SUTLIFF GENEALOGY

PREFACE

Copy of S. H. Sutliff, 1850, p. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100
 Possessed with a desire to join the society of the Sons of the Revolution, I began a research as to the Revolutionary career of my ancestors, Samuel, Sr., and Samuel, Jr., both of whom I had reasons to think had seen service in that war. It was not long afterward when I found myself delving into the genealogy of the Sutliff family and after some few months of such work I learned of a book on the genealogy of a branch of this family, published by Mr. Bennett H. Sutliffe of Plymouth, Conn. Upon securing and perusing a copy I was gratified to learn that the data secured by me at that time were confirmed, and I had about concluded to close my researches when I became impressed with the fact that Mr. B. H. Sutliffe, in gathering data, had devoted his attention in the main to the securing of the descendants of his ancestor John (9) and, therefore, had secured and published few of the descendants of Nathaniel, Jr. (8), brother of John (9). Having a pride in being one of the descendants of Nathaniel, Jr. (8), and believing it a duty I owed to preserve as far as possible his descendants, I resumed the work, not realizing the magnitude of the same, nor the patience and time nor the expense it would involve, and I am not now surprised that Mr. Bennett H. Sutliffe confined himself to a conscientious and thorough research of the descendants of John (9).

After the English nation had emerged from its semi-barbarous state and the introduction in its midst of Christianity each person continued to be known, and called by a single name, a name generally taken from some one of the names contained in the Bible, and it became common for many persons in a community to be known by the same name; which fact gave rise to a custom, in order to distinguish one person from another of the same name, whereby there was written a word sur (over) the first name of each person, which word generally was characteristic of or peculiarly applicable to the person intended, or referred to his trade or appertained to the locality of his home, e. g., Long, Little, Black, Blackman, etc.; Carpenter, Weaver, Mason, Farmer, etc.; Cleaveland, Dale, Wood, Southcliffe, etc. These sur (over) names in time became family names and were termed surnames. Another illustration is the Cloughs, which means fissures between hills and became the root of the following family names: Cleve^s and Clever^s, Clives and Cliffes, and we find derived therefrom also the Cliffords, Cliftons, Clevelands, Turncliffs, Ratcliffes, Iliffes and Southcliffes.

The name Sutliff originally was derived from Southcliffe, a place situate in Yorkshire, England, and was gradually changed until it was spelled Sutcliffe, the mode of spelling the name prevailing in England to this day, but not retained by that American branch of which I am now writing. The reason for the omission of the "c" from the name by this particular American branch is soon found when it is recalled that the Puritans, to which sect this American branch belonged, were ill-treated and persecuted in England at the beginning, and to such an extent that they became embittered so that not only did they wish and try to reform religion but among other matters to reform, in very many instances, the spelling of the surnames, which they inherited, after reaching America. After the coming to America of the founders of this family there were no other members of the Sutcliffe family, as far as can be ascertained which came to the new world, and certainly none which changed the spelling to Sutliff, until the coming about 1819 of those who founded the Irish-American family, and who settled mostly in Cherry Valley, N. Y., while some settled in Baltimore, Md., and others Philadelphia, Pa.; and therefore I can say without fear of a mistake that any person spelling the name without a "c" and who can trace his ancestry to a period prior to 1819 and especially to New England, is a member of this Puritanical family.

Education during the Colonial times in general was limited to such a primary nature that most all surnames were spelled by the colonists writing the same in such inconceivable ways as to have created wonder and given rise in many instances to merriment. The name Sutliff has at times been so altered at the hands of the officials and others of those times as to have been spelled in over seventeen different ways. The founder of this family in America conveyed real estate in 1640 as Sutcliffe, according to the records. In 1659 Abraham (3) and his wife were designated on the records as Sutlife. In 1667 and 1668 in the same records the name was spelled Sutcliffe, while in 1667 Thomas (4), in signing the new plantation and church covenant, as well as Nathaniel (5) in 1678 when subscribing to the aid of Harvard College, each signed as Sutliff, and in 1689 Abraham (3) was admitted as a Freeman of Scituate, Mass., as Sutliff. Nathaniel (8) and John (9) having lost their father while but children, the country at that time being sparsely settled and having few schools, had a limited education and spelled the name Sutlief, the euphonic method then generally prevailing, in a power of attorney still extant; yet it is a strange fact that this John in later life signed the name to his will as Sutliff. The family spellings, etc., establish only the single fact that this American and Puritanical family never used the letter c in the name.

The Sutcliffe family had from time immemorial dwelt in the county of York, England, where it multiplied so that many of its members migrated to the Counties of Lincoln and Lancaster, where to-day the descendants are in large numbers. In 1550 this particular branch of the family had become so prominent and influential in the vicinity of Mairoyd, Yorkshire, that Matthew Sutcliffe, gentleman, born about that time, was trained and educated at Cambridge with a purpose to fill an important part in the ministry, while his brother John, the forbear of the American family of which I am writing, was educated for the life of a gentleman, becoming afterward a gentleman in waiting on the King—an office at that time conferred only on such as had the highest social, moral and financial standing in the Kingdom. Long before this the family had established its coat of arms. So great was the influence and standing of the Sutcliffes about this time that the Cockcrofts, also a powerful family, applied to its own use the arms of Sutcliffe, which then consisted of "Ar. an elephant pass. sa., tusks, or"; to which the Dean of Exeter is thought to have added "a dexter hand holding upward a sacerdotal cup, ppr." John Sutcliffe, a son of the above John, and nephew of Matthew, as well also a forbear of the American family, through his social status attained high rank at Court, becoming Groom of the Bedchamber to Charles I., and while such secured a confirmation of his family arms, with a crest added, showing a "demi-man armed in antique mail of or, and holding a spear impaled in a scroll and over the shoulder a belt of gules." John of Heptonstall, son of Solomon and another nephew of the Dean, also became an Esquire of the body of King James.

In this volume will be found only the descendants as I could learn of them of Abraham in America, through his great-grandson Nathaniel (8). The descendants through the great-grandson John (9) having before now been gathered in that complete work prepared by Mr. Bennett H. Sutcliffe. To this labor I have devoted all and at times more, too, of my spare time, for a period of two (2) years or so, and I feel that I should close my researches, although there may be members of this family who have been omitted.

It is my hope, not an improbable one, that during some future generation there will be a member of this family who will combine the two works referred to, probably omitting all female branches already given therein, and continue this genealogy to his time; and who will also possess the desire, as well as the time and means of making still further and deeper researches both in England and America so as to clear many matters relating to this family which have not as yet been determined, e. g., the ancestry of Abraham (1) as far back as possible in England and to complete the genealogy as far as possible of that branch of our American family, which went long before the Civil War to one of the Carolinas. It is my purpose to place all of my data, letters, documents and other material into the possession of Mr. Bennett H. Sutcliffe, believing that some of his branch will continue to live near the present homestead and will preserve all evidence and data sent and relating to this family, subject to the inspection of anyone interested.

Key—As generally used and used in this work: b. abbreviation for born; d. for died; m. for married; n. i. for no issue; unm. for a single person; X before a name indicates the person had issue.

The figures which are first placed before a name will always thereafter be placed after the same name, whenever referred to, as a means of tracing the forbears of that person, back to Abraham (1).

A HISTORY OF THE PARTS PLAYED BY MEMBERS OF THE SUTLIFF FAMILY IN SOME OF THE IMPORTANT EVENTS WHICH TRANSPIRED IN THE NEW WORLD.

CHAPTER I.

1. The grand division of the English possessions in the New World. 2. The survey made and the adventures in New England of Captain John Smith. 3. The connection of Dean Matthew Sutcliffe with John Smith and New England. 4. The life and personality of Matthew Sutcliffe.

After Gosnold in 1602 established the first white settlement on Elizabeth Island between Vineyard Sound and Buzzard's Bay, it being abandoned during the same year, the coast of Massachusetts was entirely ignored by civilization until 1606 when King James I. divided all the territory then claimed by England in the new world into two grand divisions. The northern one, being called the North Virginia Company, extended between latitude 40 and 48 degrees, that is, from the mouth of the Hudson River to Newfoundland, and was afterward controlled by "The Grand Council established at Plymouth in the County of Devon, England, for the planting, ruling, ordering and governing of New England in America." The other divisions being the South Virginia Company, which extended from Cape Fear to the Potomac; the intervening territory being called neutral territory.

Captain John Smith, an adventurer bold, was employed by certain gentlemen (not of the nobility) interested in the above divisions. Among these gentlemen is to be found Matthew Sutcliffe, a member of the family of which we are considering. After Captain Smith had explored the South Virginia Division and had therein adventures that were as diverting and as exciting as could be desired, by the most daring seeker, he returned to England to remain but a while, spreading while there the possibilities of the new world. The potentialities as to wealth, pictured by him were so alluring that some of those who had been associated with him in his former unprofitable ventures in the new world—Jamestown, Va.—again trusted in him and in 1614 once more sent this Captain John Smith, of Pocohontas fame, across the ocean; this time, to the coast of what is now New England—the North Division. He explored the entire coast, surveying a considerable part, from Penobscot Bay in Maine to Cape Cod in Massachusetts. After such exploration he wrote to his associates and employers in England that historical letter, descriptive of his experiences and his opinion of the country, which caused all England to turn its eyes toward this grand division and aroused within the breast of its bravest and best citizens a desire for emigration in order that they may better their material welfare and extend their religious liberties. In this letter he addressed and wrote to his associates and employers, in part as follows:

“THE OBSERVATIONS AND DISCOVERIES OF CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH (ADMIRAL OF THAT COUNTRY) IN 1614.”

