memory of his New England home.

In the neighboring state of South Dakota the colorful figure of Frazier Gilman of Maine stands out in the history of its pioneer days. With little or no experience he established a large cattle ranch in he S.E. corner of the state and erected a great rambling farm house the materials being hauled by ox team from Lemars, Iowa, 50 miles away. The cattle business flourished and the farm became one of his favorite homes. Today it is the property of his son John's widow, Mrs. Isabell Gilman.

Among the Gilman adventurers who went to the Pacific coast were two cousins, from Meredith, N.H. James Marshall went by way of the Isthmus of Panama in 1863 and bought the "Noble" ranch near Banning, Calif., which to this day is is one of the land marks of the country.

John Woodbury Gilman made a fortune and a name for himself at Heppner, Oregon, in the early 70's, dealing in vast tracts of land and developing the cattle and lumber industries. His son operates a large ranch in the same region.

As for the children of Winthrop Gilman, they were a brilliant family. His son Arthur was engaged in banking in New York City previous to the Civil War when he was forced to retire, due to ill health. He named his country home in Lee, Mass., "Glynlynn" after the stronghold of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu. Continuing his work of compiling the Gilman Genealogy, previously begun in New York, he visited Norfolk, England, where he received every courtesy and assistance from our English "Cousins." His Genealogy was published in 1869 and has been a great source of satisfaction to the family. His greatest claim to prominence came from his work in the founding of Radcliffe College at Cambridge, Mass., where he spent his later years with his second wife, Stella Scott, an authoress whose nom & plume was Marian Vaughn. His only living child, Miss Dorothea Gilman, still resides in Cambridge. His sister, Mrs. Emily Gilman Noyes, also a student of family history, published "Letters and Documents of the Gilman Family" which conveys a vivid picture of the stirring days of her grand parents. Mr. C. P. Noyes, her husband, edited a very elegant volume, "The Gilman-Noyes Ancestry." Benjamin Ives Gilman, a brother, was nationally prominent as a lecturer and an author upon various art subjects. The family continues to the present day as one of great culture.

The lovely old tales of New England, written by Sarah Orne Jewett are still upon our library shelves. They were extremely popular in their day and her name as an authoress will long endure. Sarah was the grand daughter of Nathaniel Gilman, brother of Gov. John Taylor Gilman and Senator Nicholas.

A yearly publication "Who's Who" was instituted during this period and has since circulated throughout the country in educational, business and public institutions as a reference book. It briefly states the parentage affiliations and achievements of men and women who have won national recognition in various fields of endeavor. From its first inception this catalogue of famous persons has recorded the name of some descendant of the Exeter Gilmans, often several, upon its pages.

Toward the close of the nineteenth century one of the Norfolk Gilmans, Sir Charles Wrackham Gilman, of Norwich, England, was knighted by King George VI for outstanding service to his community. This event was noted in "Who's Who." Thus ended a century which sealed the unity of a great nation. The Gilman family played its part in the national drama with distinction both in peace and in war.

CHAPTER VIII

"Family Album."

The 20th Century unfolded itself in a surge of great achievement. Again our family keeps, step with the progressive march of science, art and letters. Business itself has become a science, and executives of today must be men of keen mentality and experience, equipped to meet the most competition and with a vision of the future to guide their policies. We have such men. Women of today do not hesitate to enter the professions and ask to be judged only upon their merits. We have several outstanding personalities among our Gilman women.

In recent years numerous members of the Hebrew race have come to us from European countries. In some instances their names have somewhat resembled our own. With characteristic shrewdness, the Hebrew earmark has been altered or discarded entirely and the erstwhile Jewish emigrant now thrives under the old honored and borrowed English name of Gilman. To make the transformation complete, his offspring is given a popular Gilman Christian name. Other families have experienced the same compliment. This is a free country and names are not copyrighted, so our disapproval makes little difference. Some of these individuals have proven to be fine citizens and their achievements have won national recognition. Possibly only a Genealogist would take exception to loaning his good name.

