PREFACE.

The family record herein submitted to the William White posterity by Thomas White and Samuel White embraces not only records of families, but incidents, historical facts, and personal reminiscences which are calculated to show the great part taken in the colonization and building up of our great and prosperous country.

Peregrine White being the first-born white child in New England, and the active part taken by Resolved's and Peregrine's posterity in shaping and establishing our institutions, morally and religiously, offer and impart an elevating influence extending throughout our vast domain.

No traditional statements have been introduced into this work which do not rest upon substantial grounds, deemed equally entitled to credit to those of historical records. After the death of William White his widow married Gov. Edward Winslow, and Resolved and Peregrine were introduced into their family, receiving those principles of religion and love of freedom which have shown in the after life of their posterity. The character of this work is to disseminate into this large family a desire to imitate their virtues and pass lightly over the errors of our Pilgrim Fathers, and if this is accomplished the object of the authors will be attained.

CHAPTER I.

WHITE MEMORIAL.

It should be the pleasant duty of every descendant of that earnest band of men and women who took fortune and life in their hands, daring so much to secure a free home for us, to turn to that Past, and let our honored ancestry be an inspiration and benediction to our lives.

Sacred writing records the close connection between posterity and ancestry when it says, "children's children are the crown of old men, and the glory of children are their fathers."

Ancestors and descendants reflect honor or dishonor upon each other. Virtuous and godly children are the gems in "the crown" of an honorable ancestry, and in filial honor they in their turn cherish them as their "glory."

We are a derivation from the past, and ought to be considered and weighed in connection with it. And it will embalm in the memory of the living the lessons, example, and obligation of an honorable lineage. And as the ancient Romans, when emigrating to foreign climes, took with them the carved images of their fathers, setting them in the place of honor in their new homes, so it sets the lives of our fathers before us to be an inspiration to our lives which we can transmit to our children, bidding them to hold the sacred trust entire, and so teach their children.

It is well for us to go back in that past which we would honor, and learn the causes that led to the emigration of our fathers and the planting of the germ of this great republic.

Puritanism began to rise with John Wyclif in the fourteenth century. He could feel, think, and act. His great heart was moved when he saw the "honors of the church were given to unholy men ; priests do eat up the people as though it was bread." And he called for purity, for reform in the church of God ; he tended and watered the weak plant of liberty in the heart of man. Bold men like Wyclif, Huss, Luther, and Calvin looked to see what the Bible taught ; they read, thought, and decided for themselves. Their decision was thundered in speech and action. Men gathered around them, for truth made them powerful ; it was fresh and clear, not smothered with the ceremonies of an old organization which tends to corruption.

The term Puritan was first applied to men of high standing in the Church of England, but soon became a term of reproach and ridicule and then persecution. King James I said of them, they were "pests in the church and commonwealth, liars and thieves." Men and women were murdered and exiled, yet these sturdy English men and women would not yield the God-given right to think their own thoughts and to worship God in the way they thought right. And now we thank them tenderly, reverently, for their "rebellion," for the world is reaping the harvest they sowed in tears and blood. This freedom to think and act had grown to such proportions in its century of persecutions, that kings and laws became to them as snares. Country and home lost their charms, and life and property were risked and often lost. They gathered together with difficulty and parted with fear, until in 1607 they resolved to become pilgrims and exiles to a strange land. Through the love of Jesus and the extreme persecutions they suffered, they became deeply attached to each other, and determined that naught but death would sever them. Under great difficulties they left England, thinking to better their condition in Amsterdam, Holland. Not finding sustenance there some went to Leyden. One thing gave them much comfort : Under the care and superintendence of their beloved pastor, John Robinson, they enjoyed great freedom of worship.

But this proved to be a place not altogether satisfactory. America had been discovered, and with its discovery the character of its inhabitants had become familiar to them. Notwithstanding all its evils, the Pilgrims were determined to seek a place where they could worship God as they thought right and proper; and we see them preparing to emigrate with almost every obstacle flung in their way which persecution could invent.

Yet "sore was the trial and grievous their misery," before they were able to settle with their families and beloved pastor in the "fair and beautiful city of Leyden" in 1609, which was their home for ten years, and their church increased to three hundred members.

Yet they knew they had not found the home of "Religion and Freedom"; they must not rest but seek farther. "Old age and grim and grizzled poverty was coming on them as an armed man," and they must "lay the foundation for propagating the Gospel of Christ in those remote parts of the world."

So they resolved to seek the new world, and on the morning of the 22d of July, 1620, a few persons at Delft-Haven knew that a small bark of sixty tons, called the Speedwell, was prepared for a voyage. The living freight of men, women and children gathered on her deck; some old, but mostly young. They had come from Leyden, and with them came their pastor, John Robinson. They believed they had found the right way, and were now to go forward on it, leaving behind the greater part of their church and their minister. They were sad, but hopeful; their conversation was low, but earnest. Then their pastor, that "blessed apostle of piety," knelt down on the deck, and around him his companions; he stretched out his hands and cried from a bursting heart to the Lord. And we shall do well to remember what he said.

The parting scenes on board the ship brought tears to the eyes of the by-standers, when they embraced each other with their beloved pastor, Robinson. Oh, the prayer he sent up to heaven at that time, when most of them were to see each other no more, and their farewell look was given! Our dear ancestors, Father William and Susanna White, with their first-born, Resolved, received that last benediction, never more to see their dear pastor. Though the seventh generation, we feel the blessing of that benediction and that prayer to-day. May we emulate their virtues and honor their memory.

It would be hard to say which were the most bereft, those who went or those who stayed; but that going marks the march of man toward the future, and toward Freedom. They sailed for Southampton, in England, where awaited the larger ship, the Mayflower, which was to lead the way to the new world. On the 5th of August, 1620, the two ships with one hundred and twenty persons stood out to sea; but soon the Speedwell began to leak, and they must return to Old England without delay. After eight days' delay in Dartmouth they again sailed, on the 21st of August; but soon the signals told of further trouble, and it was decided that the Speedwell should put back to England. (It was supposed to have been fraud on the part of the captain, he having been bribed by the Dutch.) And on the 6th of September, 1620, the Mayflower set sail for America, solitary and alone, but with courage and trust in God.

The voyage was long and tempestuous, yet with an undaunted purpose she opened a way toward the setting sun. They had now been on the sea sixty-five days, when on the 9th of November the low line of the New World gladdened their eyes; they thanked God. They were weary and sick. Bleak and barren as the shore was, it seemed delightful after the long voyage. On Monday, the 13th of November, sixteen men went ashore to explore, "with every man his musket, sword, and corselet, headed by Myles Standish." Winter had now set in, December with its cheerless skies and bitter winds had come, and they had found no place yet fit to rest. The captain of the Mayflower was impatient to be gone. They sought for a convenient harbor and a site to land. It seemed as if God was against them, but they would not give up; their end was not yet to be. They finally gained the land, and found it a small island (now Clark's Island) "this being the last day of the week, they dried their stuff, fixed their pieces, rested themselves, and returned thanks for their many deliverances; and the next day kept their first Christian sabbath ashore." This was the ninth of December, 1620 (O. S.). "On Monday we sounded the harbor, and found it good for our shipping. We marched into the land, and found a place very good for situation; so we returned to our ship again with good news to the rest of our people, which did much to comfort their hearts." This Monday is what we know as Forefather's Day. It is hallowed time, and that ground is holy ground. But before they had found a place to land and settle, those men of justice and sense, Carver, Bradford, White, Brewster, and Winslow (the four latter educated men), drew up, on the lid of Elder Brewster's chest in the cabin of the Mayflower, an instrument which established the principle of individual liberty as a right which has influenced the destiny of man through all succeeding history. And on the 11th day of November, 1620 (O. S.), each man was asked to sign this compact:

"In the name of God, Amen. We, whose names are under written, the loyal subjects of our dread sovereign, Lord King James, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith, and so forth, having undertaken, for the glory of God, and advancement of the Christian faith and honor of our King and country, a voyage to plant the first colony in the northern parts of Virginia ; do by these presents solemnly and mutually in the presence and one of another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic for our better ordering and preservation and furtherance of the ends aforesaid and by virtue hereof to enact, constitute, and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions, and offices from time to time as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the colony unto which we promise all due submission and obedience. In witness whereof we have hereunder subscribed our names at Cape Cod the 11th of November in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, King James of England, France and Ireland the eighteenth and of Scotland the fifty-fourth, Anno Domini 1620.

This compact may also be found engraved on a stone in the yard of Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth, Mass.

This compact was signed by forty one men, who with their families constituted the one hundred and one. "This was the birth of constitutional liberty, thus was organized the Rights of Man." And the sixth signer of this remarkable compact was our honored ancestor William White.

It is recorded at Leyden that William Brewster was a fustian maker (maker of cotton cloth). William White from London and Robert Cushman (who came to America later) from Canterbury were wool carders; Samuel Fuller from London was a say (silk) maker; Edward Winslow from London, and William Brewster were printers, and Degory Priest from London was a hatter. Other exiles from various parts of England were also recorded.

On the passage from England one died and was buried at sea, and one hundred arrived at Plymouth. By the spring of 1621 one half of their number were dead. Among that number was our father, William White, the foremost to face danger and fatigue. With us, his descendants, we not only cherish his memory, but feel a thrill of honor, decorated with pride, that we sprung from an ancestor whose principles, morals, and virtues were so noble. In this colony, with such good and wholesome laws, based upon religion, education, and morals, with all the religious privileges man can desire, which has been handed down and improved year by year for two hundred and seventy-five years, establishing our present common school system, which has penetrated our whole country.

While we try to realize the past, the hand of an all-wise Providence shines through the whole rise and progress of our sainted fathers as they left England and colonized our country. We do not claim for them perfection, nor do we think them free from error ; yet the superstructure was so full of the life of Jesus Christ that it has illuminated our whole country, and we hope it will never be extinguished, the history of our Pilgrim Fathers and their offspring who settled New England, giving tone and laying the foundation for a glorious republic, and the rights to worship according to the dictates of their conscience. Yet it was a struggle of years before it was fully accomplished and the superstructure laid of our common-school system, which is the bulwark of liberty, and as long as supported and cherished will sustain a republican form of government.

Besides the living monuments of the descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers is the stone monument to the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth, Mass., as shown in the frontispiece and described as follows :

CHAPTER II.

WILLIAM WHITE TO THE FIFTH GENERATION.

WILLIAM¹ son of Bishop John White, mar. Susanna Fuller in Leyden, Holland, July 1, 1612, by Rev. John Robinson. She was a sister of Samuel Fuller who also came in the Mayflower.

Children :

1. Resolved + b. in Leyden, 1614; mar. Apr. 8, 1640, Judith Vassall.
2. Peregrine + b. in Cape Cod Harbor, Nov., 1620; mar. about 1647, Sarah Basset.

WILLIAM WHITE'S "BREECHES BIBLE."—A WELL-PRESERVED BOOK THAT CAME OVER IN THE MAYFLOWER.—INTERESTING HISTORIC FACTS IN THE ORIGINAL MEMORANDA.

There seems to be in Hartford a genuine and unquestionable copy of an old Bible printed in London in 1588, and a part of it in 1586. It was brought over in the Mayflower. A still earlier edition was printed at Geneva, twenty-six years earlier. The later one is owned by Mr. S. W. Cowles, 891 Main street, who bought it, two or three years ago, of Charles M. Taintor of Manchester.

The book is bound, in old style, in boards and leather, but whether it is the original binding we cannot say. At all events the book is wonderfully well preserved. It is sixteen years older than a copy, containing the same famous translation, which is (or was) owned by Horace Johnson. This edition is called the Breeches Bible because of the translation of the original word, in describing the shame following Eve's "fall," not as an "apron," but "breeches" made of sewed fig-leaves. What greatly adds to the interest and value of this edition owned by Mr. Cowles is the evident fact that the book was owned by William White, in England, in 1608; was brought over by him in the "Mayflower" on that now world-famous voyage; and that it contains, in ancient handwriting, on the margin of the pages, and on blank pages, a good deal of writing by White, whose son, Peregrine, has become noted historically as the first white child born on these shores. This old Bible actually contains the elder White's record of this domestic event, as well as other facts in his family record—his marriage, etc. Here is a part of the record, written on the margin of one of the leaves of this old Bible :

Sonne born to Susanna White, Dec. 19, 1620. yt six o'clock morning.

Then follows a line or more not very distinct, but clearly referring to the domestic event as a cause of "thanksgiving." The letter e, as in "meet," is always written much as people now make an o.

There is a great deal of scribbling on the blank pages, as on those separating Old and New Testament, Apocrypha, and the original old hymns by Sternhold and Hopkins; for these latter, with the alleged music, are contained in the book, and were printed two years before the main part. This scribbling, and childish work of picture-making, seems to have been done after William White's death, and apparently by some of his children or grandchildren.

One grotesque little image, in very pale ink on the margin of a leaf, has under it the name, Peregrine—as if meant for him.

The leaf-margins, for a considerable space, are much covered with writing—for paper was scarce in those early days—and some lines almost cover others, making it difficult occasionally to decipher all.

Perhaps the oldest of all the entries is this,—in pale ink, on one of the margins, and in a handwriting that fitted with the fashion of writing in the year of Milton's birth:

WILLIAM WHITE,
his Book,
1608.

Another scene, and one more historic, is referred to in this entry:

Left Delft haven, in Holland. sailed for Southampton, August 1619.

Another memorandum, or rather two, are these:

Leyden, Holland, March 1609.

At Amsterdam, Holland, April, Anno Domini 1608.

Here is another,—of much historic interest now. It must be borne in mind that the dates of the month are according to old style:

William White sailed from Plymouth in ye ship Mayflower ye 6th day of September, Anno Domini 1620. Nov. ye 9th came to the harbour called Cape Cod Harbour, in ye dauntless ship.

And perhaps a later had added,—

And brought back for William Brewster 1622-3.

The book had apparently passed into the possession of the Brewsters soon after White's death, in 1621. Their entries are usually dated "1622-3."

It is a notable circumstance that the children's rude drawings of objects, when they include the "metin-house," make it just like the "old original" four-side roof, with a projection at the apex, that was built in 1638-'40 for the First church in Hartford.

On one margin is a picture of an Indian, drawing a bow, and here is written,—

Wee [were] greeted thus when wee came in on ye shore.

Another entry is this:

Some of our strong men went on board [on shore?] and put to flight the natives whom we saw. They being afraid of the Powder from our gunns.

Here is a memorandum, made at the time, of an occurrence which has become as famous, in poetry and in history, as the Conquest of England by the Normans, 1066, or the Declaration of Independence, 1776:

Landed yt Plymouth. December ye 11th, 1620.

One margin contains these entries by two different persons apparently:

This book is the property of William White and his wife Susanna who embarked on board the Mayflower from Plymouth, England.

We road with great Comfort on board ye Ship Lyon [in some entries written Lion]. The promises we find in this Book.

We took this Book with our Company on board ye ship Lion, 18th July A. D. 1632. Returned yt to William Brewster for Mr. William White who came with the Plymouth Company and was made the Propertie of William Brewster for his Estate—His Book—Brought back to Plymouth.

These memoranda, and many more, are on the margins of the leaves of the Book of Common Prayer, which precedes the Bible. One event—and to the lonely and anxious settlers, after that awful first winter in the New World, it was indeed an event—and a saddening one too—was the departure of the little vessel that had borne them across the pathless deep. It is thus referred to in the antique memorandum:

Ye Ship Mayflower departed from us, in ye month of—March ye 12th, 1621.

We found ye ship Lion, 1632, and was greatly rejoysed.
Came Roger Williams on board Ship.

There is more, but it runs into the print and is not very legible. A good picture of the ship Lion is drawn on the margin.

The margin of one page has this, in a peculiarly marked “ancient” style of hand-writing, such as was customary in Shakespeare’s time:

John Carver, Sonne of James Carver, Lincolnshire, Ye man, called by ye grace of God, Governor of our Colony, Dec. ye 10th, 1620, for one year.

Some of the family records, as that of John Howland, date back to the days in Old England, before the Mayflower and her voyage had been thought of. Some of the pictures of Indians, drawing the bow, seem to be the work of older persons than children. One touching reference is made to the necessity of levelling the graves, that were made in that terrible first winter, in order that the spying Indians might not know the truth as to the actual number the little colony had lost. (It lost fifty, just half.)

Governor William Bradford appears, among others of the Mayflower company, in these "marginal notes" in the genealogical line.

The name of "John Cole, Cole's Hill," can be deciphered out of much overlying scribbling; there was and is such a hill in Plymouth.

THE OLD VOLUME.

While the imprint of the Old and "Newe" Testament in this antiquated volume bears date 1588, the title page to the collection of Sternhold and Hopkins's hymns is dated 1586. The earlier edition printed at Geneva, in 1560, was from a translation by "three English exiles"—Whittingham, Gilby, and Sampson. This later edition of 1588 says on its title page that it is "Translated according to the Ebrew and Greeke, and conferred with the best translations in diuers Languages, with most profitable Annotations vpon all the hard places, and other things of great importance, as may appear in the Epistle to the Reader."

It is of course printed in the old-time "black letter," much like German text. The binding seems to have been renewed, but it is getting very old and brittle.

The collection of Sternhold and Hopkins' ("and others'") songs—an arrangement for singing David's Psalms which would have made David crawl—was followed in the attempted congregational "singing" in the Bay Colony for a long time. The title-page in this old Bible thus introduces them:

Whole Book of Psalms.

Collected into English meetre by Thomas Sternhold, John Hopkins and others.

Conferred with the Hebrue, with apt Notes to Sing them Withall.

Set foorth and allowed to be sung in all Churches, of all the people together before and after Morning and Evening Prayer: as also before and after Sermons, and moreouer in priuate houses, for their godly solace and comfort: laying apart all ungodly songs and balades, which tend onely to the nourishing of vice, and corrupting of youth.

1586.

One of the prayers is "A Prayer Against the Divell."

ITS HISTORY.

Not much seems to be known of this old Bible during the centuries that have elapsed since the first Pilgrims had it. It is clear that after being brought over in the Mayflower, it went back, after White's death in 1621, to England, and was again brought back; this time in 1622-23. Its subsequent experiences are not recorded. Mr. Cowles bought it in 1892 of Charles W. Taintor (now deceased) of Manchester. The price he paid for it was $12. At present he might perhaps get twelve times twelve dollars for it.

Mr. Taintor's father wrote this note about the old volume:

MANCHESTER, Dec. 28, 1892.

S. W. COWLES, Esq.,

Dear Sir: In regard to the Old Breeches Bible, there can be no rational doubt that it was brought over to Plymouth by Mr. William White, who died there before April A. D. 1621. The White family records, written on the blank pages and margins of the old Bible, are sufficient to confirm such a belief, for no other family in Plymouth, without they were allied to the Whites by consanguinity, would have been likely to have written so much on the leaves in connection with and respecting the White family.

It seems that the Bible passed from the White family into the Brewster family, as the name of Brewster occurs in the book frequently—(probably written by a son or grandson of Elder William Brewster). The historical facts recorded on its leaves were written (to judge from the style of the handwriting) two hundred years ago, when those facts were fresh in the memory of the writer. It was also the fashion of those days to write passages of Scripture on blank pages and margins of books as we find them in this old Bible. A portion of the writing was doubtless done by the son or grandson of William White, and a portion by a Brewster of collateral generation from the emigrants.