“To the right Worshipful Adventurers for the country of New England, in the cities of Lincoln, etc., and * * * other parts in the kingdom of England.

“* * * At last it pleased Sir Ferdinand George and Master Doctor Sutcliffe (Dean of Exeter) to conceive so well of these projects and my former employment as to induce them to make a new adventure with me in these parts, whither they have so often sent to their continual loss. * * * The burden of this venture lay principally on them and some gentlemen friends,” etc.

The above shows that the Dean with others had incurred on previous occasions losses in developing the new world at Jamestown, Va., and that he and George were now almost the only ones left and bearing the burden of the present venture in New England.

The pleasing description and possibilities in the new world contained in the letter referred to caused Master Sutcliffe and Ferdinand George to induce members of the nobility as well as some gentlemen and commoners, all of great influence, to form themselves into an association which finally became known as the “Grand Council established at Plymouth, etc.,” which we have just described and which obtained from the King in 1620 a charter to the whole of this grand division, the North Virginia Company—New England. This charter afterwards became known as the Grand Charter of New England and was the basis of, and the precedent for all subsequent charters given to the several colonies established in what is now the northern part of the United States. It was granted to the Duke of Lennox, Marquis of Buckingham, Marquis of Hamilton, Earl of Pembroke and (thus proceeding with other names to the lower ranks of the nobility) then to other grantees, gentlemen and commoners; the first to be mentioned being Master Matthew Sutcliffe, probably owing to the important part he played before then in the development and advancement of the New World.

The Dean, to this time the most distinguished member of the Sutcliffe family, was a native of Yorkshire, and born about 1550. In 1568 he enrolled himself as a student in Trinity College, Cambridge, graduating in 1571 and received at the time the degree of Bachelor of Arts; this was followed by receiving in 1574 his Master of Arts degree. In 1579 he became a lecturer in mathematics in his Alma Mater and two years later received his degree of LL. D.; soon afterwards becoming a member of Doctors' Commons, a College of Law especially devoted to ecclesiastical and admiralty law and having as students or fellows only such persons as had received the degree of Doctors of Law at the Universities of Cambridge or Oxford. In 1586 he was elected Archdeacon of Taunton, etc.; a ministerial office subordinate to that of the Bishop and entitling the holder to preside over the Archdeacon Court.

After advancing in a rapid manner through the intervening graduations, he attained in 1588 to the dignity of Dean of Exeter, which office he filled for forty years and more. In 1610 he was elected to the dignity of Provost (Chief or Judge) of Chelsea, an office requiring the occupant to be learned in as well as a professor of sacred literature. He became a voluminous writer on ecclesiastical subjects and distinguished for his learning and eloquence, having filled the office of Royal Chaplain to both Queen Elizabeth and King James. He founded in 1610 the college named King James College; so named in honor and with the approval of the then King. The Dean immediately became and continued so wrapped in this institution as to devote all of his spare time to its welfare and advancement, and never visited his extensive possessions in the New World.

In his will, after making conditional provisions for the children of his daughter, he gave a large part of his estate to the college he so loved. Nowhere does he refer to his interests in the New World. He makes his wife residuary legatee of all of his undisposed personal property only, and does without disposing of his extensive real estate holdings in America, which holdings were near and around Boston and probably included what is now the cities of Boston and Scituate.

Bennett H. Sutcliffe in his genealogical work of this family (44) substantially states that he believes Nathaniel (3) and John (2) inherited a portion of this real estate through Nathaniel (1), the descendant of John Sutcliffe, brother-in-law of the Dean, and Groom of the Bedchamber of Charles I.

The Doctor, or Dean, devoted his fortune and genius to the development and promotion of that part of the New World as was originally contained in the United States; and more especially New England, is more greatly indebted for its development. Captain Smith would not have been known had not the Doctor rendered assistance with his money and influence and had he not believed in the Captain after nearly all of the other co-adventurers had deserted him and the burden fallen on the Dean and one or two others. The Dean was one of the greatest moving spirits, if not the leading spirit, to secure the great charter of Plymouth, from which all the New England colonies sprung and through which the development of New England was accomplished. This family, now citizens of America, claim with pride to be in the first rank of those American families who first had to do with the advancement of the New World and to whom the United States of to-day is somewhat indebted for its present position among the civilized nations, and this family can also claim to be the first, in time, to be connected with New England at least.

Matthew Sutcliffe, son of John Sutcliffe, gentleman, of Mairoyd, near Halifax, Yorkshire, England, became a national character and than he there is no other one prior to whom the U.S. and more especially New England is more that first known

a person of much influence among the clergy. The State Church, the Episcopal, was then in its youth and vigor, and had but recently emerged from a struggle amongst the people as the successor of the Romish Church, which struggle engendered much bitterness and produced much cruelty. Intoxicated with its success and power, besides being unbridled in its acts by any precedents, it revelled in the ^{or} prosecution and oppression of those who did not adopt its tenets. It required of its leaders and defenders men of iron will, and possessed of force of character and firmness as well as unyielding spirit. Matthew Sutcliffe being made of such stuff and possessing the requisite education, also training, soon became a strong leader. His was an aggressive and pugnacious nature, who loved controversy and contention. Being blunt to the verge of cruelty and not mincing his words, he never heeded the amenities of polite life, nor did he ask or grant mercy in argument. Rough and overbearing, as well as being a zealot, he tried to overwhelm his adversaries with abuse as well as with his keen and clear logic and profound learning. This was the man who was pitted against the distinguished doctrin^{aries} and learned scholars of the church of Rome. He was a giant in intellectual strength, and much dreaded by his adversaries. The adoption by his grand nephew Abraham of the Puritanical teaching—a teaching to purify the Episcopal church—it can well be seen, would be displeasing to such a person as Matthew Sutcliffe.

The Dean's share of the lands of the North Virginia Company is shown on a very crude and roughly drawn map made on a small sheet of paper and seemed to include a large strip in the vicinity of Boston and probably included Boston and Scituate.

It appears probable that it was through the influence of the Dean and at his request that the first colonist who settled at Scituate set aside their iron bound rule giving but a single tract of land to each settler or head of family, by granting to Abraham, his relative and the founder of this family, at least two if not more tracts of land in Scituate.

The Dean at the time of his death was one of the wealthiest men in all England and left the bulk of his large estate to the maintenance of his College of Controversy, which rapidly declined after his death and was located where now stands the famous Chelsea Hospital.

CHAPTER II.

1. Settlements of Plymouth and other towns in Massachusetts described. 2. Abraham Sutliff in Scituate. 3. John Plympton, an ancestor, and Nathaniel Sutliff at Dedham, Medfield and Deerfield, Mass. 4. Thomas Sutliff at Branford and the signing of the document separating church and state. 5. Subscribing to higher education.

While the Grand Charter of New England was being secured, and without the aid or encouragement of that company or any government, a colony of English separatists in 1620, then living in Holland, started for the New World, and, after touching at Cape Cod, finally settled at Plymouth, Mass. It consisted of 101 persons, composed of 19 families. The success of this colony soon reached England and in 1623 the "Grand Council" tried to establish a colony at Pascatang Bay, Maine, which place in a short time was abandoned and many of the ^{members} ~~numbers~~ including Abraham Sutliff went to Plymouth, Mass.; this was followed by John Endicot, and his 100 followers who settled in Salem in 1624, the first settlement in the ancient Massachusetts Bay Colony; Plymouth having been already established into a colony by itself. The last settlement was followed by 200 emigrants who in 1628 founded Charlestown, on the Charles River. These inflows resulted in a charter being granted to the Massachusetts Bay Company, thereby giving an impetus to immigration into Massachusetts as shown by the arrival in 1630 of John Winthrop and his followers (amongst whom was John Plympton), who settled in Roxbury, Dorchester, Cambridge, Watertown, Charlestown and other places adjoining Boston, but most of them settled in Boston. At this time Plymouth had but 300 people, having gone through the vicissitudes and trials resulting from environments and conditions; being at times reduced to terrible need and having at one time but a pint of corn amongst them. After the lands were no longer held in common in Plymouth and after a tract of land had been set aside, for the first time in 1624, to each man to be his own and to be cultivated by him, there were always sufficient corn and provisions. There were twelve other ships which arrived in Boston during the year 1630 with 840 emigrants, many being from the west of England, but most of them coming from London. Some of these immigrants scattered up and down Massachusetts Bay proper, some ascended the rivers and streams in the neighborhood of Boston; others went to settlements already established in the vicinity or further inland to create new settlements. In 1631 the ship Lynn, with the Apostle Eliot, left Nazine in Essex County, England, for Roxbury, and in 1632 many more immigrants arrived in the new world. So it continued a steady flow each year until 1635, when a great movement in England sent three thousand persons from that country, who went, with others already here, to establish new settlements and new colonies, so that in 1637 the large township of Dedha, or Dedham, with but thirty families coming from several parts of England, was founded. The village of Dedham was located some distance from Boston along the meandering banks of the Charles River only nine miles or so from that town, and across the river from the south line of the then Roxbury Township, where we find ancestors of the Sutcliffe—Roxbury being now a portion of Boston. In 1640 immigration from England to the colonies ceased entirely, due to the civil war which was then threatening on the horizon, as well as to an edict of the King prohibiting emigration to the colonies. In fact more persons for a few years succeeding the year 1640 returned to the mother country than came to the new world. In 1636 settlements were made at Hartford and Weathersfield, Connecticut, a few miles apart, by immigrants who had so-journed, on their way thereto, for a time in Massachusetts. Those who went to Weathersfield were unaccompanied by a pastor and being thus deprived of a religious leader, there arose amongst them as soon as they were settled, so much contention, quarrel and religious strife that portions of those settlers from time to time left to join other existing settlements or to establish new ones. In 1644 William Swain of Weathersfield purchased from the New Haven Company the land at Brainford, now Branford, Conn., seven miles east of New Haven, for the purpose of settling thereon his followers—seceders from Weathersfield. This land had been first purchased in 1638 by the New Haven Company, from the Indian Sachem Momanquiss.