The present generation has made wonderful progress in the field of science. Among the most dinstinguished of the scientists is Prof. Albert Franklin Gilman, author of many treatises on Chemistry and instructor on this subject in several of our colleges. He has been mentioned in "Who's Who" for many years until his recent retirement. Prof. Gilman has written his own family history, replete with family incidents, excerpts from old letters and documents all combined with the skill of a Genealogist and the talent of an author. In a brochure "Captain Nicholas Gilman" he has published the biography of Senator Nicholas Gilman, signer of the Constitution. His son, Albert Franklin Gilman, Jr., is also a Chemist and the author of many scientific works among them "A Dictionary of Chemical Equations" which is widely used. His biography is in "North American Authors."

Another man of science in the field of Botanical research, recognized in "Who's Who," is Prof. Joseph Charles Gilman, son of Rev. James Ward Gilman. He is Professor of Botany at Iowa State University, Iowa.

Prof. Lauren C. Gilman, Ph.D. in Biology from Johns Hopkins, is one of the younger men of Science but has already been mentioned in "American Men of Science." Several of his articles have been published in the Biological Bulletin. He is Associate Professor of Zoology in the University of Florida at Miami.

A noble portrait of Gilman character is the life story of Robbins Gilman, Resident Director of the Settlement House in Minneapolis, Minn. He relinquished a career of great promise in the banking business to work among the underprivileged and he has become a national leader in the work of extending friendship and guidance to foreigners recently come to this, their adopted country.

The first half of the present century has been blotted with the stain on civilization of two world wars. In this simple family story there is no room for the discussion of these international tragedies. In the Genealogical pages of this volume you will read of many of our young Gilmans taking part in these two conflicts. From the lowest ranking private to the highest officer each of them is a hero and may all honor be given them.

The family may well be proud of Bishop Alfred Alonzo Gilman of the Episcopal Church, also honored in "Who's Who." Some years ago he went to China as head of the University at Hankow. When war drove scores back to America, he refused to leave his post and continued to hold his trust throughout the conflict. His daughter, Doctor Louise Gilman Hutchins, graduated from Harvard Medical College, took her interneship in China and later married Dr. Francis S. Hutshins, President of Berea College and brother of Dr. Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago. Berea is a college for underprivileged students from eight states and operates most successfully under a cooperative system. Dr. Louise holds the posion of Diplomate to the National Board of Medical Examiners.

Up on Lake Winnipisaukee, in the heart of New Hampshire, Bradbury Gilman purchased, in 1778, a homestead at Meredith and his descendants have kept it in the family to the present day. It is the summer home of Dr. Florence Gilman, resident physician and Professor of Hygiene at Smith College until her retirement in 1944. Dr. Gilman spends much of her time on the old homestead, one of the beauty spots of the lake, Her cousin, Coburn Gilman, of New York City, is Editor of Travel Magazine, and has edited several other publications.

Lawrence Gilman, nephew of Daniel Coit Gilman, became a very noted person in the field of music. As Musical Critic on the New York Times and as a magazine writer on musical subjects he was unsurpassed. He was particularly well known as an analyst of Wagnerian music. His recent death was mourned by the musical world.

As an eminent architect, Roger Gilman of Boston is honored in "Who's Who." A student in Paris at the Beaux Arts in his younger days, he was later awarded the French Medaille de Reconnaisance. His daughter, Barbara, is a writer of short stories and has recently published a novel, "Pilgrim Image," considered a pronounced success.

A family which has added to the prestige of the Gilman name has been chronicled by the late Rev. Samuel Clark Gilman of California. The story culminates in California where two members of the family have become nationally known. Don Earl Gilman, Vice-President of the American Broadcasting Company, resigned in 1944 to accept the Vice-Presidency of the Western Oil and Gas Association at Los Angeles. He has lectured and spoken on business methods and radio for many years. His son, Page Gilman, is well known as a radio actor, having been associated with the character of Jack in "One Man's Family" since its inception.

Among today's outstanding men in the business world are Col. John Alfred Gilman, retired Army Engineer, William C. Gilman, Engineer of New York City, Russell Taylor Gilman, mechanical engineer and manufacturer of Janesville, Wis., William Douglass Gilman, manufacturer of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Julian S. Gilman, executive, of St. Paul, Minn.