Yours truly,

CHARLES M. TAINTOR.

The owner has this note:

I bought this book from Mr. Charles W. Taintor, Manchester, in December, 1888 (I think). Called to see him in December, 1892, learned he had died about one year ago. His father looked over the entries in the book and afterwards sent me this letter. Also called on Judge Adams: see his letter on the opposite page.

S. W. COWLES.

HARTFORD, June, 1893.

This is the letter from Judge Adams:

HARTFORD, Dec. 30, 1892.

From such examination as I have been able to give to the Bible above referred to, this morning, I see no reason to doubt that the volume was owned by William White, as early as 1608, and brought over by him in the Mayflower.

S. W. ADAMS.

State Librarian Hoadly, perhaps as good an authority as any in New England, substantially confirms Judge Adams's view.—Hartford Times.

William White was one of that little "handful of God's own wheat" which had been flailed by adversity, tossed and winnowed until earthly selfishness had been beaten away from them, and left them pure seed, fit for the planting of a new world, and their journal says at that time, "being now passed the vast ocean, and sea of troubles before their preparation to seek out a place for habitation, they fell on their knees and blessed the Lord, the God of Heaven, who had brought them over the vast and furious ocean and delivered them from all peril and miseries thereof." Therefore it was with this faith and trust in God that our little band were able to lift up their voices in prayer and song mingling with the sound of winds and waters, consecrating our American shores.

He had done what he could and was called up higher soon after his arrival here. William White d. March 14, 1621 (some record as it February 21), and his widow, Susanna, mar. (2nd) May 12, 1621, Edward Winslow, Jr., of Droitwich, Eng., q. v.

Mrs. Susannah (White) Winslow deceased Oct. 1680. She was our Foremother, whom it is meet we should rise up and call blessed.

We must think of her as the brave young mother, who had left the old home of tender, living ties and holy graves, for the hardships of the new and untried life; think of her with her babe in the tossing Mayflower, when “’Twas bleak and wild on old Cape Cod,

 ’Mid the fierce November gale,
 While there the little Mayflower roamed
 With a lingering stranger’s sail;
 And close a fair young creature clasped
 Her helpless infant’s form,
 And cheerily sang through the chilling blast,
 ‘Oh! a mother’s heart is warm.’”

Let our hearts thrill with reverence when we mention our Foremothers, our Forefathers.

RESOLVED² White came to New England with his Pilgrim parents, Mr. William White and wife. Green as Green Harbor be her memory.

Resolved, mar. (2d), August 5, 1674, Abigail, widow of Wm. Lord, of Salem, b. 1606. She made her will in 1682 and was living in 1684. He owned lands in Scituate in 1638 at the place afterwards sold to Lieut. Isaac Buck, a half mile south of the Harbor. In 1640 he had a grant by order of the Colony Court, of 100 acres upland marsh on Belle House Neck adjoining Mr. Vassal's farm on the south-east. He had also other lands adjoining by deed of gift from Mr. Vassal in 1646. In 1662 he sold his house to Isaac Buck and removed to Marshfield. He seems to have had two houses, the one near Buck's Corner and the other at Belle House Neck. In Marshfield he settled near his brother, Peregrine, on the South river. None of their children settled at Scituate. Their posterity is found in Bristol County as well as Plymouth. Some of them may have removed to Barbadoes.

He was one of the original twenty-six purchasers of the first precinct in Middleboro, March, 1662, from the Indian chief, Wampatuck. They returned to Plymouth during Phillip's war. Several of them sold their shares and did not return.

Resolved d. not far from 1680. He made two depositions, which are on file in the office of the Clerk of Courts.

He settled on an estate given him by his father-in-law, lying between North and South rivers, not far from their united outlet to the ocean. This tract was early granted to Mr. Bassett by the freemen of the Colony. Mr. Bassett was one of the land committee of the Colony and was a large land holder. He resided in Duxbury; removed to Bridgewater, probably about 1645 or '48, as at that time Bridgewater was settled by freemen from Duxbury. All Duxbury freemen were given lots to remove there, but only few moved. But many of their sons settled there afterwards. Mr. Bassett d. in Bridgewater, 1667. He left a large and valuable library for that period to his son-in-law, Peregrine White. Children:

(I.) Deacon Jonathan, mar. 1717, Dorcas Hamblin.

(II.) Ebenezer, mar. 1727, Mary Smith.

Jonathan settled on Indian land in South Yarmouth at which place tombstones are to be seen of four generations, the third, fourth, fifth, and seventh from Peregrine. The spot where the old house used to stand is still known. He also lived in Middleboro, Mass. Jonathan's grandson, Joseph Jr., had a son Peregrine, who had six children, (I.) Peregrine, now about 84 years. (II.) William, 82. He has a cane which was brought over in the Mayflower by William White and handed down from generation to generation. (III.) Alfred, aged about 79. (IV.) Abner, aged 75. (V.) Taken from the Old Colony reports.

On the Marshfield church records appears the following in Rev. Edward Thompson's hand-writing (record previous having been lost or destroyed): “Capt. Peregrine White, the first born child of New England was admitted into the church in the 78th year of his age.” On the occasion of which Rev. Mr. Thompson preached from Matt. 20: 6-7. “And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle? They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.”

It is stated that he was a son always filial and loving, visiting his mother daily, riding on a large black horse, his coat buttoned with buttons the size of a silver dollar. In the Boston Weekly News Letter of July 31, 1704, the fifteenth number of the first newspaper printed in New England, appeared the notice of his death. “Marshfield, July 20, Capt. Peregrine White of this town died here the 20th inst., aged 83 years and 8 months. He was vigorous and of a comely aspect to the last.”

The exact spot of his interment is unknown, but probably in the Winslow burying-ground where his mother was buried. An old book, “The Life of John Eliot,” written by Cotton Mather about 1695, once owned by Peregrine, is now in the possession of E. L. B. Howard, Cambridge, Mass. It bears the autograph of Peregrine White, 1702, two years previous to his death.

The following is taken from a tomb-stone in the Winslow cemetery at Marshfield, in memory of the pastor that preached the sermon at the time of Peregrine's being admitted into the church:

He was the grandson of Rev. Wm. Tompson of Braintree, was the fourth pastor of the Marshfield church, 14 October, 1696. He preached the sermon for his own ordination from Isaiah IX, 10, and had before 1690 been a teacher. He deceased suddenly, March 16, 1704 or 5, aged 40.

It is very old, consisting of only four rooms. The old chest he brought with him is also in Concord. The house he first lived in was a mere wigwam built on the side of a hill where the hill formed a part of the house. He was a well educated man, well off in England and quite intelligent as was all the party that settled in Concord who came over with him.

It was called Trinity church and was connected with the Episcopal church St. Andrews of Hanover, the rector officiating there one Sabbath in four. Mr. Davenport was the first minister who preached there. Mr. Griswold also officiated there. A new church was erected in 1826, two miles north west of the first building, only an old graveyard marking the site.

(The following is what I have collected from ancient documents which came into my possession at the decease of my parents, which were preserved and treasured by them, making a clear record of the White family for six generations, which I have with pleasure prepared for all who may take an interest in our ancestry. T. W.)

I find a deed dated in the eighth year of the reign of George III. Thomas White, Jr., to — Marbell of Scituate, province of Massachusetts Bay. He, by profession, was a cord wainer. Thomas bought a farm in Dorchester, sold out, and moved to Bolton.

He died about the year 1770; and his wife, Rachel, died about 1794. His son, William, then bought out the farm at the age of about 33, and agreed to support his mother during her natural life. I have the bond stating what he should give yearly, viz.:

May 6, 1736, a letter was sent by John White, Jr., to Mr. Elisha Callender, Elder of the Baptist Church in Boston, and appended to the letter was this: "Rev. Sir,—We, the Subscribers, in behalf of the whole Society of Baptists at Marshfield, do desire you to come to Marshfield and there administer the ordinance of Baptism to the persons above named; and also that one of the brethren of the Church who dwell in Boston may accompany yourself. And the reason we are thus desirous is . . . and we also have a great desire to see yourself once more at Marshfield doing your ministerial office. And further, we would inform you that those persons who have desired baptism, are persons of unblemished character, and persons who we believe are well grounded in the Christian faith. Sir, this comes from your hearty well-wishers:

She was Marshfield's honored historian, working untiringly to rescue from oblivion, preserve and hand down correctly to coming generations, the history of the past, with its hardships and triumphs. Considering herself a link between the past and future, she left money (from her not abundant means) assisted by friends, to erect a monument on the Ancient Burying Hill, to the early settlers of Green Harbor, determined that “They should not sleep forever

Unhonored in their graves,
Who braved for us the battle shower,
And walked the stormy waves.
Their dust is calling from the ground,
With strong and steady cry;
For unlettered are their spots of rest,
And their names are passing by.”

The brother died unmarried, July 26, 1883, aged 81 years. Sarah remains alone in the old home, an able, intellectual woman. When she passes away, an untold amount of correct historical knowledge will be lost. The only descendants of that family are the family of their half-brother, Luther Thomas, Jr.

Following is a copy of a hymn written by Vassel White, on the occasion of the dedication of a church in central New York :

A DEDICATORY ANTHEM.

With joyful hearts and tuneful songs
Let us approach the mighty Lord ;
Proclaim His honors with our tongues
And sound His wondrous truth abroad.

His glorious name on golden lyre
Strike all the tuneful choir above,
And boundless nature's realms conspire
To celebrate His matchless love.

A Heaven of Heaven is His bright throne,
And cherubs wait His high behest,
Yet for the merits of His Son
He visits man in humble dust.

In temples sacred to His name
His saints assemble round His board,
Raise their Hosannas to the Lamb
And taste the supper of the Lord.

William moved from Bolton, Mass., to Templeton, from which place he moved to Marlborough, N. H., about 1778, where he purchased a tract of wild land, now owned by his grandson, Thomas. He sold his farm in Bolton for $2,600, taking his pay in Continental money, which proved nearly all worthless, leaving him a poor man with a growing family on his hands.

Taking his family and goods upon a two-wheeled cart, which he made without iron, and drawn by a pair of steers, he came to Marlborough. He staid over night in Monadnock No. 4 (now Fitzwilliam) paying a $10 bill, Continental money, for his lodging. This was his last money except a $5 bill, which the writer has seen. It seems he kept a part, or all, of Lots 48 and 49, paying half down and taking a bond for a deed which he could not fulfil, as his money was worthless. Here in the woods he built a log house. Now comes the struggle between life and starvation. At one time he took a bag, finding his way by marked trees to Northfield, Mass., a distance of 26 miles. Here he worked for two bushels of grain, which he carried back to Marlborough on his shoulders. Becoming exhausted at Winchester, he sat down on a log. Near by was a log house, to which he went, asking for something to eat. The woman gave him a crust of rye and Indian bread, which was all she had. It seemed to him to be one of the best morsels he had ever eaten. He proceeded on to Swanzey, where he got his first meal.

The following three years were so cold that no corn ripened in Marlborough; with excessive snowy winters, in one of which the snow fell to a depth of six feet upon a level. In the spring the melting snow caused so much water in the "Branch" and "Robin Brook" that there was no passing off the hill. The seven families in what now constitutes District No. 7, becoming destitute for food, raised a flag on the hill back of William White's cabin. It attracted the attention of Mr. Phillips, who lived on a neighboring hill. On learning the situation, he and his son carried three bushels of potatoes to a narrow place in the "Branch," throwing them over one by one and relieving their pressing need.

The first cow he bought caused great joy to them all. At the first milking, having no bread in the house, the children picked red clover blossoms which they ate with their milk.

With all the hardships, none died young; the average age being 78 years, and the youngest, Ruth, was the first to die, aged 63 years.

William White attended church at the old Congregational church at the Centre. He was a large, stout man and a constant reader of the Bible, a large portion of which he had at his command.

OSHKOSH, Winnebago Co., Wis.

I, Everett E. White, was born in Marlborough, N. H., February 14th, in the year 1829, in the old house formerly known as the Gates House, living in Marlborough until sixteen years old, when I went from there to sea, sailing from Newport, R. I., on the good old bark Damon, on a whaling voyage. After being out two months and taking one whale our vessel was struck by a white squall, which so disabled us that we had to put into the first port that we came to, which was in the Cape De Verde islands near the coast of Africa. After staying there four months I was put on board the bark Liberia Clipper and came to Baltimore, Maryland. From there I shipped on board a brig then lying at Georgetown, Md., to carry flour to Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. There I was taken sick with yellow fever and reported as dead, but recovered. After staying there ten weeks I got a chance to come to the U. S. on an English brig; working my passage to New York in the autumn of 1847, without coat or shoes. Was taken to Sailors' Home, and after staying three or four days I enlisted for the Mexican War, which was then in progress. I was put on board the old receiving ship North Carolina. After being on board about a month I was transferred to Norfolk, Va., and put on board the frigate Brandywine, which was then under way with sealed orders. When the orders were read we found that we were bound to the coast of Brazil to relieve the frigate Columbus, then just off the coast of China. After being on board nearly two years and capturing six or seven vessels, there was one then lying in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro which threatened to sink us if we tried to take her. Volunteers were then called for as our men were short. I heard the call, and being tired of the monotony and wishing to visit home once more, I was the first to respond to the call and was promoted as quartermaster and transferred to the brig Perry. After due time we captured the vessel and I came to the states as one of the prize crew. We suffered untold privations on our voyage home. We thought we should be about forty days in coming home, so took sixty days' provisions. But we encountered five gales of wind in succession, doubling the different capes and nearly drifting on to the Bahama banks, finally getting across the Gulf Stream and back to within signalling distance of Brooklyn Navy Yard. We then hoisted the signal of distress and they sent out a boat manned with sailors and took us into port, not a man of us being able to stand on his feet. We were then seventy-six days out and nearly starved, having been on short allowance for several days, but the doctor took us in hand and soon fixed us up; and in about five or six days our discharges came on from Washington. I then took two short voyages and returned home to Marlborough, N. H., about the year 1850. I then went to work for my brother Levi, and afterwards with Augustine Snow at Alstead, N. H. While at Alstead I was married. In 1855 I emigrated to Wisconsin where I remained until 1860. I went down south to work and was in a small town by the name of Fayette, Miss., on the day of Abraham Lincoln's election, and lived in the vicinity of Cole's creek until early in the spring of 1861, when I made my escape to Cincinnati, O., on the last boat that came up the river only three days before Fort Sumter was fired upon. I then went to recruiting for the three months' service, and when the call for three years' men came I enlisted in the Fifth Ohio Infantry as musician and was afterwards promoted as hospital steward and served during the war, from June 19, 1861, to July 26, 1865, being discharged as fife major of the regiment. I have since resided most of the time in Oshkosh, Wis., where I have followed the trade of jeweler, not being able to work at manual labor on account of a wound received during the war.

My first battle was at Romney, Va., Oct. 26, 1861; 2d, Blue Gap, near Romney, Va., Jan. 7, 1861; 3d, Bloomery Gap, Va., Feb. 14, 1862; 4th, Winchester, Va., March 23, 1862; 5th, Port Republic, Va., June 9, 1862; 6th, Cedar Mountain, Va., Aug. 9, 1862; 7th, White Sulphur Springs, Va., Aug. 23 to 25, 1862; 8th, Second Bull Run, Va., Aug. 30 to Sept. 1, 1862; 9th, Antietam, Md., Sept. 16, 1862; 10th, Dumfries, Va., Dec. 27, 1862; 11th, Chancellorsville, Va., May 1 to 4, 1863; 12th, Gettysburg, Pa., July 1 to 3, 1863; 13th, Wauhatchie, Tenn., Oct. 28, 1863; 14th, Lookout Mountain, Tenn., Nov. 24, 1863; 15th, Missionary Ridge, Tenn., Nov. 25, 1863; 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, four battles in one day, Ringold, Ga., Greysville, Ga., Pea Vine Creek, and Taylor's Ridge, Nov. 27, 1863; 20th, Rocky Face Ridge, May 5 to 9, 1864; 21st, 22d, 23d, the three battles as follows,—Tunnel Hill, Mill Creek, and Dug Gap, Ga., May 7, 1864; 24th, Reseca, Ga., May 15, 1864; 25th, May 25 to June 4, as follows,—May 26, 27, Dallas, Ga., Newhope church; May 28, 29, Burnt Hickory, Pumpkin Vine Creek; May 30, Altoona Hills, 1864; 30th, Pine Mountain, Ga., June 14, 1864; 31st, Kennesaw Mountain, Ga., June 27, 1864; 32d, Peachtree Creek, Ga., July 20, 1864; 33d, Atlanta, Ga., July 22 to Sept. 2, 1864, when we occupied Atlanta. After leaving Atlanta we were skirmishing and fighting nearly every day until we reached Savannah; fighting every day in front of Savannah from Dec. 15 to 21, when we occupied the place. For some time after leaving Savannah, Ga., we marched through South Carolina, still fighting our way. Our next battle was at Chesterfield, S. C., March 2, 1865; next at Averysboro, N. C., March 16, 1865; then Bentonsville, N. C., March 19 to 21, 1865. After that we lay encamped at Raleigh, N. C., until J. E. Johnson's surrender, April 26, 1865. From Raleigh we marched through to Richmond, Va., and looked over the old battlefield of the Wilderness, where we found many skeletons of the boys in blue still left unburied. Then on to Chancellorsville, Va., our old battle ground that we left some two years ago, where we found many skeletons that had been rooted out of the ground by the hogs, they having been hastily buried. It was here that I had quite a little adventure. While engaged in this battle there was a reb sharpshooter in a pine tree in front of our position, who gave us great annoyance, having killed five or six of my regiment. I told the boys this would never do; that I would go out and put a stop to it. So I climbed over the breastworks and went out to our picket line, but the picket would not let me out, and while walking his beat I run the picket line; told him—the reb—to come down, and he came, gun and all, and I have the gun in my house at this time. From Chancellorsville we marched on to Alexandria, Va., and from there through Washington, where we lay for some time. It was here that I met my brother Lewis, whom I had not seen for years. From there we were sent to Louisville, Ky., and thence to Camp Denison, Ohio, and mustered out of service. I was in the Fifth Ohio Vol. Infantry, Co. K and H, in the old 12th Corps, Army of the Potomac, and afterward transferred to the Army of the Cumberland, 20th C.; re-enlisted at Bridgeport, Ala. I have recently received the bronze veteran medal of honor from the state of Ohio for service rendered from '61 to '65, and I feel justly proud of the same.

Yours truly,

EVERETT E. WHITE.

He was a worthy member of the Methodist church for sixty years, and he walked with and feared God. He was ready, waiting, longing even to depart and be at rest with Jesus. His partner in life d. the 12th of April, the same year. She had joined the same church sixty-nine years before, being the eleventh member when the church was formed in 1796. They lived together fifty-nine years. Their house was sought and loved by the circuit preachers, who ever found with them a welcome home. The writer recollects many greetings and partings with the injunction, "Farewell, prove faithful, and by the grace of God we'll meet in that better land."

Death-bed Reflections.

MARLBOROUGH, N. H., October 15, 1865.