After the landing of the first ship at Plymouth other ships from time to time called at that port with new settlers. A large part of them scattered along the Atlantic coast, mostly northward towards Boston, to form new settlements. One of the settlements so established was Scituate, a port town, in the county of Plymouth, twenty-one miles north of Plymouth and twenty-eight miles south of Boston: some of its first settlers coming by the Mayflower. There was a large addition to this town in 1633 by way of Boston, when the Rev. Lathrop and his followers settled there. Most of the settlers in Scituate prior to 1640 came from the county of Kent, England. In 1640 Abraham Sutliff sold land in Scituate to Thomas Ingham, also to John Stockbridge "northeast of the mill." This indicates that either Abraham had owned land for some considerable time, since in order to own land at those times, he would have to be a freeman of the place, which requires time to become such, or he was one of the original settlers of Scituate. The latter was probably the fact, ~~because~~ because the property sold was on the third bluff, where all the land was divided at different times afterward as new settlers came.

Abraham, the founder of the family which we are describing, had a son, Abraham, Jr., who was appointed constable of Scituate and qualified in Plymouth at the same time as did Governor Bradford—the office of constable at that time being the highest office in a community and being somewhat similar in its duties to that of the present sheriff and police chief combined. This Abraham, Jr., was the father of Nathaniel, Sr., a forbear, and, among others, also of Abraham (3), who kept tavern in the town in 1670 and who became dissipated and dissolute, but afterwards behaved and was restored to the confidence and respect of the community, being elected Sergeant, at that time the highest military title attainable in a settlement or community. This Abraham (3) was also made a freeman at the general court held at Plymouth in 1689. Savage says that Abraham (1) probably had other children.

(The time of the arrival of the very first settlers; that of the other bluffs being divided at

The immigrants coming at those times into New England were largely, if not entirely, composed of dissenters and protesters from the Church of England. They were of two kinds and known as the Pilgrims and the Puritans. The former were separatists from the Church of England; the latter, who settled under Winthrop and others in Massachusetts Bay and other places in the immediate vicinity, taught more complete and personal regeneration—desiring a reform within the church, and not being a sect or independent religious body. Both of these divisions taught civic liberty and purity in religion.

In 1640 one Dr. George Olcock of Roxbury, now a part of Boston, made his will and mentioned therein the names of both of his apprentices, John Plympton and Joseph Wise. An apprentice at that time was a lad bound during minority in writing and in legal form by his parents, or the court, to another person in order that the lad might learn a particular profession or trade. He was furnished by his master during the apprenticeship, with board, clothing and a certain amount of education. In some instances the lad or his parents for him agreed to pay the master when the apprenticeship terminated, a certain sum of money for the privilege of having been taught the profession, or trade.

Dr. Olcock was the first ancestor in America of the well known philosopher, E. Bronson Alcott, and his daughter, the novelist, Louise Alcott. John Plympton, the father of Hannah, who became the wife of Nathaniel Sutliff, Sr., was very young when he came to the New World in charge of Dr. Olcock, both of them coming from England with Governor Winthrop and his followers in 1630. In 1641, or the early part of 1642, John Plympton left Roxbury, having bought his time for five pounds, as permitted by the will of Dr. Olcock, and settled in Dedham. It may be added that in those times lads of tender years and belonging to good families in England, were sent over to the New World in charge of responsible men or leaders of settlements, such as Dr. Olcock, as apprentices, and they were to remain until they had repaid their passage or were to pay a certain sum to the master, as stated, upon the termination of the apprenticeship. The death of Dr. Olcock affected the future calling of young Plympton, for he no longer was determined to become a physician, but becomes a surveyor in Dedham and Medfield. On the "20th d. 1 m. of 1642 he was received within the church," and a month thereafter, "22nd d. 12 m. 1642" he purchased two acres of upland on the island at Dedham, and in 1643 John Plympton took a step which, to some of his descendants, was of social importance, since he then joined the "Ancient and Honorary Artillery of the Massachusetts Bay Company," thereby giving to his descendants the right to become honorary members of this company; claimed to be one of the most exclusive organizations in America. This society has from the time of its organization been particular as to its recruits and as an instance we cite that among those who joined at the same time (1643) as John Plympton, was William Aspinwall, who had in 1636-37 been a selectman of Boston and in 1637-38 chosen as a representative from Boston to the General Assembly to succeed the well-known Harry Vane. In the year 1643 John Plympton becomes a freeman of Dedham. The purpose of this will be seen when it is stated that the General Court in 1631 passed a law that no one could vote who was not connected with some church (only one-quarter of the inhabitants were church members at that time); also just prior to 1640 another law was enacted forbidding anyone to abide in any settlement without the consent first had of a magistrate of that settlement. These two laws were strictly enforced by the settlements or plantations. In time, the requirements of the settlers became very rigid for persons who desired to join and become members of the settlement. An application was required, which was followed by an investigation as to the applicant's antecedents, his character and reputation before he was permitted to become a freeman of the settlement.

On March 13, 1644, John Plympton married Jane Drummer or Denan, a sister of Deacon John Denan of Reading, and lived in the Dedham settlement of the township of Dedham, having purchased during the same year an additional one and one-half acres of woodland, which was followed in 1646 by still another purchase of two acres for five shillings.

The township of Dedham at that time was a large tract of land extending from the banks of the Charles River southward well towards the state line of Rhode Island, being bounded on the east by the grant made to the Dorchester settlers or plantation, and was first established by the general court, in 1633. In 1649 a few of the settlers at Dedham settled at a place called Boggertown, John Plympton in 1652-3, moved to Boggertown, just before the township in which it was located was separated from Dedham and created into Medfield, for in 1652 the town of Dedham gave John Plympton permission "to fell trees upon the brook to use about his house." In 1661 he becomes a surveyor of the town as well as the constable and was selected as fence viewer in 1670. The office of constable at that time being in power and in importance was something like unto our modern sheriff. Before he moved from Dedham, according to its records, Hannah Plympton, his oldest child and daughter, afterwards wife of Nathaniel Sutcliffe, was born on December 19, 1644-45, and according to the church records "in 1645 ye 16 d. and 1 m., Hannah ye daughter of our brother John Plympton, and his wife Jane our sister, was baptized." Nathaniel Sutliff probably first met with John Plympton and his family at Dedham, since Nathaniel in 1661 was taxed for school purposes on property he held in Dedham. At that time the law was, there must be a school in each settlement for every fifty inhabitants therein.

In 1651 Eliot made a second attempt to establish a settlement in the New World by undertaking with a few followers to establish one at Natick, sixteen miles west of Boston up the Charles River. The general court had given him and his followers and the Indians under him 2,000 acres for the purpose of civilizing and Christianizing the Indians. Hardly had he and his followers settled there when the Dedham colonists claimed that this grant of 2,000 acres covered a part of the Dedham territory. The result was a long and tedious lawsuit which was finally decided in 1662 by the general court, when the claim of the Dedham settlers was admitted, but it was decided it would be unjust to dispossess the Indians; and the court appointed a committee which was ordered to set aside for the benefit of Dedham 8,000 acres, to be selected by Dedham anywhere within the Massachusetts Bay Colony, in lieu of the 2,000 acres given to Eliot. After viewing several tracts of land by its committee, Dedham selected a tract in the Pocamtuck Indian Territory, in the northern part of Massachusetts and afterwards settled by residents of Dedham and Medfield, and from which territory there were separated, in time, four other townships still leaving a tract thirty-six miles square which is almost the same territory as the township of Deerfield of to-day.

This territory of Pocamtuck was in 1659 divided by Dedham into large separate tracts, each tract being again divided into 522 shares of "common rights" instead of acres. These shares were called "cow commons" and a fraction of a share was called "goat" or "sheep" commons, so as the better to assign the property owners of Dedham their respective shares according to their holdings or taxes paid. A goat or sheep common was equal to five cow commons. One of these large tracts so divided became known as Pocomtuck and soon after the above subdivision into commons, as the records show, "Nathaniel Sutcliffe of Medfield" applied for permission to buy land. There was a meeting of the settlers held in 1668 and after a vote was taken the meeting authorized "Lieutenant Fischer to sell six cow common rights and one sheep common right at Pocamtuck to Nathaniel Sutlief from Medfield." Nathaniel did not immediately pay for and take possession of this land.