The literary strain which has been manifest throughout the Gilman family in every generation has found a voice in the poems of Ralph Gilman and his sister Elizabeth Barnes. They have been widely published and the following verse by Mrs. Barnes is typical of her beauty of thought.

No Need Have I.

No need of minted gold have I, whose eyes Have seen the glory of the sun-swept hills, Have caught the silver flash of rushing rills, The glint of greening fields and opal skies; Whose ears have heard the melodies that rise From winds and stormy tides—the liquid trills Of wild bird notes—the beat of rain that spills In cadences where muted music lies.

My soul has felt the rapture of the dawn,
The hush of night when wheeling stars swing low;
Has seen the seasons roll in swift design,
Sensed God in bird and tree, or riding on
The gale; has walked with Him in sunset's glow,
And needs no coin, when this rare wealth is mine.
From Kansas City Poetry Magazine.

"Family Album" has called attention to members of the family who have attained national recognition. There are innumerable others who have been outstanding in community life. It brings a thrill of pride to know that these men and women have carried the traditional Gilman honor and worth down through the ages. Each of us must feel the impetus to uphold the standard set for us back in the days of Cilmin-Troed-Dhu. This little "Story of the Gilmans" is a continued one; some day another author may add other chapters and it remains for the Gilman family to furnish him material worthy of his efforts.

THE LINCOLN-GILMAN ANCESTRY

By Clarence A. Torrey

In 1909 the Houghton-Mifflin Company published "The Ancestry of Abraham Lincoln," by Lee and Hutchinson, who presented evidence that Samuel Lincoln of Hingham, Mass., was a son of Edward Lincoln of Hingham, England. In spite of their best efforts, they were unable to find any information concerning Edward's wife. Their search for the baptismal record of Thomas, Edward's son, was also unsuccessful. The late Col. Charles E. Banks, in his article "The Emigrant Ancestor and Ancestress of Abraham Lincoln" (N.Y. Gen. and Biographical Record, Vol. 60, pp. 115-117) made very important additions to the records published by Messrs. Lea and Hutchinson. While in England Col. Banks found evidence that Edward Lincoln's wife was named Bridget and that their son Thomas was baptized Nov. 27, 1601. The purpose of this paper is to supply Bridget's family name and Nov. 27, 1601. The purpose of this paper is to supply Bridget's family name and to mention some of her relatives.

Strange as it may seem the records which identify Bridget are here in New England. In the N.E. Hist. and Gen. Register, Vol. 15, pp. 25-21, is a copy of a record of persons who came from Hingham, England, and towns adjacent. On page 25 is the following: "1633. Also Nicholas Jacob and his wife and their two children, and their cozen Thomas Lincoln, weaver, came from old Hingham, and settled in this Hingham." This proves that Thomas Lincoln was single in 1633 and that he was related to Nicholas Jacob or to his wife, being called "cozen" or as we would say, "nephew." In the Am. Genealogist, Vol. 11, p. 138, evidence was offered that Mary, wife of Nicholas Jacob, was a sister of Edward Gilman, from Hingham, England, an early settler at Hingham, Mass. Thomas Lincoln who came to New England with Nicholas Jacob and his wife, received grants of several tracts in Hingham, Mass. He gave one of these tracts, containing about half an acre, to Edward Gil-Strange as it may seem the records which identify Bridget are here in New Mass. He gave one of these tracts, containing about half an acre, to Edward Gilman, who is called his "Uncle" in the gift record. (Hingham Proprietors Grants of Land, book A, folio 58). Thomas Lincoln is identified thus as a nephew both of Edward Gilman and of Nicholas Jacob's wife. It is clear from the evidence here given that Bridget, mother of Thomas Lincoln, was a sister of Edward Gilman and of Mary Gilman, wife of Nicholas Jacob.

Thomas Lincoln was an older brother of Samuel Lincoln, ancestor of Abraham Lincoln. As no evidence has been found that Edward Lincoln, their father, had a second wife, it may be accepted as reasonably certain that Bridget Gilman was also Samuel's mother. The baptism of Bridget Gilman has not been found. Her eldest child was baptised in 1601. This implies her marriage took place about 1600 and that she was born about 1582. The Gilman line, then, is as follows:

- Edward Gilman of Caston, England, m. June 21, 1550, Rose Rysse.
   Edward Gilman, bapt. Apr. 20, 1557.
   Bridget Gilman, b. abt. 1582, m. Edward Lincoln.