By the death-bed of my father now sitting by his side I pen these lines. He has been a kind parent to me, whom I have loved. Many times I have listened to him when in secret prayer, heard him pour out his soul to God for the salvation of his dear children, and have seen him rise from his knees with his cheeks bedewed with tears. Oh! what anxiety he has felt for me. I believe his prayers have not all been in vain. God will hear the fervent prayer of his saints, and after years of toil take them to himself where, I have faith in God, my sainted father will join mother who has just gone before, where fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters meet to part no more. Oh, what a glorious meeting that will be! Will that be for me to enjoy? Blessed thought. Shall it be my lot? Yes, if I do right and live right, which may God grant. O Lord, give me grace and wisdom to accomplish my mission. I believe but few enjoy what I do tonight. My mother was given to me eighty-two years, father almost eighty-three years, and all their children yet alive; the youngest, forty-two; the eldest, fifty-seven. One quarter of my children have already gone to the other world. While I reflect upon the past, God's mercy shines clear through my existence into the future. I will rely still upon Him who has said, "I will never forsake those that put their trust in me."

Oh, death-bed scene, a solemn place,
 Yet one of joy, not sadness;
 So soon to exchange this world of care
 For one of joy and gladness.

Rest, father, rest, thy sorrows are past,
 In glory thou shalt rest at last;
 So soon to enjoy that blest repast
 With mother and dear ones at last.

The time has come, just half-past four,
 When our dear father breathes no more.
 The spirit's flown, the goal is won;
 Enter thy rest we will not moan.

With streaming eyes our faith doth soar
Up to the bright eternal shore,
Where Jesus stands with out-stretched hands
To receive the dear ones in his arms.

Now our father and mother dear
Methinks by faith I see and hear
Thee sing as in the days of yore.

Singing so sweetly on that shore,
With saints and angels; yea, and more,
Salvation through th' atoning blood
Of Christ, the Paschal Lamb of God.

4. Rodolphus Isaiah, b. in Marlborough, N. H., May 11, 1843. He was a member of Co. C, Second Regt. N. H. Vols. He d. in the army, on the Lower Potomac, in the brigade hospital, at Camp Beaufort, Md., December 20, 1861, of typhoid fever brought on by exposure.

5. Arthur Amasa, b. November 22, 1846, d., of typhoid fever, October 31, 1865.

Lines written upon the death of Arthur by his father, caused by his painful pleadings:—

Father, you are a praying man,
Pray for me that I may live and useful be,
For God has said that prayer shall be heard,
And good I'll be, for a good boy
I've always meant to be.
And if I'm spared in future life,
The will of God may be, a good boy
I'll always be, and serve Him faithfully.
Pray, father, pray for me.

Father prayed in agony that his dear son might live.
But prayer is not heard; faith
Cannot reach the throne of Him we love,
But a sweet return of "Thy will be done"
Comes to the heart of grief.
How hard it seems,—"Thy will be done."
Pray, father, pray for me.

If we could see as God doth see,
How reasonable that prayer would be!
The future is veiled, we cannot see,
Like a confiding child, I'll cast my all on Thee,
My Saviour, who taught me to say,
On earth Thy will be done.
What can I do? My child does cry,—
Pray, father, pray for me.

The father prayed, but bereavement's dart doth enter the heart.
Death cannot be stayed; the River of Death he must wade.

With the delirium of disease his last words were these,— “Grandpa, grandpa, take me home, take me home!”
 His eyes are now closed in death,
 And we have laid him away in the cold grave
 For to stay until the last day,
 When we expect he will not say,—
 Pray, father, pray for me.

So soon again death has visited us,—our dearly beloved Arthur, aged 18 years, 11 months, and 8 days, died Tuesday morning at half past two. Solemn scene,—sad will be the recollection of this night of sorrow. While we around the death bed of our dear one poured out our souls in anguish to God in prayer that we might all be united when we, too, should leave this world of sorrow and sadness. That we might be an unbroken number in that world of joy and gladness where no sorrow nor death will ever come. We had anticipated much joy with the dear departed one. He was mild and lovely, ever ready to join with us in singing the social family songs. He had a quick ear, loving music. He was foremost of our number, and the joy and bliss we have experienced will long be remembered. Congestive typhoid fever, that cruel scavenger of death, caused delirious moments of painful pleadings to be “carried home.” He had a great desire to live. His love of home and friends was strong. He, too, anticipated life and happiness in the future. “So soon, so soon passing along, right along.” He left this world of sorrow and sadness for one of joy and gladness, just fifteen days after the death of his grandfather. The last audible expression a few moments before he breathed his last, throwing out his arms and looking around, was, “Grandpa, grandpa, take me home.”

White.—Died, in Dublin, August 1, 1889, Sister Etta (Smith) White, daughter of Charles and Harriet Smith, and wife of Milton J. White, aged 37 years.

Sister White experienced religion some twenty years ago under the preaching of Rev. Irad Taggart, pastor of the Methodist church in Marlborough, where she then resided. She ever afterwards adorned her profession by a well-ordered life and Christian character. She loved the church services, especially the Sabbath-school, where she was early led by her pious parents. She was always cheerful, genial, and pleasant, and had a smile for everyone. Her funeral was held in the Methodist church in Marlborough where her parents reside and where she had lived all her life with the exception of a few months at the close of life. Rev. J. W. Bean officiated at the funeral, which was very largely attended, the church being crowded. Mr. Brown spoke of her evenness of disposition. He said, "As you found her one day, so you always found her." The Grange of which she was a member attended the funeral in a body, and furnished some very beautiful and appropriate music. She was also buried in accordance with the rites and ceremonies of the Grange. A profusion of flowers adorned the beautiful white casket. She parted with a dear sister only about a year ago, Mrs. Amy G. Peaslee, and has two sisters and a brother left—Henry C. Smith, Miss Carrie A. Smith, and Mrs. Nellie M. Olmstead, of Monona, Iowa. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

ter service, or been oftener under fire. Few regiments went through the war with so much harmony of feeling among officers and men with so little grumbling. When calls were made for names of men to whom medals should be awarded for especial gallantry on the field, few were ever given, for the reason that it would have seemed invidious when all did their duty so unflinchingly."

I, Thomas White, was born in Marlborough, on the old farm of my grandfather, William White, whom I well remember, although but two years of age when he died, as a venerable looking old gentleman leaning on two canes. Always having a fondness for old people whom I revered and loved and in memory often recall their faces. I remember in my earliest days, the earnest personal prayers of my Christian parents, who taught me the blessedness of pure and undefiled religion. Making a confident of my dear mother in my early life work, which has been a great blessing to me all my life. My parents in the support of their parents, had a hard time to supply the comforts of life. At the age of fourteen, I matured plans to raise money to liquidate my father's debts, working six months for Elias Hardy of Dublin, for which he paid my father forty-two dollars. I spent a happy season at his house, and he, appreciating my work, gave me all the holidays and twenty-five cents to spend at muster. He said to my father,—“He is a good boy and well earned his wages.” I continued to work out, and when eighteen years of age, had my father's debts paid and the mortgage lifted.

At twenty I took a job of making brick at Whitehall, N. Y., of a Mr. Goodale, who was a contractor and builder, manufacturing his own material. After I had made 400,000 of brick, he refused to pay me. It was during the panic of 1837.

My uncle, living at Polley's Landing, undertaking to collect, sued my employer, whose wealth consisted of real estate. The court granted my claim, but when the injunction was issued no property was to be found, as he had deeded it to his son and daughter. In after years his son and daughter refused to return a dollar to him, and he and his wife spent their last days in the poor-house.

About this time I married, and was in debt for six hundred dollars, but I labored energetically for several years building roads, never making a failure although young and inexperienced. Success followed me. I went to Montreal, where I engaged in the manufacture of spruce beer. The business being distasteful I continued it but three years, paying all my debts and returning to the states bringing home $2,400, with which I bought my father's farm.

For several years I was a salesman of nursery stock, and was also engaged in selling Colton's atlas and maps. While thus engaged, passing from New York to New Haven, I was in the terrible railroad disaster at Norwalk, Conn., where over fifty were killed and many wounded. The accident was caused on account of the draw-bridge not being closed and the engineer being under the influence of liquor. Going through the bottom of the car, I was thrown into the river where the water and mud was about sixteen feet deep. When I arose, I was hauled into a boat severely injured. I was confined to my bed about four months, and have never fully recovered yet have been able to labor some.

Father of twelve children; two sons enlisting in the late war, one of whom died in camp; the other being wounded returned home, and was a great sufferer until released by death. I also buried another son the same year my father and mother died. Eleven years later the mother of my twelve children died. I married again, and have lived with my second wife nearly sixteen years.

Prosperity in earthly affairs has fairly attended my efforts. I have received my full share of joy and sorrow, and while I review the past it is with swelling gratitude, the bright side of God's love fully to the front. While I recall the faces of those dear neighbors and friends of my youth, I seem to see them face to face in memory as fresh as to-day. It seems that good predominates far over the evil. With thanksgiving and gratitude my heart flows full of praise and adoration to the One who has so kindly bestowed upon me these unspeakable favors of life.

I would not claim perfection, for the "mistakes of my life have been many;" but no vicious sins can be laid at my door, which affords me much comfort and joy. I have always been free from the use of liquor, tobacco, and profane language.

THOMAS WHITE.

“Our brother is with us no more,
 God in wisdom has called him away;
 Life’s trials and sorrows are o’er,
 He has flown to yon regions of day.

“Should we grieve for a mortal thus blessed?
 Should we sigh for a spirit released?
 Our brother hath entered his rest,
 Where all is enjoyment and peace.

“Our brother the first to depart
 To our Father’s blest mansion on high.
 Oh, why should we take it to heart?
 E’er long we, too, homeward shall fly.

“Death opens the way to our rest ;
 We know where our dear ones have gone ;
 They await in yon home of the blest.
 Oh, why for immortals then mourn.”

White.—Ruth White, the daughter of Paine and Susan Robie, was born at East Andover, N. H., July 10, 1806, and died at Wells Beach, Me., July 17, 1891, aged 85 years and 7 days. She was converted when young, was baptized by Rev. Elijah Watson, and united with the Free Baptist church at East Andover, of which she remained a worthy member until death. She was married to John Follansbee of Hill, N. H., March 13, 1836, by Rev. E. Watson. She was left a widow with two little girls to care for, July 7, 1844. Later her two daughters became Christians and united with the same church. The younger of them died at the age of fourteen years. In the fall of 1853 she was married to Aaron White of Cornish, N. H. He died in April, 1880. After this, until her death, she made her home with her daughter, the wife of Rev. H. B. Huntoon. Sister White was one of the true and tried ones, and as long as her health would permit she was found at the house of God, and was ready for every good word and work. During the last few weeks of life she was a great sufferer, and for a time was helpless. Her trust in God was firm until the end. During her sickness all was done that willing hands could do for her comfort. It can be truly said of her, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord: Yea, saith the Spirit, for they do rest from their labors and their works do follow them." She was buried from the Congregational church in East Andover, July 18. Funeral services were conducted by Revs. Lewis (Cong.) and Hall (Free Baptist).

HARRIET NEWELL (WADE) WHITE.

SAMUEL WHITE.

Mrs. Harriet (Wade) White d. July 18, 1880. Mr. White now resides with his son Daniel in Bolton, Mass. The following was taken from a Boston paper:—

Mr. White, now 91 years old, walks to Clinton and back frequently, and walks briskly, too. He shows the good old Puritanical stock from which he came, for he is of the fifth generation from Peregrine White, the first white child born in this country, who first saw the light on board the Mayflower in Provincetown harbor.

Mr. White is of medium height, thick set, elastic in his movements, a powerful man even to-day, with a bright blue eye, healthy complexion; rich, heavy voice, and mentally as brisk as ever.

He wears side whiskers of diminutive proportions, which are white, and with his white, silky hair, give him a distinguished appearance.

He is in conversation highly entertaining, loves a joke and can make impromptu witticisms with marked frequency. As he is interesting in conversation, he can best tell his story.

“I was born,” he said, “in Marlborough, N. H., December 23, 1803; lived there until '49, working on my father's farm most of the time; was married May 23, 1833, and have two children, Daniel, who is a merchant in Clinton, and Charles H., who lives at Somerville Highlands.

“From Marlborough I went to Fitchburg; was there a year working in a mattress factory, then worked in Clinton as a laborer for four years, then worked three years in Nashua in a door shop. Lived in Orange four years; Baldwinville, where I did jobbing; back to Fitchburg, there fourteen years in mattress factory and railroad shop; then came to Bolton, and have been here fourteen years taking care of Dan's farm; but we don't do much farming, only cut a little hay. It is cheaper to buy than it is to fight potato bugs.

“I find it troubles me to walk, and when I can't get around, when I get to be a burden, I want to get away, to be put away. Both of my boys are musicians, but there is not a bit of music in me, although I sing some in the woods to the squirrels and birds.

I never was what you might call sick, that is, not within my remembrance.

“My life has been an uneventful one. In politics I was an Andrew Jackson man to the backbone, and wish we had such a man in this country to-day. I cast my first vote for John Quincy Adams the second time he was nominated. If we could have Jackson back I would put in half a bushel of votes for him if I could.

“This country never had but two presidents who had the three necessary qualifications for presidents. Do you know that? The qualities are good statesman, good financier, good military man. Those presidents were Washington and Jackson. Lincoln had the first two, but he had no more idea of military than a setting hen. Grant was good in his place, but others might have done as well had they had the chance.

“I threw my last vote in a presidential election for Grant. After that I got disgusted with the whole political situation. There is too much buttonholing for votes, too much begging for votes, too much running around for effect. I want the office to seek the man.

“I was a member of the Marlborough, N. H., light infantry seven years, first as a private, then bass drummer, next fourth sergeant, finally captain. The militia was better in drill and readiness for service in those days than at the present time in my opinion. I delighted in the military. I may be a little egotistical, but I think that in those days I could do that matter considerably brown.

“I have many letters of inquiries from all over the country about Peregrine White and my branch of the family, which keeps me quite busy replying to them. I can trace my ancestry to Bishop John White of England, who was the grandfather of the original Peregrine White.

“Peregrine had a brother named Resolved, who was so named in honor of the resolutions reached by the Whites to embark for this country. I have a grandson, Peregrine, in Berlin, who is the station agent there, another in the same town, Christopher S., who is postmaster.

“My long life and vigorous health I attribute to three things.

I never used liquor or tobacco and always paid my printer in advance."

Mr. White has written much for the Boston papers in the past, contributing both prose and poetry, and has written in blank verse a pamphlet entitled "Reminiscences of the White Family," and is now engaged in preparing a part of a coming history of the family.

The readiness with which Mr. White recalls names, dates, and events is really remarkable.

He uses glasses only when reading, is up in the morning with the lark, can do a heavy day's work without fatigue, has a vigorous mentality and in the retention of his faculties, with his preservation of physical force, is indeed a remarkable man.

HANNAH,⁷ dau. of Enoch and Hannah (Hale) White; mar., April 13, 1837, Willard Converse, b. May 27, 1811. She d. March 11, 1852. Children:—

4. George Washington, b. December 17, 1847; mar. — Blood of Nelson, N. H. He is now in San Francisco. A son, Charles C., resides in Gaston, Ohio.

Obituary.—Another of our old settlers has gone to his long home. Willard Converse is no more. Like a full ripe shock of corn he has been gathered to his fathers. Willard Converse was born May 27, 1811, in Marlborough, N. H. In 1848 he moved to Rock Prairie, Wis., four miles from Janesville. He came to Iowa in 1856, settling in Winnesheik county on the border of Howard. Here in 1884 his wife passed before him to the better land. Since that time he has made his home with his children—Mrs. William Blackburn and S. A. Converse—where his presence was always a benediction and a blessing. Another daughter, the oldest of the family, resides in Worcester, Mass. Four children who grew to manhood and womanhood preceded him to the spirit world. Willard Converse was no ordinary man. Strong in those principles which have made New England such a power in these United States, he has endeavored always to live true to them in the new West where his lot was cast. As a Christian he realized that the spirit was more than the letter and the life than any creed. Old age did not with him, as with too many, bring a jaundiced eye and a soured disposition. He was of those "whose thoughts are widened with the process of the times." Sound in wisdom, gentle in manner, and kind in disposition his counsel was often sought by those in need of guidance and help. Such a man is sure to be missed, but he cannot be forgotten. Such lives never die.

"He being dead yet speaketh,
He sets as sets the morning star,
Which goes not down behind the darkened west,
But melts away into the lights of Heaven."

Lines suggested by the death of Charles Leslie White, who died in Berlin, May 1, 1887, aged 19 years and 19 days, being the seventh generation from Peregrine White, the first child born of English parents in New England, on board the Mayflower, in Cope Cod harbor, November 20, 1620. Dedicated to the parents, brothers, sisters, and other relatives and friends of the deceased, by his grandfather, Samuel White:—

“Death Loves a Shining Mark.”

Death holds a claim on mortal man,
Youth may be called ; Age must obey ;
Man's life at best is but a span,
Too soon, alas ! it fades away.

Too soon the cruel spoiler came,
Too soon death took him from your side ;
Too soon has ended life's bright flame,
Too soon this lad of promise died.

Too soon the tears of grief must flow,
Too soon the parting hour has come,
Too soon, too soon, dear friends, you know,
Too soon the summons came, “Come home.”

Too soon, dear parents, ah ! too soon,
Death called him to the upper sphere ;
His life work done before its noon,
He was too pure to linger here.

Too soon, dear brothers, ah ! too soon,
Your dear companion's call was given ;
To you his friendship, life's best boon,
Has ended in the joys of heaven.

Too soon, dear sisters (blessed name,)
Too soon your hearts with sorrow riven ;
Too soon we part ; we'll meet again
Where parting hands are never given.

Too soon, dear friends and neighbors all,
This lovely youth has gone to rest,
Ere life's bright dawn with nature's call
Had ope'd the bud love's hand had pressed.

Too soon, too soon the summons came,
Too soon death took a parents' pride,
Too soon has closed life's flickering flame,
Too soon this darling boy has died.

Following is a programme of a concert given by Daniel A. White and family :—

One of the most interesting and satisfactory musical entertainments which was ever offered in this town came off in Bigelow Hall last Monday evening. The night was stormy, but the hall was some two-thirds filled, the occasion being the concert by Daniel A. White's family of Bolton, formerly of this town. The amateur quintette comprised Mr. White, violin; Mrs. White, piano; Master Chris. (15), cornet; Miss Lelia (13), French horn, and Master Charlie (10), 'cello. The concert commenced with "Centennial March" (by E. H. Bailey) by the quintette. This was followed by the song, "Dreaming of Mother," Master Charlie taking the solo. Operatic selections. Vocal selections, in which, after a prelude, little Daisy (5 years) appeared on the platform and gave in a very clear voice the solo, "Come Where the Wild Flowers Bloom," the others giving the refrain. Very hearty applause followed this part, but the little vocalist was too much overcome by her feelings to respond. Next came a potpourri of popular melodies with solos from horn and cornet, the first part of the programme concluding with "The Lord is My Shepherd," rendered in an admirable manner by the quintette. Part two opened with a concert medley, commencing with Plezel's quartette with violins, succeeded by a waltz by the quintette; it concluded with operatic selections from Ermini, upon commencing which Charlie took the baritone, Lelia exchanged the horn for the E flat tenor, and Chris, and his father held B flat cornets,—the rendering of the entire medley evincing much skill on the part of the youthful performers. Then followed "Grandfather's Old Arm Chair," Miss Lelia giving the solo, andante, and polka by the quintette. Trio, "Crows in the Cornfield,—representing a movement by crows (with good caws) upon a field, and the wounding of the young crow who would not listen to advice, and in answer to "Why not?" was shot. The concluding selection was from "Robert le Diable," in three parts, brilliantly executed. The amateurs won hearty applause from the audience, and deserve much credit for the perseverance and industry which must have preceded so artistic an entertainment.—Clinton Courant.