The settlers at Brainford, now called Branford, Conn., having passed through an experience similar to that which they and their ancestors had before then at Weathersfield, and having again experienced the disadvantages and injuries resulting from religious contention and political interference with religion, undertook to reorganize and encourage the religious side of life of the settlement by adopting on Jan. 20, 1667-8 a "new plantation covenant for Branford," which declared in the main that "for as much as Branford was settled by and for men of Congregational principles we do see cause for an orthodox minister to be called; such a chance shall be incurred. The development of such officers will not want proportionally supply of maintenance according to rule. We will not encroach upon the liberties in so walking nor be any way injurious to them in civil or ecclesiastical respects and this we fully and voluntarily engage ourselves jointly and severally so long as we remain inhabitants of this place, etc." Among the signers to this document was Thomas Sutliff (4). This is the first instance in a Christian nation when there was placed a limitation to the state in its absolute power over the religion of the people; also where there was a line of demarcation created between the civil and ecclesiastical obligations due the state and the church by its inhabitants. In short, the first instance in the civilized ^{by its} nation where there was a separation of the church and state and in such an important event we find a Sutliff playing a part. The conditions which led to such a document, a precedent in the religious and political world, were the natural consequences of a dissatisfaction arising among a band of Massachusetts settlers gathered from different parts therein, going down the Connecticut Valley, looking for new territory and land, unaccompanied by a pastor and settling at Weathersfield, a few miles below Hartford on the Connecticut River. Hardly had they settled in their new home when the members became involved, as stated, in religious arguments, contentions and animosities, resulting in the settlement, so established, becoming dissatisfied and thereby disintegrated into parts; many of them continually leaving for new or other settlements. Finally, under the leadership of William Swain, a portion of the settlers at Weathersfield, thinking they were ^{agreed} engaged on a common religious creed, decided in 1644 to buy land and settle at Brainford, now Branford, but only again to go through the same experience and adversities due to religious contentions. Some twenty and more years after having settled at Branford they adopted the above covenant, thinking that it would result in an end to strife and cause peace to prevail in the settlement.

While John Plympton and Nathaniel Sutliff were residents of Medfield, a subscription list was circulated among its inhabitants for the purpose of raising a fund to further educational matters and the erection of college buildings for a new college—Harvard, now Harvard University. There is still in existence a list of seventy-five names of persons who were subscribers to this fund and amongst them were both John Plympton and Nathaniel (1) Sutliff. Again we find a member of this family not only aiding in the establishment of Harvard College, but also in taking part on the very first instance in the new work—in the establishment of higher education. Money being scarce at that time a large proportion of the subscribers gave their subscription in wheat or grain.

CHAPTER III.

1. The settlement at Deerfield, Mass. 2. King Philip's war.—the battle at Bloody Brook—also the battle of Deerfield, and the killing of John Plympton and Nathaniel Sutliff. 3. The departure and dangerous trip of the Sutliff family to Cogenchaug, afterward moving to Durham. 4. The settling in Durham by Nathaniel, Jr., and his brother John and their successors.

John Plympton, as well as his son-in-law, Nathaniel Sutliff (1), having applied to Pocotuck for the privilege of becoming a settler therein, a town meeting was held on December 14, 1671, at which, after a vote was taken, the inhabitants authorized a sale of land to him "provided the said John Plympton doe settle them," which he did. Nathaniel Sutliff, as we have seen, had been permitted before then to purchase land from Lieutenant Fischer, which permission also gave the right to purchase other land; which he did in 1672, having purchased lot No. 43, the Asa Stebbin lot, and settling there immediately; the records showing Nathaniel Sutliff, Jr., to be born there July 27, 1672. On the same year and after John Plympton and Nathaniel Sutliff (1) had settled at Pocotuck (1672) the town held a meeting, when after a vote, they signed and presented a petition to the general court of Massachusetts for the establishment of a township, and among the signers were John Plympton and Nathaniel Sutliff (1). The petition was soon granted and the town of Pocotuck thereafter became known as Deerfield. The following year, 1673, Nathaniel closed the six cow commons and one sheep common, by paying for same. In 1674 John Sutliff, the second son of Nathaniel (1), was born. When King Philip's war began in 1675, John Plympton, being the chief military officer in Deerfield, joined the army and served throughout with honor and distinction. At a time when the war, as all then living thought, was practically over, and after Deerfield had been destroyed by the Indians, he returned to rebuild his home, when on September 19, 1677 (two years and one day after his son Jonathan was killed—September 18, 1675); he with Mr. Stockwell and Mr. Dickerson, three women and fourteen children, were taken captive by a band of Indians under Ashperton, carried to Canada where he was burned at the stake, at a point near Chambly; nearly all of the other captives being permitted to be ransomed. During the war he attained the rank of captain, which was one of the highest military ranks to be attained at that time in the province or state. Prior to the war he was affectionately known to his townsmen as "Old Sergeant Plympton." He left a widow and thirteen children.

Nathaniel Sutliff (1) also took part in King Philip's war, and was under Lathrop at Bloody Brook Bridge. In addition, on May 19, 1676, "Nathaniel Sutliff (1) of Deerfield" served as a soldier under Captain Turner at the battle of the Falls, where he was killed. In the first part of the battle the Indians had been defeated and routed, retreating precipitately and closely followed by the soldiers, but afterward, owing to false reports, circulated by Indian captives who were overtaken, to the effect that a great number of fresh Indians were hard by and coming to the assistance of those just defeated, the colonists began to retrace their steps. The attack was renewed by comparatively few fresh Indians. The retirement of the settlers was soon changed into a hasty retreat and from that into a complete rout—the soldiers escaping either separately or in small groups in all directions, through the woods and without any pretense of order, thus enabling the savages all the more easily to slaughter the soldiers individually or in small groups. It was a carnage; and among those killed on this memorable May day, were two of the ancestors of the Sutliffs. Of one, Judd, in his early history describing the battle, says that there is a tradition in the Sutliff family that Nathaniel Sutliff, when overcome and captured, was also burned at the stake in the woods.

A grant of land was made by the town to the children of Nathaniel Sutliff, Sr., presumably for his services in the late Indian war. It was not only deserved but probably needed when one considers that the oldest child was but ten years of age, while the fourth and youngest one, John, was a babe of less than two years. The widow married Samuel Harrington, who had been wounded at the attack of September 18, 1675, and with him the wife and the children of Nathaniel Sutliff, Sr., moved to Hadfield, a neighboring town, and there resided for a few years. After the death of Nathaniel, Sr., the church, at that time it meant the court, contemplated sending the children to Boston, but probably owing to the pleading of the mother, as well as her then marriage to Samuel Harrington, this was not done. Yet sometime thereafter Nathaniel (2) went to live with relatives, at Rehoboth, where he remained until after he was married and until after the birth of his first child, returning to Deerfield about 1694.

Some time prior to 1695, it was learned that there was within the limits of Connecticut a large strip of land in the direction of north by east from Branford and less than fifteen miles therefrom, which had been overlooked by the General Assembly of Connecticut and had not been granted to any of the settlements surrounding it. The General Assembly from time to time after such discovery granted tracts of land in this strip to different persons as a reward for services, sometimes recklessly so, as in the case where it was granted to a preacher who on some occasion had delivered a sermon which was pleasing to some one member of the General Assembly. This territory was known as Cuginchaug, or Cochinuag, and the Assembly was inclined to open it to settlement by giving gratis a goodly part thereof to new settlers. This became generally known to the public and to the inhabitants of Deerfield. John Sutliff, who had just attained his majority and was no longer under the charge of the church and court, joined a group from Deerfield who, with their pastor, concluded to go to this strip, which rumor said would soon be opened to settlement, and take advantage of the favorable terms. In 1696 these colonizers from Deerfield started on their long, hazardous and health-sapping journey to Branford.