Her brother, Edward, the Emigrant, b. 1587, emigrated to America.

CORRECTED ANCESTRY of EDWARD the EMIGRANT as stated by Mr. Clarence Torrey, Genealogist, Dorchester, Mass.

FIRST GENERATION

1. Edward Gilman (2), b. abt. 1525, Caston, Eng.; m. June 22, 1550, Rose Rysse at Caston. They had 4 sons and 5 daughters (Margaret, Katherine, Rose, Johe and Elizabeth). By his will he left a large estate to be divided between his children. His widow remarried in 1578. The Parish Register did not begin until 1539.

Mr. Clarence Torrey, the Genealogist, is a descendant of Charles and has a complete record of this family.

9. Margaret, bapt. Aug. 1, 1602, and Sarah, b. Aug. 4, 1603, Hingham, Eng. No

10. Mary, m. Nicholas Jacob, Hingham, Eng., and emigrated to America with her husband, two small children and her nephew Thomas Lincoln. (See the Lincoln-Gilman Ancestry, p. -.)

NOTE. The "History of the Gillman or Gilman Family" by Alexander W. Gilman of London, England, gives many other pedigrees of the descendants of the first Edward Gilman and Rose Rysse who were married at Caston in 1550.

. . . . . . . . . From this point we take up the Genealogy of the three sons of Edward the Emigrant.

GILMANTON BRANCH (Edward)

11. Edward (12), eldest son of Edward the Emigrant; bapt. Dec. 26, 1617. Hingham, Eng.; d. 1653 at sea; m. abt. 1646 at Ipswich, Elizabeth Smith, dau. of Richard Smith of Ipswich, Mass., who presented them with a place in that town. Edward later sold this to his own father, having moved to Exeter in 1647, where he obtained rights to erect and operate saw mills. In 1651 he had upon the stocks a vessel of about 50 tons burden, probably for the export of lumber along the coast. He was active, enterprising and judicious and immediately became a popular and leading citizen Grants of land were repeatedly made to him, the last of which coast, He was active, enterprising and judicious and immediately became a popular and leading citizen. Grants of land were repeatedly made to him, the last of which was on May 10, 1652, which was the same day his father and young brother Moses were accepted as townsmen. In 1653 Edward went to England for mill gearing and was lost at sea. His business was taken over by his brother John, and his family, consisting of his wife and three small sons, were cared for by both of his brothers. It is not known how long his wife survived him. His father died a short time later.

Children of Edward Gilman (11) and Elizabeth Smith

12. Edward (15), b. 1648, Exeter, N.H.; d. 1692 Exeter; m. Dec. 20, 1674, Abigail Maverick, dau. of Antipas Maverick who d. in Exeter 1678. Administration of his Maverick, dau. of Antipas Maverick who d. in Exeter 1678. Administration of his estate was granted to Edward and Abigail, who inherited the considerable property. The Mavericks were an English family, prominent in Boston in the very early days, of whom U.S. Senator Maury Maverick, Texan statesman and author, is a present day descendant. Although but six years old at his father's tragic death, Edward was evidently well cared for. He, himself, died when his eldest son was only 17. His will reads "I do appoint my Hon. Uncle, Capt. John Gilman, Jonathan Thing, Moses Leavitt and John Folsom, Overseers."

13. John (20), b. 1650, Exeter; m. May 31, 1675, Grace York, dau. of Richard York of Dover, N.H. He was apparently living in 1690, but probably died before 1698. According to a record he was 27 in 1677 and was called "Junior." At that time he was doing business for his "Uncle" Moses ,by whom he seems to have been brought up. The parentage of several children lies between him and his brother Daniel.