JAMES TANNER.

Mr. James Tanner, widely known as "Corporal" Tanner, was born at Richmondville, Schoharie county, N. Y., April 4, 1844. His early life was spent on a farm, and his educational privileges were those of the district school. While a mere boy he taught in an adjoining district, manifesting the thoroughness and force of will that have since characterized him, and proving to anxious friends that he was fully competent for the work. After a few months' experience as teacher, at the outbreak of the war, although not yet eighteen, he enlisted as private in Company C, 87th New York Volunteers. He was soon made corporal, with assurance of further promotion, had not a terrible disaster befallen him. His regiment was hurried to the front, and, with Kearney's Division, participated in the Peninsular campaign, and the battles of Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, the siege of Yorktown, the seven days' fight before Richmond, and at Malvern Hill.

After leaving the Peninsula, the 87th fought at Warrenton, Bristow Station, and Manassas Junction.

Corporal Tanner served with his regiment through all the engagements, until wounded at the second battle of Bull Run. There the 87th held the extreme right of our line, with Stonewall Jackson's corps in front. During a terrific shelling from the enemy, the men were lying down, when a fragment from a bursting shell completely severed the corporal's right leg at the ankle, and shattered the left so badly as to make amputation necessary.

Carried from the field, he lost consciousness, and on recovering, found that the surgeons had amputated both legs, four inches below the knee. Meanwhile the Union lines had been broken and the army was in full retreat. The corporal's comrades were forced to leave him at a farm house, where the rebel army, in close pursuit, soon made him prisoner with the other wounded. Paroled after ten days, he was taken to Fairfax Seminary Hospital; then commenced his long struggle for life, with all the odds against him—but a good constitution and a determination to live, brought him through the long, doubtful days. Through all his sufferings his courage never left him, and when he began to improve, his first thought was, “What can I do, thus crippled, to hold my place among men?” His manhood and ambition could not brook the thought that he must take an inferior place because of his misfortune. After treatment in the hospital, and recuperation at his old home in Schoharie county, he was able to walk about on artificial limbs. He was appointed deputy-doorkeeper in the assembly, and subsequently held various positions under the legislature, which he filled with great credit. He then accepted a clerkship in the War Department, under Secretary Stanton. On the night of President Lincoln’s assassination he was employed to take notes of the first official evidence, and then stood by the bed of the dying President. In 1866 he returned to Schoharie county, and studied law with Judge William C. Lamont. The same year he married a daughter of Alfred C. White, of Jefferson, N. Y., and they now have four beautiful children, two daughters and two sons. He was admitted to the bar in 1869. Soon after, he was appointed to a place in the New York Custom House, and removed to Brooklyn. On competitive examination he rose to the position of deputy collector, and served four years under Gen. Chester A. Arthur. He was the Republican nominee for assembly in 1871, in the Fourth Kings County District, but was counted out in the election frauds of that year. Nominated for register by the Republicans in 1876, when the Democratic county majority was nineteen thousand, he was defeated by less than two thousand.

Connected with the Grand Army of the Republic since its early days, no man is better known to enjoy the esteem and confidence of his comrades in greater degree than Corporal Tanner. They know him to be a trustworthy leader, a man of sound judgment, ripe experience, and true heart. It was but natural, therefore, that in 1876 they elected him Commander of the Grand Army in the Department of New York. He assumed command at a time when discouragement and disappointment pervaded the organization, growing out of the neglect of the State of New York to provide for her helpless and homeless disabled veterans. Public sentiment was not yet aroused. Appeals had been made to private charity and also to the legislature, but in vain. Repeated failures had engendered prejudice and opposition to the project. The outlook was discouraging, the task herculean, to combat apathy, and rouse dormant public opinion. The veterans themselves, stung by the ingratitude of those for whom they had suffered, began to despair. At this juncture Commander Tanner threw himself heart and soul into the work, a born leader, thoroughly qualified. Having been a sufferer, he felt the sufferings of others; intellectually a giant, he set forth in glowing words the veterans' needs, the debt of gratitude due from the state to her maimed defenders, and the shame of degrading them to the condition of alms-house paupers. Calling to his assistance that true patriot, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, the good work was inaugurated by a mass meeting in Brooklyn, when $13,000 were subscribed. Mr. Tanner traversed the state from end to end, making appeals, public and private, to the people. Undaunted by obstacles, he fired the hearts of patriotic and benevolent men, so that at last a flood of petitions poured in upon the legislature, and tardy justice was meted out. The magnificent "Soldiers' Home" was erected at Bath, Steuben county, where six hundred disabled, homeless veterans can find the repose and comforts of a home; truly a "monument, more durable than bronze," to Commander Tanner for his zealous efforts and self-sacrificing labors in behalf of justice and charity.

Perhaps to no one are the soldiers more indebted for assistance in pension matters than to Mr. Tanner. No man has done more to assist in securing just pension legislation than he. Not only in personal interviews with members of Congress, but as a member of the committee appointed by the National Encampment of the G. A. R., he has been untiring in his efforts. Repeatedly has he appeared before committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives, urging in eloquent terms the claims of the thousands of disabled men. And many who to-day receive the benefits of increased pensions are largely indebted to the unselfish and untiring efforts of the subject of this sketch in their behalf. For his trips to Washington, and for the strength and time employed, he has received no remuneration, meeting the expenses out of his own private purse. His interest in ex-soldiers is not a sordid sentiment, as is proved by the records of his office. For the past seven years that he has held the position of tax collector of the city of Brooklyn, there has been paid to ex-soldiers in his office, in their salaries, the modest sum of nearly one hundred thousand dollars. These men received their appointment from Mr. Tanner, and but illustrate the abiding interest he feels for all old veterans; and the constant application made to him by needy soldiers for assistance in securing employment is the living proof of the faith of his comrades in his unswerving interest in their welfare.

A man with positive convictions, with also the courage of his convictions, he is nevertheless broad and charitable toward his foes. A life-long sufferer, because of wounds received in the war, he has nevertheless proved to be the inspiration of help to thousands who fought on the other side. While on a visit to Richmond, Va., some months ago, in conversation with several ex-Confederate soldiers, mention was made of the suffering condition of the maimed and disabled ones of the South. Their homeless and needy condition was contrasted with the condition of federal soldiers in the North. The government could not, in justice, provide for them. Mr. Tanner suggested that the citizens take the matter in hand, build and equip a home, and then ask the state to care for it. Upon his suggestion the work was undertaken by philanthropic men in Richmond.

To assist them in their work, appeals were made to the old soldiers of the North. In Brooklyn, under direction of Mr. Tanner, a meeting was held in the Academy of Music, on the 6th of May last, addressed by Reverends Henry Ward Beecher and I. M. Foster, at which $1,600 was realized to assist in the erection of the home. The suggestion thus made in the interest of the old foes of the past, has resulted in securing $25,000, with a prospect of as much more, with which to provide home comforts for needy Confederates. And this fact is recognized and appreciated by the men of the South, that the inspiration of this humane enterprise found its birth in the heart of James Tanner.

Upon the inauguration of the work in Richmond, he was made one of the trustees, but declined the honor; at the same time assuring the friends of the enterprise that in the knowledge that some crippled, homeless soldier was provided with the comforts of life, he would find the greatest satisfaction.

In November, 1877, Mr. Tanner was appointed collector of taxes for the city of Brooklyn, which office he held for eight years, through Democratic and Republican administrations alike, with universal acceptance. He instituted many reforms in the office, reducing expenses one half, and extending greater facilities to the tax-payers. The most perfect system prevails, and a saving to the city of a large amount has been effected.

He possesses the confidence of the Republican voters of all classes, and his election to the chair of the Republican General Committee of Brooklyn resulted in harmony and good feeling.

He was appointed commissioner of pensions by Benjamin Harrison, but owing to what was deemed his too great liberality to, and too ready sympathy for, his comrades in arms, was asked to resign after five months' service. He then opened an office in Washington for the prosecution of pension claims. In January, 1894, his sufferings became so severe that he was forced to submit to a re-amputation of both legs.

As a public speaker he has few superiors, being eloquent, logical, and witty. In debate he is always self-possessed and meets opponents boldly, having the "courage of his convictions." Genial, social manners make him a favorite among a large circle of acquaintances, while his talents and sterling manhood are esteemed universally.

By nature he is a positive, outspoken man, obedient to his convictions of right without regard to expediency or popularity; such a man is sure in the end to have the confidence, respect, and support of his fellows. With an abiding faith in the final triumph of the right in all questions, he has learned to labor and to wait. Being yet a young man, there is doubtless a brilliant future before him, if his life and health are spared.

Alfred S. White, son of Benjamin and Roxanna (Andrews)

White, was born in Hoosick, Rensselaer county, N. Y., March 7, 1809. When four years of age he came with his parents to the town of Jefferson, Schoharie county, N. Y., and settled upon the farm now owned and occupied by his only surviving son, George C. White. Here he spent about eighty years of his life; his death, however, occurred in the town of Richmondville, N. Y., at the residence of his son George (who temporarily resided in that village) on the 29th of September, 1892.

Mr. White was proverbially known by his townspeople as an honest man, and he possessed in the highest degree a sense of honor and justice. His kindness and charity to his fellow-beings, especially to those in unfortunate circumstances, is well remembered. At different times he held the offices of supervisor and school commissioner of his town, but from distaste for public life he refused to accept further honors. His father, Benjamin, was generally known as "Schoolmaster White," he having taught common schools for thirty consecutive years, thus leaving the care of the farm and family upon the boy Alfred at a very early age. At this date, April 12, 1895, Alfred White's widow, Julia A. (Snyder), is still living, being in fairly good health and nearly 82 years of age. Only two of their five children lived to mature life, three having died in childhood; Meroah L. (Tanner), born in 1844, and living in Washington, D. C., and George C., the writer of this sketch, occupies the old homestead, and who will always remember with love and tenderness the kind and self-sacrificing father, who was ever ready to help to a better life his son, his family, and his neighbors. For many years a member of and a pillar in the M. E. church, he died in the faith and now rests with the saints from his weary toils in this world.

Gideon White and Edward Winslow bought land in Plymouth in 1753 of the former's brother-in-law, Consider Howland, which, in 1775, was conveyed entirely to him by his father, Cornelius White. We find him administrator of John Lothrop's estate in 1767. Mr. Gideon White departed this life March 6, 1779, aged 62 years.

Benjamin White d. in Hanover, February 10, 1786, aged 65 years. His widow d. March 22, 1814, aged 94 years. It is said that Benjamin fell in love with Miss Hannah Decrow, who was a young lady of powerful build and great beauty, but who was not considered good enough for the son of an opulent shipbuilder and ferryman. This young Ben appears to have been a favorite with his father, and was threatened with banishment if he persisted in his attentions to Miss Decrow. The young man married her, and it is said that, true to his word, his father banished him to Hanover. This was about 1743, when Mr. White, Sr., purchased of Jeremiah and Walter Hatch many hundred acres of heavy timber land on what is now Centre street, the old habitation being on the spot now owned by Frank Fish. Mr. White, Sr., gave him this valuable tract of territory, started him in house-keeping in great style for those days, and gave him also a horse, two cows, a yoke of oxen, and a gundalow, which he kept at North river bridge. Mrs. White was a resolute, God-fearing woman, and, in opposition to her more worldly companion, she was bound to have her children baptized in the true faith, as we find by the church records of Rev. Benjamin Bass, dated September 7, 1754,—“Were baptized four children of Benjamin White (his wife owning the covenant), Penniah, Robert, Hannah, and Benjamin (the father’s name) who was not considered in the baptism of the children.”

This letter is written for the information of James Robbins and Sally (White), his wife :

My dear relatives.—With pleasure I take my pen in hand to inform you that I and my small family are well, through the divine goodness of Providence. It is hopeful that you are enjoying the same blessing. Dear friends, I feel thankful for the favors that have been heretofore and are now being bestowed on me by the hand of the Giver of all good; that I am enabled at my advanced age to write you and in a small degree have the command of my mental powers of mind. Perhaps this may be the last time that I shall be enabled to do so, for I am sensible that my glass of life is most run. Dear nephew and niece: My age and infirmities have of late detained me in retirement. A spark of joy seems to be kindled in my heart as I turn to give a glance over the past. I thought I could see nothing which would dim the path of my last days, more especially when I behold the promising flock of children, grand-children, and great grand-children. Infirmities of old age wish for the reflection of a well-spent life, which would be a great comfort to me in the last days of my pilgrimage, if I for myself could only think so. The early impressions of my childhood come stealing back to me through the long list of years that are past. My memory is very good in matters that are favorable to me, but those which are not I wish to forget. In looking back to our forefathers, the Pilgrims that first came over to this country, I find by the old history that we, Sally, sprung from the Whites, Mussys, Buckminsters, and Reeds, which are the blood of four nations,—the Whites from England, Mussys from France, Buckminsters from Scotland, and the Reeds from Denmark. All of them had a different turn of mind from each other. I perceived my brothers and sisters are not alike. One seems to be of the White, another Mussy, another Buckminster, and so on. I have observed that in my children, to the third generation, the White blood is to take care of one, the Mussy inclined to please, the Buckminster steady and firm, and the Reeds to use every one alike. I don't wish to weary you in reading my scribbling, and so I will close and turn my mind to something more interesting to you, that is a visit from you this season would be very pleasing to me and my relatives, if you can make it convenient; if not write to me something about your family, also my brother Thomas and his sons and daughters, likewise my sister Mason and her family, for I wish to hear from them all. This letter is from your uncle Thaddeus, dated at Washington, Vt., on the 16th day of July, 1846, it being my birthday which makes me 87 years of age. My time in this world is short, my head must soon be laid upon the pillow of death. Oh, may I be through grace prepared to meet my dissolution with becoming resignation to the Divine Will. My sincere desire is that we may all become harmless as a little child and be enabled to proclaim the light, the true light that lighteth every man and woman that is born into the world, and be made heir of Righteousness and joint heir with Jesus Christ, our Lord.

From your uncle,

THADDEUS WHITE.

lines, written by his sweetheart, Elizabeth Magoun; also the traditional sequel of the shooting:—

In Memory of
LEWIS WHITE,
Who was accidentally shot, April 3d, 1813,
Aged 31 years.

How can my trembling hands support my pen,
While sorrow mourns the loveliest, best of men.
The tear shall flow, can genuine sorrow sleep?
Know certainly in streams our eyes shall weep.

He's gone, forever gone; Lewis has taken flight
To yonder world of joy, of peace, and light.
Gone to behold his Saviour and his God;
O may we tread the path that he has trod.

ELIZABETH MAGOUN.

Mr. White was shot in the cellar of the house now occupied by Mr. Morrill A. Phillips, in South Hanover. After digging the cellar, the workmen, as was customary in those days, indulged in some sports, wrestling, shooting, etc. A man named Makepeace threw up a hat. As it came down, when directly in a line with White's head, Lieut. Enos Bates fired, killing him instantly. Mr. Bates, chilled at the sight, was assisted to his home, where he lingered until the following February, when he died. The story is told that he was never warm again, cold even in the noonday sun of summer.

Benjamin White d. September 8, 1783, aged 58 years and 7 months.

Benjamin White was never a robust man, but was both active and useful during the Revolutionary period. He lived in times which tried men's and women's souls. He was weighed in the balance of rectitude, and, his descendants can thank God, was not found wanting. Marshfield was the centre of loyalists, numbering three hundred persons. It was not easy or pleasant then to prove true to the inherited principles of "Individual Rights" taught and subscribed to in the cabin of the little Pilgrim vessel. They found themselves obliged to do as their foreparents had done before them, take their lives and fortunes in their hands, going boldly forward, leaving the issue to the All Father.

Mr. Benjamin White represented the town of Marshfield in the Provincial Congress held at Watertown, May 31, 1774. John Hancock was chosen president, and they dared in that assembly of 240 to declare Gen. Thomas Gage "An inveterate enemy of the country, disqualified to serve the colony as governor, and unworthy of obedience." June 12, Gen. Gage issued his proclamation offering pardon to all "the rebels, excepting Samuel Adams and John Hancock, whose offences are of too flagitious a nature to admit of any other consideration than that of condign punishment," and martial law was established. He was one of the "Committee of Correspondence," and acted as town clerk when Nehemiah Thomas, the legal clerk, was absent at provincial assemblies of those times. In December, 1774, "Gen. Balfour, with his fine Queen's Guards," at the urgent invitation of the Marshfield loyalists, took up his quarters in town, and British vessels were lying in the bay "to protect them," as they said, "from their rebel neighbors." Then the "rebels" feared that the town's supply of powder was in danger, and Benjamin White, with some of his neighbors, took ox-carts and at midnight went to Capt. William Thomas's, where the powder was stored, loaded it carefully into the cart and carried it with great care and caution to his barn, and even storing some under the bed in the spare room. Benjamin White was one of the committee to collect the tea after it was voted not to use it, and it was stored in Nehemiah Thomas's house. He did not feel satisfied with this, it looked as if saved for future use. When the Whigs of the vicinity, in the ardor of their patriotism, seized this tea, carrying it into a field near by, where there was a large rock which was "flat on ye top," poured the tea thereon, when Benjamin White and his brother-in-law, Jeremiah Low, two staunch old Whigs, God bless them! applied the torch with much rejoicing. This was known ever afterwards as "Tea Rock." Mr. White lived to see his beloved country free, to know that "Independence" had not only been declared but achieved, when he was called up higher. He died of consumption, September 8, 1783, aged 58 years, 7 months. His wife, Mrs. Mercy Thomas White, was a worthy descendant of Gov. William Bradford, who was rightly named the "Father of the Colony." Mrs. White was a true, good woman, and true helpmeet. She survived her husband until May 27, 1803, and died, aged 83 years.

BENJAMIN WHITE,⁶ son of Benjamin and Mercy (Thomas) White, b. at Marshfield Ferry, December 17, 1849; mar., 1778, Lucy, dau. of Arthur Howland.

Mr. White was a tanner by trade, carrying on the business with his brother, Luther White. Grand jurymen at that time were chosen by ballot vote of the town. He received the unanimous vote of the town for twenty years, and although re-elected, declined further service. Marshfield's "honored historian" says of him: "He was a gentleman much beloved and respected." The following is inscribed on his gravestone:

"To the memory of Mr. Benjamin White, who died August 7, 1819, in the 70th year of his age.

"Time cannot wash from grateful memories' view
A friend so kind, so constant, and so true."

His widow survived until March, 1836.

Mrs. Sarah (Little) White d. July 19, 1845, aged 69 years.