In this day of steam and luxurious travel one cannot appreciate the ordeal and discomforts experienced at that time in making such a trip. Deerfield, before then, twice treacherously attacked and burned by the Indians, and its citizens murdered or carried into captivity, was situated well up in the northwestern part of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, near what is now the northern boundary of the state of Massachusetts. The only route from there to Branford was down the Connecticut Valley, across the colonies of Massachusetts and Connecticut to Long Island Sound on the ocean; thence west along the southern shore of Connecticut. The country to be traversed was hilly, as well as rough, thickly covered with an undergrowth of almost impenetrable brush. There were no bridges and rarely a ford, over the various brooks and streams to be crossed, and the whole forest was filled with cunning and ever-watchful Indian foes. At this time, the power of the Indians in that valley was at its zenith. In what is now known as Windsor, alone there were ten different sovereignties. The Pequods and Mohigans, who occupied part of this valley, were a warlike and crafty race and extended down the river to Branford. Sassacus, their chief, had twenty-six Sachems under him and all the other tribes were in fear of and paid tribute to him. Sowkeag the great Sachem of all Indians, who had but recently died, had built a large fort at Middletown by the river. These several tribes were again becoming restless and dissatisfied with the treatment received at the hands of the whites, and there were rumblings of discontent as well as mutterings of war among them; and a feeling in turn of hatred for the whites was being rapidly engendered amongst them. Their desire for war, revenge and unlimited murder were with difficulty being kept within bounds only to burst forth with all the more intensity and fury a year or so later, under the guidance of the French. The only means of transportation were the heavy ^{countersunk} ~~encumbered~~ ox teams, moving in the crude, creaking wagons, then in use, and without springs. The remainder would walk, some of the men going in advance while others were in the rear of the teams, always watchful and on the alert for the sneaking and hidden Indians, who were bent on killing the white men, leading the women to a life worse than death and the children to one of slavery. Whenever night overtook them, they slept on the wet and chilly ground with nothing over them excepting the clear skies. Some of the men stood guard during the nights over the sleeping ones and drove away the lurking and bloodthirsty Indians and wild animals. There were but two settlements on the Connecticut River between Deerfield and Long Island Sound, and at a crushing pace. The children and the ox

these were Hartford and Weathersfield, less than a dozen miles apart. After such a trip and experiences the immigrants reached Branford, where an acceleration was given to the discussion as well as appeals that were being addressed to the General Assembly of Connecticut, concerning Coginchaug. Matters continued thus until April 29, 1699, when a final and successful petition was presented to the General Court by the inhabitants of Guilford, a township south of Coginchaug, asking for permission to establish on certain favorable terms, a settlement upon this tract. This being granted a committee of three was appointed by the General Court to lay out a town. The committee platted one in the southern part of Coginchaug and divided the lands so that a part was to be given gratis to new settlers, but it was discovered that the territory through manipulation came immediately under the sole control of certain men of Hartford; which fact was so displeasing to the immigrants who were stopping at nearby settlements that they refused to settle in Coginchaug; and the new town and settlement was never occupied but became a failure. Thereafter these immigrants, who continued to reside in Branford, and nearby, as well as some settlers already on the tract, persistently agitated for a new license and addressed to the General Assembly several different appeals concerning the same.

During this time Nathaniel Sutliff, Jr., remained in Deerfield and was in the year 1702 elected a selectman of the town. This office was one to which belonged the adjustment of taxes, their collection and the regulation of many other matters relating to the town—a most important town office at that time. At the age of thirty years we thus find him a respected and leading citizen of the community, filling a leading official position.

John Sutliff kept his brother Nathaniel, Jr., at Deerfield, informed as to the developments in regard to the prospective opening to settlement of Coginchaug, since Nathaniel, Jr., intended to settle there whenever permission should be secured from the General Court of Connecticut. Preparatory to this and when it appeared as if the territory would soon be opened to settlement, Nathaniel, Jr., in 1700 caused his home, lot No. 6, formerly bought by his father Nathaniel (1) Sr., from Timothy Dwight, to be confirmed by the court to him, as the oldest son of Nathaniel (1) Sr. In those days the oldest son was the sole heir when the father died without a will. He sold the home to David Hoyt, who with his entire family was less than two years afterwards (1704) captured on these very premises by the Indians, during their raid on the settlement. It was at the time that the Rev. John Williams, "the redeemed captive" and other settlers were taken captive and then led from pillar to post through Canada; experiencing the agonies of an expected death through butchery as well as the privations and sufferings invariably arising from military marches during actual warfare.

In anticipation of the probable future action of the General Assembly in regard to the strip of land referred to, several persons between the years 1700 and 1702, moved before it was opened to settlement within the limits of Coginchaug and divided amongst themselves some of the vacant land. Amongst these was John Sutliff, who, at the same time, selected and reserved for his brother the tract which afterwards became the property of Nathaniel, Jr. While this handful of settlers was thus residing on the property, they filed anew before the General Court a petition in behalf of themselves and other settlers for a grant of the territory in question. The petition was presented by Hezekiah Talcot, Joseph and Caleb Seward, David Robinson, John Sutliff and a few others. On May 13, 1703, the petition so filed was considered, and a committee of three persons was appointed by the General Court to plat a new town, which was done where the town was afterwards built. The first plat mentioned was cancelled and the new town was named and became known as Durham.

The General Assembly having received the report of the committee passed a resolution granting the property to the petitioners and a charter was issued to those petitioners in 1708 for this strip. Before the charter was issued and received by the settlers and long after Nathaniel, Jr., arrived in the settlement, his arrival being probably in 1703, and after the petition was granted, Eunice, his daughter, was baptized on Aug. 7, 1706, although no minister as yet had been elected in the community. On Christmas Eve of the same year, 1706, this small settlement held its first town meeting and the records show that Nathaniel Sutliff, Jr., was elected constable and "John Sutliff (1) was at ye same meeting chosen Culler for ye year ensuing for ye town of Durham," and that "the place for ye Town Pond shall be for the time being between Nathaniel Sutliff and John Sutliff on ye east side of the street." Of this settlement it was said in substance that Durham was settled sixty years after the adjoining towns and was unlike them in that the other towns were constantly in a turmoil and the settlers distracted by religious discussions whereas Durham had no such matters to consider, and therefore, peace prevailed there and the denizens dwelt in unison and happiness.

CHAPTER IV.

1. John Sutliff in Plymouth. 2. Military spirit of members of the Sutliff family and their services in the various wars. 3. The family as pioneers and helping to develop new sections of the country. 4. The part played by Milton Sutliff.

For several generations the descendants of Nathaniel, Jr., (8) continued to live in Durham and the neighboring settlements of Killingworth, Wallingford, Haddam and Higganum; excepting that Joseph, Sr., (26) with his family went early to Wolcott, Conn., as one of the very first settlers there. John (9), the brother of Nathaniel, Jr. (8), had gone, about 1727, with his family to Northbury, now Plymouth, Conn., where he became an unusually large land owner, the proprietor of the mill and a leading citizen as well as the founder of what in this day may be termed the Eastern branch of the family. In Plymouth, and its immediate vicinity, at the present time, may be found many of his descendants all of whom stand high for their probity and are among the most influential citizens.

From the time of the first settlement of the town of Durham the Sutliff brothers, Nathaniel, Jr., and John, became the leading and most influential settlers. At the establishment of the town, Nathaniel, Jr., was elected constable, the most important office, while John was elected the town crier, and the pound was located between their farms. From time to time the settlers, at their town meetings, gave to these brothers or one of them, privileges and franchises of different kinds, and also elected each of these brothers to different offices, including that of representative to the General Assembly, John having been elected for one term and Nathaniel to four different terms, still serving at the time of his death. A preacher was not secured by the settlers at Durham until some time after its first settlement. During the interval Nathaniel, Jr., acted as pastor and preacher and was known as the minister. The members of this family who continued to live at Durham and thereabouts prospered, and became possessed of this world's goods. Captain Nathaniel Sutliff, son of Nathaniel, Jr., having been uncommonly well to do; owning slaves, as well as extensive tracts of lands and being the aristocrat of the family and neighborhood.

For several generations after coming to the New World, the members of this family were possessed of a martial spirit, partial to a military pursuit and connected themselves with the military "train band" of the neighborhood. The family furnished one or more of its male members to each of the several Colonial and Indian wars, which occurred. Each branch of this family, that of Nathaniel, Jr., and John, gave its quota to the soldiers in the revolutionary war. There was Lieutenant Benjamin Sutliff and his brother, Corporal Samuel, Sr. (56), as well as the two sons of the latter, David and Samuel, Jr. After serving in the early part of the war, Samuel, Sr., moved with his family to Hartland, Conn., where his son Samuel, Jr., subsequently acted as a substitute for a man with a family of thirteen children, while David, brother of Samuel, Jr., became a soldier in the short term levy. In addition we have John Hodgkin Sutliff, who served as an officer of the Revolution from the state of New York and afterward became a member of the society Cincinnati, while his brother Gad served during the greater part of the long war and afterward became a Revolutionary pensioner of the United States. The patriotism and loyalty of this family are well shown in Joseph, Sr., (26), the lame one; he who was also incapacitated through age, yet determined to do his part. He was an active member of a committee appointed to solicit aid among the people, and he went about the neighborhood and vicinity procuring clothing for the soldiers in the field. In addition to the above are the Revolutionary soldiers belonging to the Eastern branch—that of John, which we will not enumerate.