14. Daniel (20), b. 1652, Exeter; d. abt. 1683, Exeter; m. abt. 1673-4, Alice, who was probably the sister of Phillip Cartee, whose wife was Elizabeth York, sister of Grace who m. Daniel's brother John. Daniel refers in 1680 to "My Uncle John Gilman, Esq." who undoubtedly assisted his mother in caring for her sons. After Daniel's death at the age of 31, his wife Alice m. his cousin Nehemiah Leavitt of Hingham, Mass., son of Sarah Gilman Leavitt. Daniel's aunt. In 1680 both Grace and Alice Gilman were mentioned in connection with the crection of a new gallery for the women in Rev. Dudlev's church. The parentage of several children lies between him and his brother John. between him and his brother John.

Children of Edward Gilman (12) and Abigail Maverick

15. Edward (25), b. Oct. 20, 1675; d. 1748-9. Exeter; m. Abigail Folsom, b. 1678, dau. of Deacon John Folsom. He was but 17 when his father died and could not inherit the property willed to him until he became of age. It is possible that he was the lad mentioned in Daniel Cushing's memorandum book as an apprentice who ran away from the home of Daniel and Lydia Gilman Cushing at Hingham, Mass., as he was their nephew. Edward was later one of the original grantees of Gilmanton and layed out the first 40 acre lots, but died before the actual settlement of the place. He left valuable bequests of property to his four sons and one daughter.

- Antipas, b. Feb. 2, 1677; d. Feb. 27, 1677, Exeter, N.H.
- 17. Maverick (30), b. Apr. 11, 1681; m. 1st June 16, 1702, Sarah Mayo of Newbury, Mass.; 2nd, Sarah Dudley.
- Abigail, b. abt. 1678; m. Capt. Jonathan Thing, son of Jonathan Thing, Sr., and Mary Gilman, dau. of Hon. John Gilman. Capt. Thing was b. 1678, d. 1720.
   Children (Thing)— 1. Jonathan III. 2. Edward. 3. Annah. 4. Mary. 5. Abigail.
   6. Elizabeth. 7. Sarah.
- 19. Catherine, b. Apr. 6, 1679, Exeter; m. Nathaniel Ladd, son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth Gilman Ladd (803-1) dau. of Hon. John Gilman. Nathaniel Ladd built the historic Ladd-Gilman House which is now owned by the Order of Cincinnati of Exeter.

  Children (Ladd)— 1. Nathaniel. 2. Daniel. 3. Edward. 4. Josiah. 5. Elias.

Children (Ladd)— 1. Nathaniel. 2. Daniel. 3. Edward. 4. Josiah. 5. Elias. After the death of Catherine, Nathanial Ladd m. Mercy Hilton and had Paul and Dudley.

Two Genealogists, Prof. A. F. Gilman of Chicago, Ill., and Mr. Clarence Torrey of Dorchester, Mass., have made exhaustive research in regard to 5 young men whose names were William, Stephen, Cartee, Jacob and Daniel Gilman. They agree that the only possible parentage of these boys lies between John and Daniel Gilman, sons of Edward Gilman and Elizabeth Smith. There were no other Gilmans in Exeter at that time except cousins whose parentage was definitely known. Hence we enter them as follows,—

John Gilman (13) and Grace York

Children of or

Daniel Gilman (14) and Alice (Cartee ?)

- 20. William, b. abt. 1675, Exeter. Witnessed his Uncle Moses' will together with Cartee Gilman, his brother or cousin, Jan. 12, 1701. No further record.
- 21. Stephen, b. abt. 1677, Exeter. First mentioned as a soldier in 1695-6; received a grant of land in 1697. He was killed by Indians in 1712. Bell's Hist. of Exeter gives an account of a previous escape of Stephen and his brother Jacob when Stephen had his horse shot under him. Administration of his estate was granted to Cartee, "his brother." No evidence of his having married, but it was possible.
- 22. Daniel, b. abt. 1678, Exeter. He was mentioned in 1710 in raids against the Indians with his brother Cartee. No further record.
- 23. Cartee (33), b. abt. 1680; d. 1753, Exeter: m. Hannah Towle dau. of Joshua Towle. Was a witness to his Uncle Moses' will in 1701 with William Gilman, his brother or cousin. From 1736 to 1750 he taught in the Exeter schools, being at the head of the Grammar School for several years. Between 1702 and 1746 he was witness to 14 wills, appraised 7 estates and was surety of 6 wills in Exeter and vicinity. He served in several raids against the Indians and was a subscriber to the erection of the church steeple in Exeter. His name, Cartee, probably indicates his mother's maiden name.
- his mother's maiden name. 682