LUTHER,⁶ youngest son of Benjamin and Mercy (Thomas) White, was born at Marshfield Ferry, May 3, 1758, and mar. 1788, Mary Deleno, a direct descendant of Philip de la Noye, the French Huguenot, who had joined the Pilgrims in Leyden, and arrived in this country 1621, aged 19 years. Children:—

1. Benjamin+, b. April 3, 1790; mar. (1st) Anna Dingley, 1815; (2d) Mrs. Elizabeth (Robbins) Dotin.

2. Thomas Foster+, b. Feb. 10, 1802; mar. Hannah Clark. Mr. Luther White was a shoemaker by trade, and also owned the tanyard with his brother Benjamin. After his marriage he lived with his mother in the Thomas house a few rods southeast of the present house where their eldest son Benjamin was born, April 3, 1790. In 1800 Luther White carted his lumber to a saw mill near Henry Whiting's (Reuben Delano place) to be sawed for his new house. It was commenced and raised August, 1801, finished and ready to occupy that fall. Their youngest son, Thomas Foster, was born in the east room, February 10, 1802, where he died, April 2, 1887, aged 85 years, 1 month, and 22 days. A few weeks after his birth his cousin, Thomas Foster, paid him a visit, and being childless, asked to bestow his name upon the new babe, and was allowed to do so. The west chamber was finished for a shoe shop. The bench which he used still remains in the house. His death, which occurred October 27, 1818, aged 60 years, was a great and irreparable loss to his family. His widow, Mrs. Mary (Deleno) White, d. March 3, 1831, aged 67 years.

Philip Deleno, father of Mary (Deleno) White, was admitted a freeman, January 1, 1632, and early removed to Duxbury, where he settled a little northwest of Alden's on the north side of Mill brook. His farm was confirmed to him in 1637, extending from the marsh on the northern part of the town, to Alden's on the south; from Bumpus's land on the west to the sea on the east, comprising about forty acres. He was a man of much respectability, was employed in surveying lands, and was often one of the grand inquest of the colony, vide General Register. Two of his great grand-children, Joseph, 3d, and his brother Zebediah, were employed on a fishing schooner belonging to Elijah Sampson of Duxbury. It was taken in the early part of the Revolutionary War, and burned by the enemy off the beach within sight of the town. The schooner was commanded by Capt. Lewis Drew, and manned by Ezra Howard, Joseph Deleno, Zebediah Deleno, Abiatha Alden, and Zadoc Bradford. They were all taken to New York and put on board the Jersey prison ship, where they all died excepting Alden and Bradford, who returned with the sad news. Another brother, Jesse, enlisted when sixteen years of age in the Revolution, serving through the war with much suffering. When he was discharged he was paid in Continental money. As an illustration of its depreciated value, on the way home he paid $40 for a breakfast.

The following is a newspaper clipping reporting his eighty-second birthday:—

“Mr. Thomas F. White of Marshfield, passed his eighty-second birthday February 10, 1884, which was the occasion of the gathering of twenty-five children and grandchildren to listen to the interesting story of the past, and take heart for the future. It was a meeting long to be remembered. The mother was a native of Plymouth, and a sister of Mr. John Clark now living in Plymouth, aged eighty-four. A sister, Miss Rebecca Clark, now presides over the household at Marshfield, with all the care and economy which gave dignity and lustre to the Pilgrim names. After the bountiful repast, fertile wit, which largely included the moral sentiment, music by the grandchildren, and the reading of an original retrospective paper by Mrs. Bosworth of Pembroke, one of the children, completed the afternoon."

Mrs. Hannah (Clark) White d. in Marshfield, July 22, 1876, aged 72 years, 7 months, greatly lamented by husband, children, relatives, neighbors, and friends. "Her children rise up and call her blessed, her husband also, and he praiseth her." She has gone to receive that praise from the Master, none which can be greater. "She hath done what she could." And she did much. Silver and gold she had little to give, but such as she had, an ever helping hand in sickness and trouble, a cheerful, kind word to all her associates, was ever ready to be given when needed. As many little springs, tiny in themselves, form together finally in one grand body of water to bless those around it, so her quiet words, her "line upon line, precept upon precept," comes back to her children and children's children with a new force and meaning as time wears on. Thank God that we are her children, and bless Him for the great gift of her life, the memory of which we will keep green and fragrant in our lives.

Thomas Foster White died suddenly, April 2, 1887, in the room in which he was born 85 years, 1 month, and 22 days before. He was a man of strict integrity, one of whom it could be said, "His word was as good as his bond." He had a kind, loving heart, and we never fully realized the loss of our mother until we must add to it the bitter words "Father is dead." Only those who have been blessed with good parents know the length, breadth, and height of "Mother is dead! Father is dead!" "He gave, He took, He will restore. He doeth all things well, is our hope and balm."

That is one of the sad stories in our family history. A father and mother so useful, so much needed, taken, and three orphan children left to the care of the grief broken maternal grandparents. PHILIP,⁶ son of Nehemiah White, b. 1734; mar. (1st) — Campbell. Children:—

4. Phila +, b. in 1763; mar. — Fox.

5. Nehemiah +, b. in Woodstock, Conn., 1765; mar. Mercy Miller of West Springfield, Mass.

Philip, Sr., removed from Woodstock, Conn., to Tinmouth, Vt., about 1780, where he bought a farm situated in the eastern edge of the township. In 1793 a strip of land in the eastern part of Tinmouth was set off to the town of Wallingford, so that, after 1793, Philip White was a resident of Wallingford, Vt., without changing his place of residence. It is handed down that Philip had several brothers who emigrated to Kentucky about the time Philip came to Vermont. His mother-in-law, Susanna Campbell, married for a second husband a man by the name of Carpenter,—probably grandfather of the Dr. Carpenter who was for twenty years President of the Vermont Medical School, Burlington, Vt. Her name is in "Thompson's History of Vermont" as one of the few instances of longevity in the Green Mountain State. She died in February, 1817, at the age of 100 years and 6 months. Four months before this she attended the funeral of her grandson, Nehemiah White.

Philip White was in the service in the Revolution. The gun which he carried, manufactured in 1742, or about that time, in London, is now in the possession of his great-grandson, Nehemiah White, of Galesburg, Ill. The gun was also carried by Philip in the "Old French War." He died October, 1822, aged 88 years. The anecdote is told, that probably in 1775, when, after the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill, thousands flocked to Boston and placed the city under siege, Philip went into service, the work at home being left in charge of his daughter, Lois, a strong and resolute girl of eighteen or nineteen. While milking a fractious cow, the cow wheeled around and, running one of her long and pointed horns under the large roll of hair on Lois's head, actually swung her clear around, perhaps more than once. She used to say this was the worst case of "hair-pulling" she ever experienced.

Philip White resided for many years in a part of the house with his son Nehemiah, when he was at one time visited by his grand-nephew, Rev. Nicholas White, who was a Methodist preacher. Philip was an ardent Calvinist in theological belief. When the time for family devotions came Philip objected to the proposal of Nicholas to offer prayer, saying (alluding to the ardent devotions of the early Methodists): "Too fiery, Nicholas, too fiery." Whereupon the young preacher went into the part of the house occupied by Nehemiah and held worship there. This, indeed, serves to show how far the gulf between the different denominations of Christians has been filled since then.

PHILA,⁷ dau. of Philip and — (Campbell) White; mar. — Fox, who was long known as one of the most prominent citizens in Wallingford, Vt. One of their sons, John, practised medicine in Wallingford nearly fifty years, and had two sons who became physicians, W. C. Fox and George Fox, the latter practising in Rutland, Vt.

Rev. Nicholas White d. in Brooklyn, N. Y., February 14, 1861, and his wife d. April 7, 1853, in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The following is copied from the Christian Advocate of June 6, 1861:—

Rev. Nicholas White was born in Middletown, Rutland county, Vermont, June 8, 1786, and died in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., February 14, 1861. He sought the Lord in early life, and became a member of the M. E. church in 1810; was licensed to exhort in 1811; was received on trial in the New York Conference in 1813, and appointed to the Plattsburg circuit, and continued there in 1814. In 1815 he was ordained deacon and appointed to the Charlotte circuit. During this year he was stricken down with a pulmonary attack. The bleeding from the lungs was so profuse and obstinate that for months but little hope was entertained for his recovery. He held the relation of superannuate during the years of 1816 and 1817; was re-appointed to the Charlotte circuit in the years 1818 and 1819. In 1820 he travelled the St. Albans circuit; 1821 and 1822, New Windsor; 1823, Newburgh; 1824, New Paltz; 1825, Dutchess. In 1826 and 1827 he was stationed in the city of New York; 1828 and 1829, on Mount Pleasant circuit; 1830 and 1831, on Cortlandt; 1832, Reading; 1833, Saugatuck; and in 1833 on Dutchess again. From 1835 to 1838, inclusive, he was presiding elder on the Delaware district, and in 1839 was presiding elder on the White Plains district, and from 1840 to 1843, inclusive, was presiding elder on the Poughkeepsie district. During the years 1844 and 1845 he was at the Asbury charge in New York; 1846 and 1847, at the Eighteenth street charge, same city; 1848 and 1849, at Newtown, L. I.; 1850 and 1851, at Carlton Avenue, in the city of Brooklyn, and in 1852 and 1853 was in the Dean street charge in the same city. While in this charge he buried his beloved wife, and here he closed his effective labors as an itinerant preacher. In 1854 he was again superannuated, and in this relation was continued until the Master called him home. He was twice a representative of the New York Conference in the General Conference.

Brother White was a good man. The writer of this commenced his special acquaintance with him in May, 1818, as his assistant on the Charlotte circuit, in Vermont, and was his assistant again on the St. Albans circuit in 1820; has followed him in other fields of labor, and never yet heard a whisper against his moral or Christian character, but on the contrary, has uniformly heard him spoken of as a true disciple, a sincere and devoted follower of the Meek and Lowly. He was a Methodist from principle, and heartily subscribed to its doctrines, and consciously conformed to its discipline, yet was truly catholic in spirit and practice, loving, and in every reasonable way manifesting his love to all who bore the image and superscription of his Divine Master. As a Methodist preacher he was orthodox, animated, ardent, successful, and loyal; heartily acknowledging the authority of the General Conference to make rules and regulations for the edification and government of the church,—like a true son in the gospel, he yielded implicit obedience to this authority and cheerfully kept, without attempting to mend, the rules of the church. He eschewed all innovations, and heartily deplored any departure from the old paths of true Wesleyanism in either doctrine, discipline, or usage. He was a warm friend of all our institutions, and gave a zealous support to all our instrumentalities for doing good, especially of the good old Christian Advocate and Journal. He had some agency in the commencement of its publication, and was wont to wait and watch with intense interest its weekly arrival, when its perusal seemed always to furnish him a rich repast. He was a devoted husband, and ever after the death of his too nearly idolized wife, seemed never to recover his wonted cheerfulness. He is with her now in heaven, thank God, and there joined in a still purer affection that will know neither chill or change. He was an affectionate and true father, and has left a large yet scattered family of children and grand-children, who deeply mourn their loss, especially his youngest daughter, on whom was devolved specially and providentially the duty of caring for and comforting her father in his last lonely years, and smoothing his rough path to the grave, and softening his dying pillow; and never did daughter meet responsibilities with greater fidelity and cheerfulness. Seldom, if ever, was any preacher better fitted to have charge of young preachers, especially such as lacked self-confidence and needed words of encouragement and comfort. But he is gone; his body to the tomb, his soul to heaven. Friend and guide of my youth, farewell! We meet no more on earth; God grant we may meet in heaven at last.

Abel Turner, Jr., d. at Schuyler Falls, N. Y., February 25, 1865. He was great-grandson of John Turner of New Haven, Conn., who mar., December 16, 1686, Joanna Benton, dau. of Daniel Benton, one of the signers of the Plantation Covenant at Guilford, June 1, 1639, and was son of Edward Benton of Guilford.

Abel Turner was a farmer, having lived nearly all his life upon the farm he purchased in early manhood, and upon which he died. He was a man of limited education but of strong judgment, and was often called upon to serve his town as Supervisor. In politics, Andrew Jackson was his patron saint. He was fond of his rifle and the chase. The lakes and streams of the Adirondacks, when they were an unbroken wilderness, had a fascination for him that the tourists and pleasure seekers of the present day can have but a slight conception of. A man of strong physique, unbounded courage and determination, greatly endeared to his children, who cherish his memory with an undying affection.

His wife, Mary Turner, was a daughter of Col. Ezra Turner, Jr., and grand-daughter of Ezra, Sr., who was a soldier with his father, Abraham Turner, in Massachusetts regiments in the Revolutionary War. Her mother, Amy Beman, was the daughter of Nathan Beman, the lad who piloted Ethan Allen into Fort Ticonderoga and subsequently served in the Revolutionary War, and whose father, Samuel Beman, marched with an expedition to Canada, in 1775, through the woods of Maine to Quebec.

Following is an item which appeared in the Globe of November 10, 1894:

Ancient Mariner.—Capt. Bates of Gloucester is Seventy-Five Years Old.—Happy Observance of His Birthday by His Friends and Relatives.—Always a Republican in Politics, But an Admirer of Ben Butler.

“Capt. James Young Bates, one of the oldest and best known of Gloucester’s many fishermen, is to-day celebrating his seventy-fifth birthday. All his relatives in that city are calling upon him, and with them he is quietly and happily passing the day.

“For a period well upon a half century Capt. Bates has made almost daily a trip to the fishing grounds, and with the advancing years has still retained all his expertness with the line. Two years ago the captain met with an accident that very nearly cost him his life. He was alone in his boat two miles outside Eastern Point light, when he fell overboard. No one was in sight even, and he was forced to depend entirely upon his own efforts. He caught hold of a rope hanging from the boat, pulled himself around to a convenient place for crawling aboard, and succeeded in getting into the boat, although the chill November waters almost froze the marrow in the old seaman’s bones. Then he sailed his boat into port, and until he got ashore he saw no one that could lend him aid. Beside a cold he suffered nothing serious.

“ Captain Bates was born in Scituate. His grandfather was the first keeper of the old Scituate light, and Captain Bates was keeper when the light was finally extinguished, after Minot’s light took its place.

“ The two famous heroines of the War of 1812, Rebecca and Abby Bates of Scituate, who played the fife and drum when the British were entering the harbor, and scared them away, were his aunts.

“ The captain is also a direct descendant of Peregrine White, the first white child born in New England, whose birth occurred on board the Mayflower in Cape Cod harbor, shortly after the vessel arrived in 1620. The captain got his middle name from Peregrine White’s daughter, who married Thomas Young.

“ During his whole life Capt. Bates has had remarkably good health. Until a year ago last March he had not had a sick day for nearly forty years.

“ Last month he made the journey to Boston, and a reunion was held at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Susan L. Holmes, in Cambridge, at which four generations were present. The company included a great grandfather, a great grandmother, a grandmother and grandfather, mother and father, and a nine months’ old babe.

“ He also visited his former home in Scituate and saw some of his relatives in that old town.

“ Capt. Bates followed the sea when a young man, before he was keeper of Scituate light, and when the light was abandoned he went out to the western frontier and tried that rough life for a year, when he returned and moved to Gloucester, where he has since followed fishing.

“ He has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Susan Prouty of Scituate, by whom he had six children, two of whom are now living, Mrs. Medora Wharff of Boston and Mrs. Susan Wilson of Gloucester. Mrs. Bates died in 1860, and nine years later the captain married Mrs. Laura Allen of Rockport. On December 29 next they will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. The captain has two sisters, older than himself, one of whom, Mrs. Susan McLoud of Gloucester, celebrated her eightieth birthday last April. The other sister is Mrs. Mary H. Smith of Scituate, who is seventy-nine.

“Capt. Bates has been an ardent Republican since the formation of the party, and in this fact finds a double enjoyment in celebrating his birthday so soon after Tuesday’s election.” The only Democrat he ever admired was Gen. Benjamin F. Butler.

Simeon McLoud resides in the house his father bought when he first moved to Gloucester, and his mother, being attached to the old place, spends most of her time with him.

Following is an account of his mother's 80th birthday anniversary:

Relatives in Attendance from Seventy-Eight Years to the Wee Baby of One Year.—A Fine Poem Written Expressly for the Occasion.

On Tuesday, April 10th, 1894, Mrs. Susan McLoud celebrated her 80th birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. H. Gamage, wife of ex-Alderman Gamage of this city.

About forty relatives were present, and the oldest one was Mrs. Mary Smith of Scituate, who is 78 years old, and is a sister to Mrs. McLoud. She came alone and unattended to Gloucester. The youngest was a grandchild, Jessie Mai McLoud, who is not yet one year old. The whole affair was a complete surprise to the old lady, and one long to be remembered by those who were present. There were relatives from Newburyport, Scituate, Newton Upper Falls, Salem, Boston, and East Boston.

When the guests were seated at dinner, the following poem was read by Nettie M. Smith of East Boston, which was composed for the occasion by Edward I. Thompson of Hyde Park, who is a friend of Mrs. McLoud:

Four score years is but a dream
Which lives within the mind;
The light of childhood's earliest beam
Is but a step behind.

The hours which charmed the youthful days
Still blossom in the heart,
The grace of womanhood o'erlays
The joys which ne'er depart.

Remembrance counts the jewels rare
Its rosary of love,
Till through the pathways of the air
Descends life's brooding dove.

Turn back the dials for a time,
 Recall the fleeting past,
 Let all the bells of mem'ry chime
 Till this sweet hour is past.

Cluster the roses which have shed
 Their fragrance on the life,
 For love's bouquet is never dead
 To Daughter, Mother, Wife.

Then join with them a blossom fair
 From off the purest vine,
 That love may find a joy more rare
 When Heaven and earth combine.

Let youth and age together vie
 In paths that each have trod,
 To live the life wherein doth lie
 The sweetest way to God.

The sunset hour is reached at last,
 The evening star grows bright,
 Shadows are creeping o'er the past,
 The future glows with light.

The dark horizon shades the eyes,
 That faith may clearly see
 Scenes where the future glory lies
 Across the crystal sea.

At a late hour all departed with smiles and happy faces, wishing the old lady prosperity and happiness for years to come, and hoping to be able to celebrate her 90th birthday in just such a way.

Mrs. Susan McLoud was born in Scituate in 1814, and was the daughter of Simeon and Jane Young Bates, and a direct descendant of Peregrine White. In 1837 she was united in marriage to the late Capt. John McLoud, residing in Scituate, the place of her birth, until 1855, when they removed to East Gloucester, at the old home where she still resides, and which was at that time the only house on Banner Hill.

She has had ten children, only three of whom are now living—

Capt. Alex. McLoud, Capt. Simeon McLoud, and Mrs. Charles H. Gamage.

She is apparently hale and hearty, and goes about as easily as she did in younger days. She received many pretty and appropriate presents from those who hold her dear, as tokens of their great love for her. She has what any one can desire and seek for, a sunny disposition, and it is a rare thing to find her peaceful frame of mind disturbed.

November 22, 1712, d. March 30, 1803, has been in the family about one hundred and fifty years. The face of the clock bears the name of the maker, "Peregrine White, Woodstock." It is a seven day clock, once giving the day of the month, and has always kept good time. Another clock with Peregrine's name on the face was owned a short time ago by Dr. Witherel, Woonsocket, R. I. The works inside are made of pounded brass, as is shown by the bruises on the brass. It was a fine clock and kept good time. There are also many other of his productions carefully preserved, such as silver spoons.