At the termination of the Revolutionary War all the male members of this family had already severed their connections with Durham, and the adjacent towns, although there still remained, and there are to this day, descendants of some of the female members living at Durham, Haddam, Higganum and vicinity. Peace having come and a new nation formed, the states released and conveyed to the National Government their several and conflicting rights to all the territory west of the Allegheny mountains, excepting that Connecticut reserved for its citizens and other settlers a large tract of land comprising many counties in northern Ohio and to this day known as the Western Reserve (of Connecticut) in Ohio; and Virginia which made provisions for a certain tract of land it claimed in the southern part of Ohio. Several states offered inducements to persons in order to have them become settlers. New York offered upon most favorable conditions a tract of land to each Revolutionary soldier who would settle thereon. Samuel, Jr., took advantage of this offer by settling on a farm in Herkimer County, while his brother David also profited by settling on a tract near Dryden, N. Y. Probably these generous offers by New York accounted for the fact that most of the Sutliffs, who emigrated from Connecticut, went to so many counties in the state of New York, and it is probable that Gad and others of the family took advantage of those generous terms. Land in the newer and undeveloped portions of the states and territories was at different times opened later for settlement to new comers and immigrants on such easy and attractive terms that many of the citizens of New England left for those new parts. These favorable offers drew somewhat from the male descendants of John (9), most of such settling in Eastern Pennsylvania; while the same offers drew almost entirely the male descendants of Nathaniel, Jr.,

excepting a single family and its descendants, which for some years continued to reside in the vicinity of ~~Hartford~~^{Hartland}, Conn., and Granville, Mass.,—towns but half a dozen miles or so apart; also excepting some of the descendants of Joseph, Sr., (26) who continued to reside near Wolcott, Southington and vicinity. There were two natural and most popular routes from New England to the new territories described. One was through Massachusetts and Connecticut, along Long Island ^{Sound} to New York City, and across the Hudson River, branching so that some traveled along the Delaware River, near which many of the descendants of Joseph, Sr., are now to be found, through Maryland and Virginia into the Carolinas where some of the Sutliff family settled; the other branch went westerly from New York City along the northern tiers of counties of Pennsylvania and the southern tiers of counties in New York, in many of which counties members of this family are to be found to this day. The other route led from New England to Albany, thence westerly through the central and northern part of New York State to Buffalo, along which many members of the Sutliff family settled.

About 1802 the Western Reserve of Ohio was opened to settlement, when it was rapidly occupied with a large influx from the East. Many of the Connecticut people who had settled in New York State moved across the mountains and through the woods to this new territory which was being filled with their friends, relatives and citizens of Connecticut. In that venture a large number of the Sutliff family took part so that a large proportion of the counties in the Western Reserve contained at least one Sutliff and family. As new sections still further west of the United States were from time to time opened to settlement, some other member of this family ventured there and thus members helped to settle different parts of Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and the further west. Even now Llewellyn L., who would be considered a very old person, and Harvey S. Sutliff, who would be supposed to be on account of age little able to bear the hardships of frontier life, both have quite recently gone into a raw and unsettled section of the country—the former into South Dakota—the latter into Colorado, walking six miles each way daily to his farm until he has constructed a home thereon. Thus we find the family still helping to advance the nation, develop its resources and place it among the leading nations of the world.

Among those who have during recent years added lustre to the name of Sutliff is to be mentioned Milton Sutliff, a brief outline of whose life and characteristics are given under the proper heading in the genealogical part of this work. His training and education was such that he was able to enter the arena of life and make a success therein. In early youth he developed a hatred for slavery, and so thoroughly imbued and in earnest had he become with the abhorrence of slavery that soon after graduating from college he went at his own expense, which was quite a drain on his limited purse, as a delegate from the Western Reserve Anti-Slavery Society to the National Convention of that society, held at Philadelphia, Pa., December 4, 1833. While there he and the poet, John G. Whittier, occupied the same bedroom, and the representations he then made to Whittier concerning the ill-treatment received by President Storr of the Western Reserve College, and an abolitionist, at the hands of the pro-slavery element, led Whittier afterward to compose that tender and touching poem on the death of President Storr.

In 1850, as a Free Soiler, he was elected to the Ohio Senate, where he immediately assumed prominence. There was held by the legislature during his ^{term} an election for a United States Senator. The Democrats and Whigs were about equal in number and the Free Soilers with but a few votes held the balance of power. The Democrats on each ballot voted for the same person who was objectionable to the Free Soilers, while the Whigs presented in turn the names of several of its leaders, trusting in some one instance thereby to meet with the approval of the Free Soilers and capture its votes. Milton Sutliff was the active leader of the Free Soilers. As the balloting progressed excitement ran high and at times the name of Milton Sutliff was presented with ardor as a candidate and voted by many. Among those presented by the Whigs was Benjamin Wade, a close personal friend and neighbor of Milton Sutliff, but he, too, was rejected and cast aside, as were many others afterwards presented by that party. Finally, believing that there could be no election satisfactory to the Free Soilers unless an agreement was reached, Milton Sutliff caused an impromptu canvass of the Free Soilers to be held while the balloting was progressing, when he argued and entreated with his fellow party men, to set aside prejudice and join solidly in the support of Benjamin Wade, to which they finally agreed. The information was conveyed to the Whigs, they again presented the name of Wade and he was elected. Thus did Milton Sutliff become the main factor in bringing "Bluff Ben Wade" into national politics; he who afterward played such an important part in the abolition of slavery, and as President of the United States Senate in the shaping of the policy of this country ^{during} the turbulent administration of President Andrew Johnson.

In 1857, Milton Sutliff was elected a member of the Supreme Court of Ohio. While a member, the cases of ex parte Bushnell and Langston (reported in 9 Ohio State Reports, p 229) came before it for determination. The question raised concerned the construction of Section 2, Art. 4 of the United States Constitution, and involved indirectly the right of property in human beings—slavery. The majority of the court held that the United States had the power to legislate on the right of the owner of a slave to pursue the slave, while escaping into another state. In those cases Judges Sutliff and Brinkerhoff dissented and Sutliff gave a most voluminous and able opinion, which immediately attracted the attention of the nation, and caused it to pause and consider. Discussion of slavery was accelerated, the conscience of the nation was quickened and the injustice of slavery made more clear and acute to the people by this dissenting opinion.

"Of this opinion Mr. Sumner (United States Senator) in a letter containing expressions of warm admiration and commendation and declaring his confidence that its doctrines were law and must finally be adopted, said, "In delivering your opinion you have erected a monument to yourself in the judicial history of the country." (Copied from "Milton Sutliff, a memorial read before the State Bar Association by Judge W. T. Spear." Judge Spear being then and is now a Judge of the Supreme Court of Ohio.)

In 1860 Milton Sutliff, still a Judge of the Supreme Court, was elected a delegate to the Republican Convention held at Chicago, where Mr. Lincoln was nominated as its candidate for President. The Republican party, but recently organized and composed mainly of the followers of the old Whig party, had just absorbed the Free Soil party. Joshua R. Giddings, a power and leader of the old Free Soilers, who regarded the slavery question as one of paramount issue, offered in that convention certain resolutions, touching upon the question of slavery, which were rejected. Thereupon Mr. Giddings with many of his followers left the convention indignant at the treatment accorded the resolutions and with a feeling that he had been tricked; also full of resentfulness and set in ~~his~~ ^{his} determination to repudiate the Republican party. To present generations the great influence of Giddings, his large following among the people, and the strength of the anti-slavery party may not appear with sufficient force, yet it should be conceded that the Republican party could not have prevailed at the polls without the assistance of Giddings and the Free Soil party.

Judge Sutliff appreciating the momentous effect of the occasion and realizing the vital importance to success in having Giddings placated and satisfied, presented the matter with force and in proper light to General Nye of New York, and other leaders of the convention. They then selected the Judge as the one of all others to appease the ire and satisfy the wishes of Giddings. He went to Giddings, his long-time intimate friend and old political associate, as well as the former partner of his brother Flavel Sutliff, and entreated and pleaded, until with the exercise of great tact and the personal promise of the Judge that the resolutions recently rejected would again be offered and accepted, Giddings and his followers were persuaded to return to the convention, when, upon presentation anew, the resolutions passed. Peace prevailed; the election of the nominee made possible and being selected in Lincoln, was accomplished; and, as Giddings and Sutliff hoped and undertook to do, slavery was soon to be exterminated. Some day the American people will acknowledge to the full the services of Giddings and Milton Sutliff, the old abolitionists, as well as the Free Soilers, in wiping out that blot, slavery, from this land and nation.

GENEALOGY OF THE PURITANICAL FAMILY OF SUTLIFF.

The following are descendants of Abraham Sutliff, the founder of the New England and Puritanical family of Sutliff (A. D. 1623), through his great-grandson, Nathaniel, Jr., formerly of Deerfield, Mass., and afterwards of Durham, Conn.

ABRAHAM SUTLIFF, SR. (1).

Son of John Sutcliffe, Jr., the latter having been Groom of the Bedchamber to King Charles I. and brother of Matthew Sutcliffe, Dean of Exeter. Abraham was born about 1574, Yorkshire, Eng. Probably he lived at one time near Knaresborough, Yorkshire, where some of his children and the younger Plymptons were acquainted. After the birth of probably all of his children he immigrated from Plymouth, Eng., to the New World, finally settling about 1623 in the new settlement of Plymouth, Mass. Soon afterwards he, with immigrants, gentlemen mostly from Kentshire, Eng., who had but recently arrived and also with some of the settlers of Plymouth, Mass., who had come over on the Mayflower, went to settle on a site on the coast of Massachusetts midway between Boston and Plymouth, and named Scituate. Profiting by the sad experience and suffering of the first settlers at Plymouth, Mass., who at the beginning held their lands in common, they divided all the land on the third cliff, giving to each head of a family but one allotment of a small tract of land. Abraham, Sr., nevertheless, received at least two allotments on this cliff—probably through the influence of Dean Matthew Sutcliffe, who owned all the land in the vicinity. These two allotments Abraham, Sr., afterwards sold to two different persons. He lived for quite a period of time at Plymouth, Mass., after coming to the New World, but afterward moved to Scituate with his family, where he is supposed to have died.