  24. Jacob (37), b. abt. 1632, Exeter; d. between 1740 and 1743 at Kingston, N.H. He m. Sept. 1. 1704, Mary Ladd, dau. of Nathaniel Ladd and Elizabeth Gilman (803-3). On Mch. 17, 1702, he was one of the 17 grantees of land in Kingston, not far from Exeter. and is mentioned as one of its founders. In 1725 the church list of Rev. Ward Clark gives the family of Jacob as the only ones of that name in Kingston at the time. He was known as Captain. In 1707 he and his brother Stephen barely escaped death by the Indians and in 1710 he was captured and taken to Canada with Phillip Huntoon. After two years they purchased their freedom by huilding a saw mill for the Governor after the English method. He returned to Kingston and raised a large family. He left a substantial estate, his brother Cartee being witness to his will.

SUPPLEMENT to the GILMANTON BRANCH

Descendants of Stephen Gilman

600. Stephen Gilman was born in Exeter, N.H., Feb. 4, 1733; died Sept. 17, 1803, Alton, N.H. He m. Feb. 1755, Rebecca Coffin, b. 1740, d. 1824, dau. of Moses Coffin of Newbury, Mass. The exact parentage of Stephen Gilman has not been ascerof Newbury, Mass. The exact parentage of Stephen Gilman has not been ascertained, but it is certain that he was descended from Edward, eldest son of Edward, the emigrant. The fact that Edward, Jr., was lost at sea when his sons were very young has made it very difficult to follow his posterity as accurately at that of his brothers, John and Moses. However, records of his grandsons, William, Cartee, Stephen, Jacob and Daniel are extant and show that the above Stephen was undoubtedly the son or grandson of one of these young men. No other Gilmans were ever in the vicinity of Exeter up to this time except about 75 years previously when 2 young unmarried cousins from England made a brief stay and left to locate in New Jersey. Stephen Gilman was Selectman of Deerfied, N.H., 1768-71 and also Auditor of the town for several years. In 1781 he settled in Gilmanton near the Iron Works. He was, for a time, in the employ of Gov. Benning Wentworth of Wolfboro, N.H. We have no hesitancy in placing him and his descendants in the Genealogy of the Gilmans of Hingham, England, who came to Hingham, Mass. in 1638, later settling in Exeter, N.H. The name Moses, used so frequently in this branch of the family, originates from Moses Coffin, father of Stephen's wife Rebecca. See Note, p. 2; History of Deerfield; also N.E. Historic and Gen. Register, Vol. 24, p. 314. Register, Vol. 24, p. 314.

He acted as Commissary for the three N. H. Regiments and as Asst. to his father, Col. Nicholas Gilman, State Treas. In 1779 he was elected to the N. H. Legislature and in 1780 to serve on the Committee of Safety. He was elected to the 1st Federal Congress 1781-82, being the youngest man in that body. He had the honor of speaking the voice of N. H., declaring that they should prosecute the war until freedom was assured. Immediately after peace was declared, the death of his father occurred, Apr. 7, 1783, and he was appointed to succeed him as State Treas., which office he held until he was appointed one of three Commissioners to settle the war accounts of the several states. In 1794 he was elected Governor of N. H. and held this office 11 consecutive years. He was again elected to the Governorship in 1813 and served for 3 years, covering a period of 14 years altogether, the longest term on rcord in the state. He was Trustee of Dartmouth College and gave the ground upon which Phillips Exeter Academy now stands. "From him no male descendant now bears the name, but many years shall roll away ere his name shall be forgotten in Exeter or cease to be pronounced with respect and honor in the state of N. H." is a quotation from the address by the Hon. Charles S. Davies of Portland, Me., on the 100th anniversary of Gov. Gilman's birth at Exeter, N. H. See "Story of the Gilmans," p.