Was judge of the eastern district, with courts at Westboro and Grafton; also clerk of the town, a position he had filled continuously for twenty-one years. In the later position he was most widely known, as he will be long remembered for the carefulness, integrity, and courtesy with which he filled that office. Just prior to his death he had declined a re-election to the position of librarian of the public library, because of infirm health, an office he had held from the foundation of the institution. In every movement for the general prosperity of the town, for the promotion of moral reform, particularly of temperance, Mr. White was always prompt, earnest, and fearless. He died quite suddenly in the street.

1. William.

The First White Child.—Brief Sketch of the Life of George White, from His Diary.

I was born July 10, 1797, in Rome, Oneida, Co., New York. At the age of sixteen, my father, Dr. Stephen White, took me to Sackett's Harbor. I was enrolled as a village volunteer, and took a part in the memorable battle at that place in 1813. My father was an active and brave participant. My brother with a young drummer boy remained alone in the log barracks near Fort Tompkins, after the militia had fled, and seeing Colonel Grey, the commander of the British forces, brandishing his sword, to encourage his men to advance, one of these boys, resting his gun between the crevice of the logs, shot Colonel Grey through the heart. At the fall of their commander, a panic seized his troops, and they retreated and the place was saved.

In 1823 I was vestryman at Zion's Episcopal church. I then became a Methodist preacher and was appointed by the Oneida conference, a missionary to Green Bay, Wisconsin, and the Oneida Indians. In the autumn of 1834, I sailed with my family from Detroit, on the Lady of the Lake, Captain Dobbins commanding. G. M. Beall, Esq., was a passenger. I found an interesting social circle at Green Bay, Wisconsin, by whom we were kindly received, and with whom we spent two years very pleasantly.

A detachment of the Fifth U. S. Infantry, under the command of General Brooks, was stationed at Fort Howard. The officers were gentlemanly men, and with their families furnished a valuable addition to the community. The civil list was composed of men and women of sterling worth, among whom were Morgan L. Martin, Daniel Whitney, Tommy Green, Joel Fiske, G. M. Beall, Carlton Wheelock, etc., and their families. After two years of pleasant intercourse with the society in Green Bay, in 1836, we removed to Calumet, up the Fox river in a yawl boat, as there was no passable road.

I built a log house, and had but two neighbors between my home and Milwaukee, seventy-nine miles, they were Edward Pier and brother. Judges and lawyers made it convenient to happen along at my house to stay over night, and if social communion, free from all restraints of conventionalities, was ever enjoyed, it was at such meetings. My place, Calumet, had long been the home of a band of Menominee Indians, and I was urged by them to establish a trading post for their accommodation. I consented on one condition, that I would never under any circumstances furnish them with intoxicating liquor, and I never did. I found them a trusty, honest people, when not crazed by strong drink, literal fire-water. Unprincipled men would come into their neighborhood with a keg of liquor, and when they had imbibed the fire-water, they seemed to have no more strength or reason in them, and they would barter their all for one more taste.

As a proof of their honesty to those traders, who were true to, and trusted them, I will relate an incident. At one of the Indian payments which the traders were accustomed to attend, I was standing in company with others, by the Council house, when an Indian who had just received his annuity came out with his money wrapped up in one corner of his blanket. This Indian owed me twenty dollars. I said nothing to him; but a trader who sold whiskey demanded his pay, and seized the Indian's blanket in order to secure his debt. The Indian resisted, and the agent hearing the noise, came out and took the Indian under his protection.

Some hours after the payment closed, as I was standing in a company conversing, I felt my coat gently pulled, and looking around, an Indian woman extended her hand towards me, filled with half dollars. She said Kis-Ko-Top-Way (the debtor's name) had sent me the money that he owed me.

I have been requested to write a biography of my brother Peter and of my brother William, but in consequence of my long separation from them, I have not the material to make it interesting. I will say, however, that they were in an eminent sense nature's noblemen. They have passed into the unseen but real life, and are enjoying the elevated position to which their devotion to the right entitled them, and the prospective dealing which is assured us the birthright of all.

I am the only one of my father's immediate family remaining, and now in my eightieth year.

I await with confidence in God, and assurance of another and better life, my coming change.

In June, 1776, a vote was passed giving the following instructions to the representative of the town :

"To MR. MARK WHITE, JR. :

"Sir,—Our not being favored with the resolution to the Honorable House of Representatives, calling upon the several towns in this Colony to express their minds with respect to the important question of American Independence, is the occasion of our not expressing our minds sooner.

"But we now cheerfully embrace this opportunity to instruct you on that important question.

"The subverting our constitution, the many injuries and unheard of barbarities which the Colonies have received from Great Britain confirm us in the opinion that the present age will be deficient in their duty to God, their posterity and themselves, if they do not establish an American Republic. This is the only form of Government we wish to see established.

"But we mean not to dictate.

"We freely submit this interesting affair to the wisdom of the Continental Congress, who, we trust, are guided and directed by the Supreme Governor of the world, and we instruct you, sir, to give them the strongest assurance that if they should declare America to be a Free and Independent Republic, your constituents will support and defend the measure with their lives and fortunes."

He remained with his uncle seven years, and always drove the old chaise back and forth from Boston each week, finally making all the purchases for the store. Sketches from a memoir of Dea. John White, by Daniel Shattuck, of Concord, Mass:—

Dea. John White was a man of high reputation in the town of Concord. In his early years he was a painter. In 1773 he began trade in dry goods, etc., at which he was quite successful. He was one who took part at Concord fight, April 19, 1775, and an officer at the taking of Burgoyne, 1777. Soon after this he left the army and took up his trade again; but from 1780 to 1790, trade was very uncertain and often unprofitable. Those of the present day can hardly realize the difficulties of business of all kinds during this period. But in 1790 a happy change appeared. The constitution had been adopted, duties were uniform in all the states, enterprise started into new life and with it credit and confidence. There has been perhaps no period since the nation existed, considering its population, when so much wealth was accumulated as during the twenty years beginning 1790. It was during this period that Deacon White made business profitable.

He had an extensive trade from towns in New Hampshire and Vermont. His store was widely known, and all who came to trade with him felt great confidence in his integrity and fair dealing, and thus his business was extended. In 1812 he was chosen representative to the general court.

His religious opinions inclined to the Calvinistic faith rather than the Unitarian, the faith of Rev. Dr. Ripley; yet no alienation existed between them until about the year 1826. It had been the policy of the Orthodox sect for a few years previous to this period to take possession of the old churches, if possible; if not, to divide and form new societies and to sever all connection with Christians professing the faith of Channing, Worcester, and Ware. For many years New England was rent asunder, and weak societies sprang up all over the country from this cause. It was hoped that Concord might be exempt from this contagion, because from the days of Berkley (save for a short time), we had lived in harmony, all attending the same church. But we were not exempt. In 1826 John Vase, with about twenty others, seceded and formed a new church. The ties of affection and friendship between himself and Dr. Ripley and others were too strong to be easily severed. In 1827 he resigned the office of deacon, to which he was chosen in 1774, and which he had filled with so much propriety for over forty years; he was dismissed from the church at his own request, having paid over to his successor the church fund, of which he had been trustee. The church on the fifth of March, 1827, passed a unanimous vote of thanks for his long and faithful services as deacon and trustee. Deacon White was fond of children; would inquire the names of those he did not remember, and say, "Be good boys, go to school, and mind your mother," and as they went away gave them little books of which he always kept a supply. Children would not let New Year's day pass without going to see Deacon White. Through the entire day he heard, "Deacon, I wish you a happy New Year," and they all had something for their kind wishes. Sometimes the wish might not have been disinterested—the mother might have given the lesson thus, "Deacon, I wish you a happy New Year, and mother says I may take a primer, and the rest in sugar," and the little urchin had both.

He was kind, charitable, and benevolent; the poor and destitute never applied in vain. He had kind words for the afflicted, and those kind words were remembered long after mere acts of charity were forgotten. His deeds of charity were not like the broad river, to be seen by all who passed by, but more like the meadow brook, flowing still, constant, clear, and almost unseen, but as it ripples sparkling over the pebbles below. He was active in promoting the welfare of the church, the religious society, and the moral and civil improvement of the community, when it was known Deacon White had made up his mind to join the other church, Dr. Ripley was grieved, and the loss of such a man to himself and the church was severely felt, but to the new society he was a great acquisition, to which during the few years he lived after he joined it he was a liberal contributor and at his death he left a legacy for its support. He gave to the church of Acton, Mass., a Bible which is now in the public library of that town. He seemed to be imbued with kindness, sympathy, and love. In these he believed and trusted. They were with him in his daily walks, like good angels guiding his steps along the pathway of life. It would be difficult to find a man who had lived so long in whom there was so little to reprove; and as difficult to find one in whose life and character there was so much to love and imitate.

Daniel White, like his ancestors from Peregrine down, was a devoted religious man, yet different in faith, being a Universalist. He was a man of prayer, having daily family worship and asking blessing at the table. He was very methodical in all his ways; even the wood pile, like everything else around the farm, must be in its place, every stick in order. He served in the Revolutionary War, first as private under Captain Hudang of Littleton, afterwards as captain. The soldiers of the army were deserting, at which time Daniel was urged by a comrade to desert. After much persuasion he was on the point of yielding, when a voice was heard; he and his comrade followed the sound; it proved to be the voice of Washington at prayer alone in the field. Daniel said to his comrade, "Will you desert such a man?" His reply was, "No; I will stand by even unto death." He married Mary Hunt of Acton, a descendant of William Hunt of England, who was one of the original settlers in Concord, Mass., 1635.

Silas White lived with his paternal grandfather, his mother dying when he was five years old.

It has always been a tradition among the old people that they are descendants of William White of the Mayflower.

The following is taken from a letter written by Clarence E. White, Middleboro, Mass.:

“Our family have a coat of arms, formerly to be seen at the Historical Rooms in Boston, now at Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth. . . . ‘White’s Hill,’ where I now write, has been in the family for more than two hundred years, originally being a farm of two hundred acres. There are six generations of the family buried in one yard here, belonging to the Old Father Backus Baptist society, the historian of the Baptists.”

An Artistic Door Ajar.

It is later than her regular reception hour when I mount the stairs at 12 West street, Boston. Indeed, it is after the closing hours of the building; for the big jewelry firm at the corner has a case of diamonds below which must be jealously guarded. But the janitor has been requested to leave the great door unlocked so that I may enter without difficulty. He is in the halls arranging some piping, but cheerfully bids me mount higher if I wish to find No. 31.

Excelsior! a finely equipped building, with the General Theological Library to keep it safe for eternity as well as time, but even Homer nods; where is the elevator? Onward, there is 31; and the slanting sunset light falls through the gates ajar—beautiful gates one may add after being inside; for there are beautiful pictures, made of beautiful faces—faces of those after whom the pearly gates have barely closed—faces which those who love them desire to have reproduced by the artist's pencil.

Whatever may be the real separation between soul and body, they are so mingled that we might as well try to find the dividing bounds of intermingling night and day as to attempt to mark the line where spirit ends and matter begins; and so believe, as men may in eternity and heaven, they want to look upon beloved features as they embodied character in the flesh.

Miss White well says that the life rapidly transforms the face. She learns this by her profession, for this is the studio of Sarah Dennis White, a lady who receives me cordially, and whose conversation is almost as attractive as her pictures, which is saying a great deal. She is a native of Middleboro, Mass., and has been before the art world for some years as a landscape painter, specimens of which lie about the rooms. Only they do not lie; they tell the truth as nature's counterfeit.

There is a painting of Lake Ossipee—how the human eye likes to dwell upon such a union of mountain, trees, and water. There is a sea view of Eddystone Lighthouse. And here is still another—an American view—the coast of Mount Desert, near Bar Harbor, after a storm; a strong and lurid picture but faithful to life in every detail. It ought to grace Robert Grant's new story, "The Average Man," which is about ready for publication, and which contains a graphic description of a wooing on this very cliff.

Three years ago she drifted into crayon portraiture, and with such great success that she determined to make it a specialty. I must sit on the lounge and look at the likenesses before me. That is a face I know surely? No! as Miss White says, it is an essentially practical countenance, such as one often sees in New England—the concentrations of an ancestry of industry and skill in making both ends honorably meet. This picture has been made for a son, who is so satisfied with it that he bids the artist have it appropriately framed.

What a strikingly beautiful profile is yonder! It is Sara Jewett, the actress, whose New York friends—and they are of the highest social and artistic circles—praise the likeness as catching the very spirit of the original.

These two likenesses might stand as types of the ideal and practical in American life. Miss Jewett's nose is firm, she will have her way! but what gentleness and grace in the mouth!

Yonder is President Garfield, and the portrait does better justice to his high forehead than most pictures; for when bald heads get into portraits they are very apt to lose their distinctive intellectual foreheads in a general slope into the bare summits of the cranium.

It is a fact curious, that the longer one resides in a strange land, the more difficult does he find it to discriminate facial types which were at first easily distinguished; so it is with portraits, says my hostess, the first impression of the face is her best. If she can transfer that to her easel, her work is mainly done and the details are comparatively easy. Here is a sweet, mature face belonging to a young girl of only thirteen, who was evidently more with her elders than her mates. I tried various dresses and shawls and ornaments, with this child, says Miss White, but I could not get her real expression till I put on this simple sailor suit, and her mother says it was always so with her at home. Now there is Miss Jewett, arrayed in shimmering satin, embroidered with seed pearls, and such attire makes her face all the more beautiful. There is such a difference in faces. Here is another maiden, who died after a few hours' illness; that is a common type of a frail New Englander. And whose is this clean cut face, like a cameo in its soft outlines? That is a level-headed editorial friend, firm in his decisions, yet with a slightly depressed slope towards the back of his head, where some men have what a boyish friend of mine once called the bump of steem. Here is another picture of Miss White herself, taken by a foreign artist, where she is standing in a quaint old garden, in Berne, Switzerland, dreamily gazing at the shining peaks of the great Alpine mountain wall, at the north.

But the hour is passing! it is time to run round the corner and see my friend, William Redmond, in his new character, and so with a pleasant good-bye, I find my way down the flights. The portcullis is fastened; but it readily lets people out though outsiders cannot so readily enter; in which respect it differs from an English jail I once visited, where the directions were to let everybody in but no one out without special orders. Imprisonment in Miss White's studio would not be so bad.

Hon. William A. White.

Hon. William A. White, a resident of Santa Barbara, California, widely known throughout this commonwealth, died at his home in that city recently. Judge White was born in Middleboro, Mass.; was educated at Brown University, where he graduated with distinguished honors in 1857. After leaving the university he entered Harvard Law School, Cambridge, where he finished his professional studies. He was admitted to the bar in Boston, and soon after removed to Newport, R. I., where he formed a co-partnership with Hon. William P. Sheffield, under the firm of Sheffield & White. During his residence in Newport, his practice was large, varied, and extended, and for some time he was the justice of the municipal court of that city. Some fifteen years ago, ill health compelled him to remove to the more congenial climate of Santa Barbara, Cal., and from that time, although a constant visitor in Boston, he has made Santa Barbara his home. Though securing in this climate, an improved degree of health, he did not actively engage in the practice of the law, still his legal counsel was often sought by the members of his profession here and there, who held in high appreciation his large and varied legal knowledge. His attention during his residence there was almost exclusively bestowed upon dealings in real estate, and the success born of ripe judgment and a thorough attention to business, always seemed to attend his undertakings.

His interests in all public questions, whether of a social, political, or educational, led him to participate to the extent of his strength in every undertaking, and his name is linked with every measure of improvement inaugurated in Santa Barbara during the last dozen years. An ardent lover of books and literature, and a deep and thorough scholar. His time, when not devoted to business, was always actively employed in self-culture, and his literary and legal attainments were extensive, and a source of great profit and pleasure alike to himself and his friends. His love for his family fireside was one of the strongest characteristics of his nature, and a source of the greatest comfort to him in his final illness was the constant presence and attention of the two he held dearest upon earth—his wife and only sister. Courteous in his bearing, judicial in his judgments, just in his transactions, with a deep knowledge of men and a rare tact in his dealings with them, he lived respected, honored, and esteemed.

JOHN WHITE was killed by the Indians, with five others, while making hay July 24, 1710, in Brookfield, Mass.

After his death his widow returned to Concord where she lived with her son John until about 1732, when the two sons, John and Cornelius, returned to Brookfield; John going on

Samuel White.

The first distinct trace of Samuel White which I can find, is his enlistment, January 1, 1781, from the first precinct, of Brookfield, Mass., to serve for three years in the War of the Revolution, at the age of nineteen. He had enlisted before from Spencer, Mass., as I learn from his army record, on March 15, 1777, in Captain McColl's company, Colonel Wigglesworth's Massachusetts regiment, but I cannot learn from what place. He must have remained near Brookfield for some months, for on the twenty-second of April, 1781, according to Brookfield records, in the safe in the Historical Rooms in Boston, he was married to Susannah Hamilton of that place.

Samuel White's parents had died while he was a small child, and he had been brought up by his grand-uncle, Josiah White. He had two brothers, John and Benjamin, and a half brother, named Enos West. Enos West, when a man, lived for a time in Providence, R. I., removed later to New Orleans, where he was murdered by pirates. Samuel White and Susannah (Hamilton) White had twelve children, of whom one or two, at least, were born in Brookfield. Some were born in Calais, Vt., and I think some must have been born in New Hampshire, while the family were practically en route for Vermont, as I have heard that they came in company with William Templeton from New Hampshire, and I know that Polly, Samuel's oldest daughter, married Templeton.

The children of Samuel and Susannah White were, Polly, Lorania, Sewall, Lucy, Clarissa, Josiah, 1794, (my grandfather), Celia, Jesse, 1798, Leonard, Samuel, Susan, and Priscilla. When Priscilla was six months old her mother died, and Mr. White married for his second wife, Deidama Wakefield Crossman, and had two children, Enos and Silas. He lived at Pekin, on what has since been known as the old Sheldon farm. He had to work by the day to purchase his first seed grain, and to carry his grists to the mill at Peacham on his back.

His farm when he first moved to it was a wilderness, his only team one of oxen. He died in Montpelier, Vt., July, 1839; his army record gives the date as the thirteenth; his grand-daughter's letter, authority for the most I know, gives the thirtieth.

Susannah Hamilton, the first wife of Samuel White, was the daughter of Erasmus Hamilton of Brookfield, Mass., and his wife, Mary Adams, daughter of Abraham Adams, and a lineal descendant of Henry Adams of Quincy. Abraham Adams's children were: Eliphalet, born August 1, 1762; Susannah, born December 4, 1763; Abraham, Lydia, Betsey, Sewall, Jesse, Obadiah, Jabez, Polly, Cyrus.

Mrs. White was loved by all who knew her. She had a better education than most of her neighbors, and I have been told that they used to come evenings, from miles around, to hear her read.

This family preserved a record of the persons who came to America in the Mayflower, and believed themselves to have descended from William White.

Josiah White, who lived in Brookfield, Mass., somewhere between the years 1720 and 1750, might have been the grand-uncle who reared Samuel White.

The Old Arm Chair.

I love it, I love it! and who shall dare
To chide me for loving that old arm chair!
I've treasured it long as a sainted prize;
I've bedewed it with tears; I've embalmed it with sighs.
'Tis bound by a thousand bands to my heart;
Not a tie will break; not a link will start.
Would you know the spell? A mother sat there!
And a sacred thing is that old arm chair.