CHILDREN.

2 x ABRAHAM, Jr., b. about 1610, probably Yorkshire, Eng. Other children probably, as stated by Savage, some of whom probably moved further into the interior of what is now known as Plymouth county, Mass.; changing in some instances the spelling of the name so as to become more or less unrecognizable.

ABRAHAM SUTLIFF, Jr. (2).

Son of Abraham, Sr., elected constable of Scituate, Mass., 1656; took oath of office at Plymouth, Mass., 1657. Probably acquainted when a lad in Yorkshire with John Plympton of Dedham, Medfield, and Deerfield, Mass.

CHILDREN.

3 x ABRAHAM (III.), b. about 1631, Scituate, Mass.

4 THOMAS, b. —, 163—, Scituate, Mass.

5 NATHANIEL, b. about 1638, Scituate, Mass.

Probably others.

The male children of Abraham, Jr., excepting Abraham (III.), each in early manhood migrated to help establish new settlements. Nathaniel went to Dedham and Medfield; another went a little further south and stopped at Rehoboth, while Thomas and probably another went by way of Dedham, Medfield, Rehoboth and Rhode Island to the new settlement at Branford, Conn., on the sound. This other brother is supposed to have remained in Rhode Island, and established a branch of the family. (See historical part hereof.)

NATHANIEL SUTLIFF, Sr. (5).

Son of Abraham, Jr. (2); married Hannah Plympton, daughter of Serj. John Plympton, January 31, 1665, Medfield, Mass., left home early in life, went to Dedham, probably in 1660, where he acquired property, paying his county rate July 10, 1661; thence to Medfield, 1663; thence to Deerfield, 1673, where he was killed and afterward burned in the woods by the Indians while serving under Captain Turner at the battle of Deerfield, May 19, 1676. His wife Hannah was born March 1, 1645, Dedham, Mass. She married, second, Samuel Harrington and moved to Branford, Conn., where she died, leaving issue by her second husband.

CHILDREN.

6 x HANNAH, b. Dec. 19, 1665, Medfield, Mass.

7 JUDITH, b. July 7, 1669, Medfield, Mass.

8 x NATHANIEL, Jr., b. July 27, 1672, Medfield, Mass.

9 x JOHN, b. —, 1675, Deerfield, Mass.

The genealogy of John (9) will not be brought down, since it has been placed in book form by his descendant, Bennett H. Sutcliffe.

HANNAH SUTLIEF (6).

Daughter of 5; moved to Deerfield, Mass., thence Branford, Conn., with her mother and stepfather, where she married Thomas Wheldon, Jr., 1686.

16 MARTHA, b. Jan. —, 1708, Branford, Conn.

SERJ. NATHANIEL SUTLIEF, Jr. (8).

Son of 5; married Sarah Savage, of Rehoboth, Mass. After his father was killed at the battle of Deerfield, he went in early childhood to live at Rehoboth, probably with a brother of his father, where he remained until his marriage and the birth of his first child, when he returned to Deerfield, Mass. His mother in the meanwhile had married Samuel Harrington, and gone to the home of the latter at Hadfield, near Deerfield, thence (1680) to Branford, Conn., with her husband and the other of her children by Nathaniel, Sr. Serj. Nathaniel, Jr., finally moved to Durham, Conn., about 1704, first joining the church at Branford; was elected the first constable of Durham, became a man of property and great influence in that community, and was elected representative for four successive terms. He died April 1, 1732. His wife was born March 10, 1674, at Rehoboth, and died July 4, 1733. Both Served in the Mexican War under Generals Dearborn and Winfield Scott for eighteen months. He afterwards practiced law and was a civil engineer; became a pioneer at an advanced age in the wilds of Wisconsin, where the people were busy clearing the land, and felling the forests, and as they had little wealth he had little time and slight occasion for law business, and Norman was driven to following the law and acting as civil engineer at the same time. He was a great disciplinarian, not allowing his children at the family table until they had grown and mastered the etiquette of the table. He was remarkably active and agile, and so continued throughout his life.

NOTE: Eunice Curtiss (supra) was daughter to James Curtiss, an original proprietor of Durham, Conn. James married Hannah, daughter of Lieutenant Coe, of Stratford, Conn., who became captain in 1715, and served in general assembly October, 1701. Benjamin Curtiss, father of James, was naval officer at Fairfield, Conn., 1714, and representative for many years. His father, John, married Elizabeth Wells, sister of Governor Wells, of Connecticut, and served in King Philip's war, attaining the rank of lieutenant. (See appendix, Coe family; also Curtiss family.)

DAVID SUTLIFF (909).

Son of 56; married, first, Jemima Williams, September 13, 1786, Hartland, Conn. She was born March 29, 1765, and died October 20, 1798. She was a direct descendant of Roger Williams, founder of Rhode Island. He married, second, Sylvia Case Tuller, June 26, 1799, Hartland, Conn. She died January 11, 1842. He left Hartland for Genoa, N. Y., 1792; returned to Hartland, Conn., 1794, to help his father; thence to Hartford, Conn., after his father's death; thence in 1802 to Milton, N. Y., and immediately afterward, Genoa, N. Y.; thence Dryden, Fox Corners, N. Y., in 1806, where most of his children by his second wife were reared. Lastly he went to Vernon, Trumbull county, O., where he died May —, 1843. Served in the Revolution as a short levy man while a mere lad, towards its finish, from Hartland, Conn. As such soldier he received a tract of land near Genoa, which descended to his son Henry and from the latter to the grandson Rufus. Unfortunately there is no public record attainable showing his services as such soldier, Hartland being one of the towns which kept no record of its Revolutionary soldiers.

SAMUEL SUTLIFF, Jr. (911).

Son of 56; married Ruth Granger, May 19, 1793, Grandville, Mass., born December 23, 1770; moved when thirteen years old to Hartland from Durham, Conn. Lived on a farm in northwestern part of the township, a mile or so from the Massachusetts state line. In the spring of 1797 he and several of his sisters and brothers emigrated to different parts of New York, where his mother, Eunice, joined him in 1803, and died there. In 1804, having contracted with Gideon Granger, cousin of his wife, Ruth Granger Sutliff, for a tract of land in Vernon, Trumbull county, O., he with his wife and child, joined on the way by some of his brothers and sisters and their families, started on that tedious and hazardous trip over the mountains and hills and penetrated through the trackless wilds, which journey after weeks of time brought them to their destination, settling on different farms in Vernon, O., while some went further west and settled in other counties. He served in the last part of the American Revolution, as well as did his brother David; both having enlisted as short levy men from Hartland, Conn. He served six months as a substitute for a citizen of Hartland, who had been drafted and whose service would have been a hardship to his very large family of thirteen children, whereas Samuel was but a lad, enthused with zeal and fired by the ardent patriotism of youth. He was very religious and pious. As a Revolutionary soldier he received lands in Herkimer county, N. Y. Unfortunately there is no public record showing his service, and Hartland as its historian states, kept no record of its Revolutionary soldiers. He died February 7, 1840.

RUTH (GRANGER) SUTLIFF (1439)
 (Of Royal Descent.)

Wife of Samuel Sutliff (911), and daughter of Seth and Ruth (Allen) Granger, of Suffield, Conn. Her parents were married May 4, 1751, and lived in Suffield until 1760; moved to Granville, Mass., a mile or so from Connecticut state line, from which place Seth Granger enlisted in the French War, being at the siege of Louisburg, Cape Breton, 1766. He returned broken in health and died in 1775-6. His widow, Ruth (Allen) Granger, returned to Suffield with her family, leaving Ruth Granger Sutliff to live with her relative, Oliver Phelps of Granville, Mass., who at that time was one of the prominent men of the Colonies, serving so satisfactory in the commissary department of the army as to draw from General Washington a personal letter of commendation. He with another person purchased the rights of Massachusetts to certain lands in New York and covering Livingston, Monroe and several other counties. Ruth Allen, mother of Ruth Granger Sutliff, was a daughter of Ebenezer and Mercy Allen of Suffield. This last union brought together the two branches of the Allen family, as the maiden name of Mercy was also Allen; one was a descendant of John Allen of Deerfield, killed "at the Bars" during the Indian War, the other being a member of the family of Allens which produced the well known Revolutionary General Ethan Allen. Ruth Granger Sutliff well recalled the maiden name of her maternal grandmother to be Jaquish. (See appendix, Allen family genealogy.)

Ruth (Granger) Sutliff was distinguished for her piety and religious fervor, as well as the gift of a remarkable memory. Frequently at divine service the pastor would appeal to her for the words of a quotation from the Bible, and at times for the number of the chapter and verse of the quotation. She could recite from memory the whole of Milton's Paradise Lost. Her children were raised in strict observance of the teachings of the church and she instilled in each great reverence for the Word, and they attributed to her the credit for their successes in life. After the death of her husband in 1840 she visited her son Flavel at Jefferson, O., at that time a partner of Hon. Joshua R. Giddings, and also the family of Giddings, and while at the Giddings home wrote a letter, which the present writer has had in his possession, on a cheese for a table. She went to Cherry Valley, now Roseborn, N. Y., to visit her brother and sisters. Returning to Vernon she sold the homestead, moved with her oldest son, Allen C., to a farm on the then frontier of Iowa—Cedar township, where she died August 7, 1843, being the first person buried in the township, which was the farm of her son, Samuel H., and a part of which is now the township cemetery. As a member of the well known Granger family, and through the same stock as the Adams family (which has furnished the United States with two of its Presidents) she was of royal descent. A copy of such ancestry as given by Browning in his work on "Americans of Royal Descent" is to be found in the appendix hereto under the heading, "Granger Genealogy."