In childhood's hour I lingered near
The hallowed seat, with listening ear;
And gentle words that mother would give,
To fit me to die and teach me to live.
She told me that shame would never betide
With Truth for my creed, and God for my guide;
She taught me to lisp my earliest prayer
As I knelt beside that old arm chair.

I sat and watched her many a day,
When her eyes grew dim and her locks were gray;
And I almost worshipped her when she smiled,
And turned from her Bible to bless her child.
Years rolled on, but the last one sped—
My idol was shattered, my earth star fled!
I learnt how much the heart can bear,
When I saw her die in her old arm chair.

'Tis past! 'tis past! but I gaze on it now
With quivering breath and throbbing brow;
'T was there she nursed me, 't was there she died,
And memory flows with lava tide.
Say it is folly, and deem me weak,
Whilst scalding drops start down my cheek;
But I love it, I love it, and cannot tear
My soul from a mother's old arm chair.

CHAIR AND TABLE OWNED BY HANNAH (WHITE) HUNT, BORN 1765.

THOS. WHITE, Esq.,

Marlborough, N. H.

Dear Sir: Enclosed please find photograph of chair and table owned by my grandmother, Hannah Hunt, of Heath, born White in Lancaster, Mass., in 1765, and who died in Heath, July 19, 1839. I remember to have heard her say that she was a direct descendant from Peregrine, but do not know that any of our family are able to trace it.

It used to be said that this table was brought over in the Mayflower. Whether or not that is authentic, I am unable to say. It has occurred to me that you might like to insert this picture in your White genealogy. If it is not too late I will send you a profile of my mother, daughter of Hannah (White) Hunt.

Yours truly

JOHN H. LEAVITT,

Pres. of the Leavitt & Johnson Trust Co., Waterloo, Iowa.

BENJAMIN WHITE was b. in Goshen, now Vienna, Me., May 13, 1790.

Mr. White was a descendant of Peregrine White, the first child of English parentage born in New England.

He was the eldest of a family of ten children. When twelve years of age he went to live with a man by the name of Cummings, a farmer and orthodox deacon, in the town of Winthrop, Me. He left Winthrop at the age of eighteen, and became a pupil in Farmington academy. Having previously received little or no education he was obliged to enter one of the lowest classes in the school. He applied himself so assiduously to his studies that at the end of the second or third term he was able to engage as a teacher.

In 1812 he was in Augusta assisting in raising troops to enter the U. S. service. In January, 1813, he marched to Castine with a company in which he served as a non-commissioned officer, and remained there and at Eastport nearly a year. From a journal kept by him during the year it appears that about the only part of his experience suggestive of war was an occasional glimpse of such vessels as the Wasp and the Rattler.

Mr. White came to the vicinity of Montville about 1819, as a school teacher, and taught his first school in this section in South Freedom. Two or three years later he bought an interest in a saw mill on the Half Moon stream, North Montville, standing near the present site of Colby's mill, and a tract of land near it, built a log house, married, and commenced housekeeping.

For many years Mr. White spent his winters teaching school, in which calling he is said to have been very successful. He had a good reputation as a teacher of vocal music, and usually supplemented his day schools with an evening singing school. In 1828 or 1829 he built the house now standing near Colby's mill. He persisted in raising it without the use of liquor and had considerable difficulty in procuring a crew in consequence.

For a long series of years he served his town as selectman and representative in the legislature. In 1844 he was the Democratic candidate, or, rather, one of the Democratic candidates for congressman in his congressional district. On the third ballot, taken early in 1845, he received a majority over the seven other candidates, and served one term.

Mr. White was a man of sound judgment, wide information, and a tact for saying the right thing in the right place.

He d. June 7, 1860.

MR. SAMUEL WHITE :

Dear Sir.—Seeing the enclosed paragraph, and taking an interest in your undertaking, I have ventured to address you, though possibly you may have seen the White genealogy published many years ago in connection with that of Adams, of Quincy. It is many years since I have seen the book, which belonged to Adams White, Jr., of Brooklyn, Conn., and is now in possession of one of his daughters in New Jersey. I know it connected the family back to Peregrine, but it is so long since I saw the work I cannot particularize, nor can I note how or at what time the Adamses and Whites intermarried.

My grandfather, Joseph Foster, married Chloe White, daughter of Adams White, she a sister of Adams White, Jr., before mentioned. The families then resided in Dudley. Grandfather White removed to Connecticut, finally residing in Brooklyn, and Grandfather Foster in Hampton. I was a sort of pet of Grandfather White's, residing in the same town, and he sometimes used to suggest that I had good blood in my veins, running back as it did to Plymouth Rock and the Adamses. It used to tickle my boyish vanity, though it never "set me up" nor made me proud.

The White family intermarried with the Capron family, and in its genealogy the White branch, coming from Adams, is delineated. Perhaps I am ploughing old ground, that which is familiar to you. Both Adams and Adams, Jr., lived to be aged, and what was remarkable, the elder, who was a great reader, wore no glasses, save for about six months when fifty, after which his eyesight returned and was perfect to the end. The stamina of the White blood shows in me, on the eve of seventy-seven and never wore glasses.

Excuse this intrusive letter and believe me,
Fraternally yours,

WILLIAM FOSTER, JR.

P. S.—I ought to have noted that I wrote this by candle light, as my gas is at the side of my library, too far to give an adequate light.

When Daniel White lived in Upton, Mass., there was another Daniel White who was very short, and as he was over six feet in height they were distinguished as "long Daniel" and "short Daniel." It is understood Daniel had a brother Samuel. Daniel was in the Revolution. Twenty years ago a Mr. Hamilton came to this branch of Whites, trying to trace out a branch of the White family, in order to get a large sum of money in England, which he said could be obtained if the line could be traced unbroken. He said he had traced the Whites back to their origin; that they originated from the Earl of Mar, a Scottish chieftain who lived in Scotland in old feudal times. There has always been a Daniel in the family.

He Was a Sturdy Pilgrim.—Interesting Sketch of William White, Lineal Descendant of Peregrine White.

In the field of genealogical research there are ever many seekers for information concerning the descendants of the Pilgrims of Massachusetts Bay. Some of these descendants are residents of Bangor and other places in Maine, and a recent inquiry from a Boston gentleman concerning one of them has prompted a friend to send the appended sketch to The News for publication:

To The Daily News: William White, one of the earliest settlers and oldest citizens of Waldoboro, died at his home in that village July 30, 1887, at the advanced age of 94 years. He was born April 15, 1793, in the town of Goshen, county of Hampshire, Plymouth Colony, and was a lineal descendant of the historical Peregrine White, the first Pilgrim male child born in the Colony.

His life was nearly commensurate with that of the American Republic. He was born the first year of Washington's second administration, and was the youngest of ten children, eight boys and two girls. One of the sisters still survived at the time of William's death, at the age of 98. The eight brothers were blacksmiths—axe-makers by trade, and were widely known for the excellence of their workmanship.

William White was the son of Ezekiel White and Sarah Vinton. The names of the ten children of this marriage sufficiently attest the Puritan spirit with which the parents, in common with the other inhabitants of the colony, were imbued. They were Ezekiel, Peregrine, Philip, Nathaniel, Abiather, Ephraim, William, Sarah, and Dolly.

William first came to Waldoboro in the fall of 1810, and spent the winter in that town, returning to his home in Goshen in the spring. He returned again, however, to Waldoboro the next year and established his home, where he continued to reside until his death. He married Sally Weaver, a daughter of another of Waldoboro's early settlers, by whom he had four children, three of whom—sons—are now respected residents of the village. Two brothers also came to Maine about the time that William came—Job, who lived and died in Belfast, and Abiather, in Jackson, Waldo county. Chandler White, who died in Bangor in 1869 and was the father of Peregrine White, Esq., now a prominent lawyer of the city, was the son of Abiather.

William was always painstaking and solicitous to do his work well, in the doing of which his pride was ever manifest. Thousands of his axes and edge-tools—the product of his own skill and handiwork—were wielded with a pleasure and satisfaction only known to themselves, by the early settlers, in felling the forests and building the ships and humble habitations of the Pine Tree State, and well may it be said (as was fittingly and feelingly observed by the good pastor at his funeral) if the man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is the benefactor of his race, surely he who forges from the rough and tempers and fits for human use the tools and implements of the artisan and laborer is not undeserving of the gratitude of his fellowmen.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Graham, the Baptist village pastor, who, by tenderness, sympathy, and Christianlike bearing, commended himself not only to the relations of the deceased, but to all who were present. His text was the 90th, the oldest, Psalm, "Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations." The burden of his supplication and prayer was, "O God, we come to Thee in this hour of affliction, because we know not where else to go!" His comforting words, his utterance not infrequently well nigh stifled by the overflowing fullness of his heart, his tenderness and fervent sorrow—all in such perfect unison with the wounded feelings and loneliness of the sorrowing and aged widow and friends—soothed and reconciled as far as human words and sympathy could the hearts that were heaviest laden.

JOEL, a farmer and carpenter, son of Noah and Tamar (Bates) White, b. September 1, 1796; mar. Sarah Vinton, b. in Goshen (probably) March 21, 1800. She was the daughter of Abiather and Sarah (Paine) Vinton. Soon after his marriage (February 22, 1816) Joel White removed to Leroy, Genesee County, N. Y., where several of his children were born. In 1825 he moved to the town of Arkwright, Chautauqua County, N. Y., to cast his lot with the early pioneers of the wilderness. As he wearily climbed the wooded hills he paused to stick the ox-goad, which he carried, into the ground beside the rugged pathway, saying as he did so that "it would grow." Many years afterward, when the poplar switch had grown to giant dimensions, his son, Elliot Vinton White, bought the farm in whose dooryard the sentinel poplar stood, a landmark for miles around, a fitting monument to the sturdy character of Joel, the pioneer. He first settled on the summit of the Arkwright hills, but afterward made his home in a sheltered nook among the hills, which was known as "Joel's Basin" for many years. He was a good man, just and honorable in all his ways, one whose memory yet clings around the place which knows him no more. Children:—

4. Elizabeth, mar. (1st) John (or Gilbert) Brooke; (2d) Capt. John Corwin of Salem.

Edward Winslow, Jr., joined the Pilgrims at Leyden a few years previous to their embarking to America, and perhaps none of them contributed more largely to the establishment and success of the colony than he, being the third signer of the compact. In the years 1633, '36, and '44 he was appointed governor of the colony. He was sent as agent of the colony to the Court of England in 1623 and '24, also '44 and '45. He possessed great influence at the Court of Cromwell, defending the colony against the misrepresentation of their enemies. Being appointed by Cromwell one of the commissioners of arbitration between the English nation and the United Provinces.

He brought the first cattle into the colony in 1624 from England, which were committed to him and Mr. Allerton to sell for the company. Was tried, and proved "able and faithful, a good man."

About 1637 he removed to Marshfield where he built a house not far from the present Winslow house, which is said to have been built by Isaac Winslow, one hundred and fifty years ago. He called his grant at Green Harbor, "Carsewell," from a family-seat of his ancestors in England.

John Endicott was chosen governor in 1645 and afterwards planned an expedition, in 1655, against the Spaniards in the West Indies. He appointed Governor Winslow first commissioner of the commonwealth to superintend the expedition. On the passage between Hispaniola and Jamaica he was seized with fever and d. May 8, 1655, aged 59 years, 6 months. His remains were consigned to the ocean with the honors of war. His widow d. in Marshfield —, 1680, and is buried in the Winslow burying ground. Governor Josiah was the first native born of the country who held the office of governor. He was early introduced into public life, and has been called the most accomplished man of his day in New England. He not only had the courage to encounter the ambush and bullets of the Indians, but that nobler courage, called moral, to oppose the rigorous measures against the Quakers in 1658. And it is not often we find, even to this day, public men with moral nerve to stand up in opposition to the great body of the people whom they serve; less often are they found to possess the strength of character to stem the torrent of general public delusion. Governor Josiah died in Marshfield, December 18, 1680, aged 52 years. The expenses of his funeral were directed to be paid from the public treasury, in testimony of the colony's affection and gratitude. His widow died in 1703.

6. Daniel; mar. Eunice Shannon; d. March 12, 1826.

Asa Metcalf's father, Nathaniel, came to this country previous to the French and Indian War, with two of his brothers. He mar. Rebecca Dill in Wales. She proved herself to be a remarkable woman. During the French and Indian War her husband was discharged from the army at Fort Hall, N. Y., with two others. They were waylaid, at the foot of Flat rock, Fort Ann, by the Indians. He was shot through the heart; one of his companions was severely wounded, and the other escaped. The people at the fort, hearing the firing of the Indians, rushed out and recovered the bodies.

The troops being defeated at the forts on the lakes made the Indians bold, and they pressed on toward Fort Albany. Mr. Metcalf and wife had all their earthly possessions in the fort at Greenwich which was garrisoned with about forty soldiers. Panic stricken they fled to Fort Albany, and left Mrs. Metcalf and little son Asa, about three years old, in the fort. She could not be prevailed upon to go with them. They, knowing that a body of Indians was close by the fort, left her with all belongings of the fort. The first night, she expected an attack and was not disappointed. She left her child in a stack of peas with instructions not to make a noise, which were obeyed. Twelve muskets with ammunition were in the round house; these she loaded and placed in the most convenient position, with a determined resolution to give the Indians their contents. At night she secured the gate and took her position in the round house. It was a dark, rainy night, so she took precaution to get her proper bearing upon the gate, so as to know where to put the balls. Between eleven and twelve o'clock, as near as she could guess, the Indians came to the gate and made an attempt to break in. Desiring to deceive them she went over the fort pretending to route up the men. Quickly entering the round house she discharged her arms in quick succession. They fled. The soldiers who ran away were reprimanded by the commander of Fort Albany. A volunteer company was soon raised to go to the relief of the heroic woman at Greenwich, arriving there in the morning. Pools of blood were found at the gate and the appearance of carrying away the dead and wounded, which was an Indian custom. The widow moved to Fort Albany, thence to Pittsfield, Mass. Supposed that she moved from there to Hubbardston where her son Asa married Mehitable Upham. (My grandfather Metcalf was this child; he, after becoming a man, owned a farm in Northfield, Mass. By fraud lost all his property and subsequently moved to Chesterfield. A very poor man, died in Marlborough, N. H., aged 88 years. T. W.)

CHAPTER XI.

THE PILGRIM FATHERS.

By Mrs. Hemans.

The breaking waves dash'd high
On a stern and rock-bound coast ;
And the woods, against a stormy sky,
Their giant branches toss'd ;

And the heavy night hung dark,
The hills and waters o'er,
When a band of exiles moor'd their bark
On the wild New England shore.

Not as the conqueror comes,
They, the true-hearted, came ;—
Not with the roll of the stirring drums,
And the trumpet that sings of fame ;—

Not as the flying come,
In silence, and in fear ;—
They shook the depths of the desert's gloom
With their hymns of lofty cheer.

Amidst the storm they sang :
Till the stars heard, and the sea ;
And the sounding aisles of the dim woods rang
To the anthem of the free.

The ocean-eagle soar'd
From his nest, by the white wave's foam,
And the rocking pines of the forest roar'd :—
Such was their welcome home.

There were men with hoary hair
Amidst that pilgrim band :
Why had they come to wither there,
Away from their childhood's land ?

There was woman's fearless eye,
 Lit by her deep love's truth ;
 There was manhood's brow serenely high,
 And the fiery heart of youth.

What sought they thus afar ?
 Bright jewels of the mine ?
 The wealth of seas ?— the spoils of war ?—
 No — 't was a faith's pure shrine.

Yes, call that holy ground,—
 Which first their brave feet trod !
 They have left unstain'd what there they found—
 Freedom to worship God !

The original manuscript of the above poem, in Mrs. Hemans's own writing, is on exhibition in Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth, Mass. Also, the cradle of Peregrine White, the great iron-dinner-pot of Miles Standish, and other relics.

PLYMOUTH ROCK.

(The following poem was written by Samuel White of Clinton, Mass., who was born at Marlborough, N. H., December 23, 1803, and is one of the few remaining of the fifth generation from Peregrine White, of the Plymouth Pilgrims):—

Proud emblem of freedom, where the Pilgrims first stood,
 As they gazed on the ocean, that treacherous flood,
 There they periled their lives, their freedom to gain,
 And sought God's protection, nor sought it in vain.
 They knelt on this rock heartfelt thanks to return,
 For his kind preservation each heart burst in turn ;
 This sacred foundation on which they first stood
 They dedicate now to the glory of God.
 'T was in years long gone by, two hundred and more,
 They first bent the knee on New England's fair shore,
 From Pilgrim's firm rock there went up thro' the air
 Loud shouts of thanksgiving from each humble soul there.
 They cast a fond look toward their old native home,
 Far over the ocean where the wild billows foam,

Where they left many friends to their hearts very dear,
And bade them farewell while dropped the fresh tear ;
And now while they hasten the Mayflower to gain,
Their minds revert back, yet not without pain,
As they think of their childhood where love did beguile,
When they nestled with joy 'neath a fond mother's smile.
Ye Fathers and Mothers, ah ! where are ye now,
Ye dear aged friends with snow-whitened brow ;
No more shall we meet thee on life's fleeting shore,
Your wise words of counsel will greet us no more ;
No more shall we greet thee in Old England's blest home,
No more in thy fields shall our living feet roam,
No more in thy meadows shall we hear the lark sing,
No more shall the voice of the nightingale ring,
No more shall we ramble thy forests so dear,
As in days of our youth with nothing to fear,
We leave thee, Old England, our old native home,
We bid thee farewell, in New England we roam.
Old England, Old England, we bid thee adieu,
And turn our attention to England the New.
And now as we sit by our own scanty store,
In dreams we revisit thy sea-beaten shore,
In dreams we are roaming thy meadows hard by,
And plucking such wild flowers as best please the eye ;
In dreams we are climbing thy rough, ragged hills,
Or sporting with joy by thy pure pearly rills ;
We mourn o'er those youthful days ever gone by,
And can but refer to them with a deep sigh ;
In dreams we revisit thy churches of yore,
In dreams we are pondering thy old English lore,
In dreams we remember thy ancient church clock
Which wakes us to realize we are on "Plymouth Rock."
Our dreams have all vanished, in New England we roam,
Far from the scenes of our old native home,
Across the wide ocean our dear little flock
Have all landed safely on old Plymouth Rock.

SAMUEL WHITE.

June 30, 1889.

WRITTEN FOR THE COMMEMORATION OF OUR PILGRIM FATHERS.

Sixteen hundred twenty years long time ago has passed,
Eighteen hundred ninety-four will speed its way as fast ;
Nearly three centuries have fled between the dates I tell ;
May the successors of our sires be found to prosper well.

Descendants of our Pilgrim sires, the wilderness to tame,
Planted their feet upon her soil, and took the red man's claim ;
They reared their humble cottages, as we their children know,
They felled the sturdy forest trees, two hundred years ago.

They cleared the forests far and wide,—those hardy sons of toil,
Their sturdy hands the plow would guide and till the fruitful soil.
In early spring their corn would plant and other grains would sow,
And cultivate the genial earth, two hundred years ago.