ALLEN CURTISS SUTLIFF (1433).

Son of 911; married Nancy Baldwin, January 9, 1822; born Waterbury, Conn., March 18, 1804; moved (1838) to Cedar township, Johnson county, Ia., and settled in the midst of the forest, clearing a patch to raise corn and vegetables, enduring the hardships of frontier life for years. He died November 6, 1873. She died April —, 1883. Both were highly honored for their sterling worth and noble character.

HARVEY S. SUTLIFF (1446).

MILTON SUTLIFF (1631).

Son of 911; born and reared on a farm when the country was but a wilderness and the pioneers were in the midst of clearing the thick forests and while cultivation of the land was made between the stumps of the clearances, his opportunities for schooling were limited. Displaying in early youth a taste for the ancient languages and having attracted the attention of "Priest" Coe, a highly educated and successful teacher and a preacher then at Vernon, O., he secured and improved the invitation to lay a thorough foundation by studying under this teacher and preacher; borrowing and paying by the week to others for the books he used for such purpose.

While young he taught school in the north, and afterward taught in the states of Mississippi and Louisiana, where he came in contact with slavery and learned to abhor it with the whole intensity of his nature.

With his savings from teaching he was enabled to attend the Western Reserve College at Hudson, O., (now the Western Reserve University at Cleveland, O.), where he graduated in 1833 with his taste for the Greek and Latin languages so strengthened and developed that all through his life he kept conveniently at hand and read during his leisure moments as a diversion, as well as a pleasure, in the original, the writings of the Greek and Latin authors, with whose works he displayed such unusual knowledge and familiarity.

During his attendance at college the question of the abolition of slavery began to take root among the people and agitated the students. He played no small part in the debates then occurring with increased frequency in the college, as well as in helping to shape public opinion by going to the towns in northern Ohio, to deliver addresses against slavery. His anti-slavery sentiments became intense and his efforts to abolish the evil has not received the credit to which they are entitled. He became a prominent member of the "underground railway," a chain of towns and farms stretching from the slave states to Canada, and used as relays in the secret transportation into Canada of escaping or fugitive slaves. One of these stations was located on a farm in Trumbull county, north of Warren, and belonging to his brother Levi. During this time he became associated in the anti-slavery movement with, and knew intimately, John Brown, Greeley, Giddings, Wade and other men of national reputation, whose friendship he retained until death.

In 1850 he was elected to the upper house of the Ohio legislature, where he immediately became a leader and exercised a controlling influence. During all this time he was forging to the front in his profession until his practice extended over the northern part of Ohio and was equal to that of any other lawyer of the time, and he became one of the leaders, and a giant in the profession. In 1857 he was elected to the Supreme Court of Ohio, where the decisions rendered by him were marked by their clear and succinct logic, great analytical power and learning. He was selected as a delegate to the Republican Convention, in 1860, which nominated Lincoln, where, as was to be expected, he took an important part. After the war he believed in a liberal treatment of the south, and, therefore, favored the election to the presidency of his old-time friend, Horace Greeley; when, against his wishes, he was nominated as the candidate of the liberal party for congress, against another of his friends, James A. Garfield. Although the district was a Republican stronghold, he succeeded in reducing the Republican majority, an act performed by few indeed of the candidates of the Liberal party during that election. Thereafter he devoted himself to the practice of his profession until April 24, 1879, when, while in consultation with one of his clients at his desk, he suddenly expired; lamented and revered by his neighbors and friends and loved as a father by the descendants of his brothers.

He was a man of large frame, six feet or more in height, full of physical and mental vigor, and possessed with an intensity of purpose. Of an even balanced temperament and a mind of a judicial turn, he was calm and slow to conclude; and then not until he had made a thorough research, heard all sides and given due weight to all matters. He always stood ready to modify his views upon proper presentation of facts. He possessed a keen sense of wit and of the ludicrous, and always was ready to throw the cloak of charity over the faults and shortcomings of others. His literary tastes were of the highest, being a great lover and a thorough student of the Bible, Shakespeare, Milton, all the English poets and standard writers. He retained the impress of his early and religious training, yet was he liberal in his views and tolerant of the views of others. His thoughts were of the purest, frowning upon all utterances in the least wise shady, vehemently condemning the use of profanity, and discouraging the use of slang. His conduct and speech were at all times exemplary. His was a generous nature, doing good and rendering financial aid at all times to the deserving, though in many cases strangers to him.

Never having married, he exercised a constant watch and care over the descendants of his brothers, rendering material aid to all of such. In the case of some of them, he assumed the place and responsibility of a father, providing for their care and maintenance and supervising their education. The writer cannot too strongly express his gratitude, reverence and love for this great and good man, and be too thankful for the great good fortune in having been tutored by him and brought almost daily for quite awhile under his elevating and good influence; and in having him provide for the education, maintenance and training of the writer. Such men as Milton Sutliff are indeed rare, and their lives necessarily enrich mankind. (For more information as to this grand man, see the historical part hereof.)

Of a list of twenty-eight inhabitants residing in East Branch of Waterbury (now Wolcott), Conn., subject to pay taxes in 1760, there was included Joseph, Sr., for eighty-six pounds, and Joseph for seven pounds. The homestead was probably "at the foot of Chestnut Hill on the old road going directly up the hill." In those days the number of different trades were limited and the one held in the highest esteem was that of tailoring, and this he adopted, as one of his legs was defective, or shorter than the other so that he walked with a cane, or crutch. During the Revolution he was appointed as one of a committee of fifteen to solicit articles of clothing for the Continental soldiers (Hist. of Waterbury, P. 442). This entitles his descendants to join the Sons of the Revolution. He and his two wives are buried at Wolcott, Conn.

2128 ALBERT COTTERILL, b. March 15, 1898, San Francisco, Calif.

2129 FRANK CURTISS, b. Feb. 26, 1900, San Francisco, Calif.

NOTE: William Albert Sutcliffe, son of Anson (2110), was a lawyer in Minnesota, who met with gratifying success in his profession; and fully realizing his duty to the children of his brothers and sisters, and especially his sister Eliza, he felt that he could the better perform such duty by remaining single and devoting his life and estate to their welfare. He took great interest in the lad Edgar Sutliff Curtiss, his nephew, and the latter, partly out of high regard for this uncle, changed his name to Edgar Curtiss Sutcliffe and is now a respected citizen of San Francisco. William Albert was known as a conscientious, able and faithful lawyer, as well as man.

JOHN SUTLIFFE (2112).

Son of 2105; married, first, Mary A. Dayton, November 22, 1828, New Haven, Conn., born September 29, 1805, and died May 6, 1841; second, Rebecca Miles at Cheshire, Conn. When 16 years old he left home, having bought his time from his father and agreeing to pay therefor $100; secured work on a farm at $7 per month including board; afterwards secured employment in a factory at ivory comb making, paying his father, and in the meanwhile saving so that he was able to form a partnership with three other young men for the carrying on of a new venture in the comb business. His habits of industry and economy, as well as his financial ability, attracted the attention of his neighbors so that he was solicited to join some of them in the manufacture of furniture castors and to relinquish his comb manufacturing business. The new business started on a very small scale, and with close application and the use of sound judgment and business principles, it soon was on the road to prosperity; and expanded so that it included the making of all kinds of furniture trimmings. It became necessary to construct an extensive plant, including a large brass and iron foundry, which now employs hundreds of hands. He was a man of quick intuition, grasping at a glance the conditions and opportunities; also he was one who was constantly absorbing knowledge and information from others. He died June 23, 1897, Meriden, Conn., highly respected and honored by his fellow townsmen for his uprightness and integrity.

BENJAMIN ALLEN

Son of John (supra) returned to Suffield from "The Bars"; married Abigail Jaquish, of Suffield (the Suffield records say of Bradford), 1718. She died October —, 1746. He died February 23, 1742.

CHILDREN.

Abigail, Ebenezer, Susanna, Jaquish, Ruben and xxRUTH, b. Feb. 22, 1733; m. Seth Granger (Sutliff ancestor).

NOTE: Hon. Milton Sutliff made a memorandum to the effect that his mother, Ruth (Granger) Sutliff, told him she had learned from her mother, Ruth Allen, that the maiden name of the mother of Ruth Allen was Jaquish. Some writers are inclined to hold that Ruth Allen was a daughter of Ebenezer Allen and Mercy Allen, of Suffield, and that the marriage of Ebenezer and Mercy was a union of the two well known Allen families, one being originally of Deerfield, Mass., thence to Suffield (a part of them); the other being of Windsor, thence Suffield. The latter having furnished Ethan Allen, a distinguished Revolutionary General. (See Seth Granger, in Granger Genealogy.)