The kine oft roamed the forests wide, or on the mountains high,
To crop the tender foliage green, or in the shade to lie
Till Sol's bright rays had disappeared the horizon below,
Then wandering toward their hovel home, two hundred years ago.

And ere the morning sun's bright ray shines free o'er yonder hill,
The milkmaid by old brindle sat, her pail with milk to fill ;
While to the field those hardy sons at early dawn would go,
To swing the scythe and wield the rake, two hundred years ago.

And when their corn had well matured and ripened in the sun,
When autumn leaves were fading fast and harvesting begun,
Their grateful songs ascended high, their thankfulness to show,
While gathering in their precious crops, two hundred years ago.

And when the husking time arrived they were all well employed,
The men and women, girls and boys,—they all the fun enjoyed ;
They sang fine songs and cracked their jokes, while each girl had a bean
To wait upon and 'scort them home, two hundred years ago.

And when Thanksgiving was proclaimed, a jolly time they had,
The young folks anxious to return and visit marm and dad ;
Where turkeys, ducks, and chickens, too, were all placed in a row,
And pumpkin pies were all the rage, two hundred years ago.

Their schools were few and far between, their teachers fewer still,
 The good man ruled with birch in hand to bow the stubborn will ;
 The girls and boys at his command were all placed in a row,
 To read, recite, and lessons spell, two hundred years ago.

No grand barouche was e'er at hand to waft them on to church,
 The husband on the grey mare's back, his riding stick of birch,
 His wife upon a pillion rode, behind her husband though,
 And thus along to church they budged, two hundred years ago.

No splendid edifice was reared wherein to worship God,
 No cushioned seats at their command, they knelt upon the sod ;
 No chimes of bells the silence broke on Sabbath morning, no !
 They worshipped 'neath heaven's canopy, two hundred years ago.

No sculptured desk attracts the eye, no festooned works of art
 To draw the mind from heavenly things or drive them from the heart ;
 No chiselled ornaments were seen to make a gaudy show,
 The preacher's desk was God's green, two hundred years ago.

No death knell tolls to tell the grief for dear departed friends,
 The quivering lip, the moistened eye, with the heart's sorrow blends ;
 The mounds where rest those manly forms long years have levelled low,
 No marble marked their resting place, two hundred years ago.

Thus did our Fathers stem the tide, the savage foe did face,
 While sailing down life's treach'rous sea they humbly grew in grace.
 When age, decrepid age, arrived, death seemed no more a foe,
 But like a friend to bear them home, two hundred years ago.

And now, while I commemorate the years long passed and gone,
 Few are the moments left to me till the last breath is drawn.
 I leave these scenes to other hands, I'll soon be summoned home,
 But mortal man can ne'er divine the centuries to come.

SAMUEL WHITE.

Being in his ninety-first year, and the seventh generation from William White of Mayflower memory.

PEREGRINE WHITE.

By Mrs. L. H. Sigourney.

'T is bleak and wild on old Cape Cod
 'Mid the fierce November gale,
 While there the little Mayflower roamed
 With a lingering stranger's sail ;
 And close a fair young creature clasped
 Her helpless infant's form,
 And cheerily sang 'mid the chilling blast
 "Oh! a mother's heart is warm."

'T was wintry cold on Plymouth beach
 Where the log-reared cabins rose,
 'Mid frowning rocks and howling storms
 And the shaft of Indian foes.
 'Mid dearth of bread and thick'ning graves
 Yet hark to the tuneful song
 That soothed the wail of a lonely babe,—
 "Oh! a mother's heart is strong."

She slept—and beside her pallet low
 A being seemed to stand,
 Who changed the gloom of the dreary scene
 With a wave of his spirit hand,
 Spread cultured fields with golden corn,
 Bade pleasant mansions rise ;
 And streets with busy people throng,
 And church spires woo the skies.

While moving on thro' Marshfield's vales,
 'Mid the balm of the summer breeze,
 With a peaceful smile on his honored brow
 A fair old man she sees :—
 Full many a change in the Mother Land
 From the cottage to the throne,
 As well as here in this younger sphere,
 That reverend sire hath known.

King James, the pedant, hath found a tomb ;
 King Charles at Whitehall bled ;
 Stout Cromwell held his twelve years' rule
 And slumbered with the dead ;

The second Charles with gibe and jeer
 His royal realm surveyed ;
 The second James in panic haste
 Fled from the wreck he made.

William and Mary, hand in hand,
 The sceptre's sway sustained ;
 Queen Ann, the last of Stuart's line,
 In regal splendor reigned ;
 Seven sovereigns from their palace proud
 Had Death, the spoiler, swept,— Yet still his course, erect and calm,
 New England's first born kept.

Then soft the Guardian Spirit said,
 As he took his parting flight,
 "Yon sage of four-score years and fair,
 With locks so silvery white,
 Is he you bore with love and care—
 Your baby—Peregrine White."
 And the mother's heart was glad that day
 From the dream that had cheered the night.

FOREFATHERS' DAY.

WORCESTER, December, 1889.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen :

It becomes my very pleasant as well as grateful duty to speak a few words of our forefathers and mothers on this, which to us, their descendants, is the natal day of our country. A day to recall the sacrifices made for us,—a day to renew our allegiance to that faith, principle, diligence, and prayer, which makes their works look to us like a miracle. Verily, they were in truth a company fed in the wilderness, who left baskets for us to gather up. A day when every true, loyal son of the Pilgrim will turn in loving reverence to that band of earnest men and women, who took hunger, cold, want, and death, but chose that as small when faith pointed the way to secure that freedom we enjoy to-day.

Such was the charter party of the Mayflower,—such were the men and women that “From seeds they sowed with weeping,

Our richer harvests rise,
We still the fruits are reaping
Of Pilgrim enterprise.”

Drop a tear for our foremothers. What loneliness! Three thousand miles of water between them and the dear old English home, and not a sign of civilization appeared in the deep forests, where wild beasts prowled and the Indians roamed. What iron will and nerve and faith in God must have possessed them to have passed through the dangers of those early days when the cry of the new-born babe mingled with the groan of the dying.

“’Tis bleak and cold on old Cape Cod,
’Mid the fierce November gale,
While there the little Mayflower roamed
With a lingering stranger’s sail;
And close a fair young mother clasped
Her helpless infant’s form,
And cheerily sang, ’mid the chilling blast,
‘Oh! a mother’s heart is warm.’”

Such were the men and women I would try to honor to-day. Let us take our children and grandchildren, as good old Elder Faunce used to do, and stand on Plymouth Rock, and recount to them the story of what we owe to those whose feet first trod it; “and make them swear to pay it, by transmitting down entire those sacred rights to which themselves were born.”

Picture to them the scene on that Monday morning after the Sabbath spent on Clark’s Island, when they came in their shallop to look over the new home so providentially found. All, all is strange and wild, as they anxiously search the shore. They coast along,—weapon in hand,—by hill and valley, every sense alive for an expected attack. A sandy cliff meets their eyes. At its foot a rock, washed by the water,—the very place to moor the great, clumsy boat; and they can spring to the shore dry-shod.

The company step upon the rock,—and the “Landing of the Forefathers,” now so reverently commemorated, is accomplished.

“Ay, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod ;
They have left unstained what there they found,
Freedom to worship God.”

The landing accomplished, now the living commences. Just at the beginning of winter, without a shelter, sick from previous exposure, what a sight is here ! One to awaken emotion in our breasts and draw tears from our eyes ! But they were truly in earnest, and such men and women do not sit down in despondency, but go ever forward in the path of duty, looking ever for guidance to take the next step right. They had foes without and within ; beside the savage, there was yet more savage treatment from the mother country, treachery, where they should have met the helping hand of friendship ; the death of the Governor and others of the band until scarcely enough were left, well, to bury the dead and level the spot to prevent their hostile neighbors from learning their weakened condition. And yet another blow to this stricken band—the death of the good pastor left to follow after in Leyden. Yet they faltered not, and when spring came, and the Mayflower (which had been a link to attach them to the old home) sailed away, not one faltered or turned back from their purpose, or expressed a wish to return. They truly had put their hand to the plough of freedom and progress, and looked not back.

“Their toil was not in vain, for, lo !
Their seed possessed the land !
Right royal were our ancestors,
That grand old Pilgrim band !”

P. F. WHITE.

Words written by Thomas White, to the music of “Will You Love Me When I’m Gone?” Casket No. 2, and sung by Charles Capron, Thomas White, Fidle E. White, and Maria Capron, at the first decoration of the soldiers' graves, May 29, 1869 :

Comrades, gather round the graves
Of those who've toiled with you,
They now rest in peaceful slumber,
All their toils and cares are o'er.
We have come with flowers to strew
O'er graves of those we love ;
Every year we'll come together.
Won't you, comrades dear ?

Father, mother, sister, brother,
Sad memory comes again
Of the dear ones that have perished
In the camp and on the plain,
Making drear our lonely homes ;
We miss them everywhere,
Yet in sadness and in sorrow
We have gathered here.

In our sorrows we have hopes
Of a bright and better day,
When the ransomed ones in glory
We shall meet in bright array,
There to join our lost and loved
On that celestial shore,
Where pain of parting and its anguish
Cease forevermore.

REMINISCENCES OF THE WHITE FAMILY.

By Samuel White.

In days of yore a vessel called the Mayflower
Started from old England upon a foreign tour.
The ship contained our pilgrim sires, who left their native land
To settle in New England ; (a noble Spartan band).
Among them was one Wm. White, of strong and sturdy frame,
Who took his wife Susannah, and to the new world came.
And when the voyage was ended, on Plymouth rock they stood ;

Between them and their native land, the rolling billows flowed.
 Well, just before they landed, in the harbour of Cape Cod,
 This William and Susannah, (they were worshippers of God);
 While sailing in the Mayflower, a little boy was seen ;
 'T was William's and Susannah's ; they called him Peregrine.
 The circumstances of his birth—being born in a strange land—
 Is why they called him Peregrine, the fittest name at hand.
 His father died the third of March, in sixteen twenty-one ;
 As to his age I cannot say ; his race on earth is run.
 His widow wed the twelfth of May, the same year that he died ;
 'T was Gov. Edward Winslow who took her for his bride ;
 They lived together happily, their interests were but one ;
 This marriage was the first one under New England sun.
 In sixteen hundred thirty-six they moved to Marshfield town,
 They took with them this Peregrine, a boy of high renown ;
 This Perry lived to manhood's age, his conscience ever free,
 He married Sarah Bassett who lived in Duxbury.
 They had a noble family, their children numbered six,
 There were Daniel and Sylvanus, who were always full of tricks ;
 And Jonathan and Peregrine, who lived in Marshfield town ;
 A Sarah and a Mary, two girls of high renown.
 To the church he was admitted, in sixteen ninety-eight,
 He was in his seventy-eighth year, (I think 't was rather late) ;
 There was a sermon preached to him on that momentous day,
 By Rev. Mr. Thompson, for so the records say ;
 His subject was from Matt. ; the twentieth chapter, where
 The sixth and seventh verses were pondered o'er with care,
 He died July the twentieth in seventeen hundred four,
 And his dear wife survived him almost one-half a score.
 He lived to quite a good old age, I think 't was eighty-three,
 He was buried down in Marshfield, he is from sorrow free ;
 And his were good sound principles, to God he bent the knee,
 He was a worthy citizen, a Christian woman she.
 Well, Daniel, son of Peregrine, in sixteen seventy-four,
 'T was Hannah Hunt he married, of Duxbury named before ;
 Seven sons were born to them, the third one was named Thomas.
 They had seven sons to scratch for, (the Lord have mercy on us) ;
 This Thomas, son of Daniel, was born in sixteen eighty,
 He was married to one Rachel—I have not now the data,
 He settled down in Scituate, but did not there abide,
 He left and went to Bolton, 't was Bolton where he died ;

He died in seventeen seventy, for so the record shows,
Five children and a widow survived him at life's close ;
There were William, James and Samuel, and Tom and Rachel, too,
Thus do his children number five, this is I think all true.
Well, William, James, and Thomas went to New Hampshire state,
They purchased farms in Marlborough, I have not now the date.
Tom married Molly French, and then to Dublin went.
And Rachel wed one Williams, who was for Cornish bent ;
While Samuel, son of Thomas, staid in Bolton on the farm,
He married Sarah Fosgate, for him she had a charm.
They reared a noble family, their children numbered eight,
They were true-blooded Yankees, none had a curly pate ;
They descended from old Peregrine, the first-born of the land,
His father was a pioneer in the old Pilgrim band.
I said their children numbered eight, I think I counted right,
The oldest one was Enoch, and then came Robert White ;
And Jonathan and David you understand were twins,
(Because of having two at once they did commit no sin) ;
A Beulah and a Rachel, two noble girls of yore,
And Benjamin and Sarah, they make the other four.
Well, Robert, son of Samuel, became somewhat insane,
He was a man of common sense, but something turned his brain,
He lived a melancholy life as any I have seen,
He died, 't was in the month of June in eighteen and fifteen ;
He never undertook to try the matrimonial state
Before he was somewhat deranged, and then it was too late.
Well, Jonathan went to New York state, he had a family,
I never knew how many, or what their names could be.
But David ne'er became a man, he died when quite a child,
And so he left this busy world, was not by sin defiled.
Well, Rachel wed one Sampson, I think they lived in Bow,
They raised some noble children, how many I don't know.
And Beulah wed Royce Colleston, they had but children three,
He felt at home out in New York, and quite contented she.
When Uncle Ben was married, he staid in town a while,
The pleasing stories of the West did soon his mind beguile ;
He settled out in Jefferson, 't was out in New York state,
They had three children born to them, I cannot tell the date ;
He spent his days upon the farm until came life's decline,
He lived to quite a good old age—he died in thirty-nine.
Well, Sarah went to Dublin, to live with Dr. Hill,
And when he went to Ohio, she went and lived there still ;

She always lived unmarried, of age she were n't afraid,
 But finally she died a sturdy, staunch old maid.
 Well, Enoch found one Hannah Hale in Stoddard or up that way,
 How long it was he courted her deponent does not say ;
 In eighteen hundred one they wed, for so the record shows,
 I suppose she went to work quite soon procuring baby's clothes ;
 In June they had a child born, a daughter weak and frail,
 And when they came to name her, they called her Lucy Hale ;
 The twenty-ninth of June, sir, in eighteen hundred two,
 This little girl was born to them—I think the date is true.
 As she grew up to womanhood, the boys took quite a shine,
 They would often come to visit her, and stay till after nine ;
 There was David and Elias, and Edward and some others,
 I suppose they wanted to, I guess they asked their mothers.
 When she arrived at sweet sixteen, or somewhere thereabouts,
 She married Charlie Colleston ; she loved him I've no doubt.
 They jogged along this busy world, as we will now relate,
 They had quite a family—their children numbered eight.
 The oldest one was Levi, he married Lucy Dunton,
 She was a splendid pretty girl, as nice as a pearl button,
 They had one little baby, a lovely little daughter ;
 But he went off and left her—I think he had n't ought to.
 He left his home long time ago, when he was rather young ;
 He has not late been heard from ; he has a silent tongue.
 Well, Hattie was the next one, she married Ellenwood ;
 He used to work at making chairs ; he made them very good.
 He went way down to Gardner, 't was there he made the chairs ;
 He would make a noble workman at building pulpit stairs.
 He concluded to go West, when the subject he had conn'd,
 And if he did n't like there, he thought he'd go beyond.
 He went out to Wisconsin to live upon the plains,
 And if he has not gone from there, I 'spose he there remains.
 Their family did not increase, as many often do ;
 They lived in perfect harmony, were to each other true.
 The next was Lucy Ann, sir, a lovely little daughter ;
 When she was young, how to behave, she knew just how she ought to.
 She married S. S. Mason ; I do n't think he loved the ardent—
 I suppose she'd rather marry him than Kendall or Bill Sargent.
 They had a lot of babies, a baker's dozen or so—
 I undertook to number them, but I could n't make it go.
 His business was to pile up bricks, with mortar in between ;

And when she made a mutton soup, she wanted fat with lean.
 Laura was the next one, she married Elmer Starkey,
 I'll tell you what I know of them, so now just mind and hark ye :
 He went to war, was wounded, and now has a pension ;
 He works upon the new railroad, or that is his intention.
 He lives 'way up in Hampshire state, the town of Peterborough,
 He don't loaf round from morn till night, or lie down in the furrow.
 They have two splendid lovely girls, an honor to their race,
 May modesty their lives adorn, with virtue, truth, and grace.
 And now there's George and Charlie, a pair of twins, you know ;
 George lives 'way out in * Pottersham, I think they call it so.
 He married a young lady, with talents rich and rare ;
 They settled down in Harrisville, with prospects bright and fair.
 They've lived together several years in happiness quite loving ;
 Her business is to do housework, and his the plow to shove in.
 They have two rugged, hearty boys, one older than the other,
 The oldest one is oldest, and looks just like his mother.
 One is a man, almost a man—and now let's see 'bout t'other—
 He'll be a man, I'm sure he will, long time before his mother.
 Charlie is the twin to George, both born of the same mother ;
 'Though being twins and brothers they resemble not each other.
 Well, Charlie married Mary Blood, 'way down in Ashburnham ;
 She was a nice young lady, as gentle as a lamb.
 He took his bride to Marlborough ; he was himself the groom ;
 They lived in peace and harmony ; were both in youthful bloom.
 They were a splendid couple ; they lived together well ;
 They were not proud or haughty ; they did in union dwell.
 He enlisted in his country's cause, a soldier good and true ;
 While at the battle of Bull Run, a bullet pierced him through.
 They had one little daughter, she grew in size quite big ;
 She makes a splendid partner for dancing a nice jig.
 Her size and height were very good, her weight I judge two hundred,
 Or somewhere thereabouts—perhaps I may have blundered.
 She has a very pretty name, I think they call it Stella ;
 She went 'way down to Boston town, and there she got a fellow ;
 But whether he will stick or hang, this much we can n't deny ;
 Perhaps he will, perhaps he won't, you cannot tell nor I.
 Another one was Cynthia A., she was lovely, pleasant, mild ;
 Her days were few while here on earth, she died when quite a child.
 Edwin was the youngest one, he lived to manhood's age ;

* In Pottersville, N. H.

He went to fight the rebel foe, and died upon the stage.
 He left no wife nor little ones to mourn his early bier,
 His mother, brothers, sisters, friends, for him will drop a tear.
 The next of Enoch's children was a boy of small renown ;*
 He was born up in New Hampshire state, 't was up in Marlborough town ;

When he was quite a litle chap they put on him a gown ;
 They named him for his grandsire, who died in Bolton town.
 When in his youth he went to school, he learned to read and spell ;
 He kept his books all neat and clean, he learned his lessons well.
 And when to manhood he arrived he worked upon the farm ;
 The idle sports of loafing round, for him they had no charm.
 He liked a good time now and then, he loved the merry dance,
 He loved to wait upon the girls when e'er he had a chance.
 He loved the military drill, was always at his post ;
 His dearest pet commander was Col. Cyrus Frost.
 He used to spark the girls some ; he never married till
 He found a nice young lady who resided on " Trap hill,"
 She was born 'way down in Walpole, on Massachusetts bay ;
 And when she lived up on " Trap hill " she sometimes loaded hay.
 She was young and handsome ; she liked to sing and dance,
 The boys would cast an eye at her, a kind o' sideways glance.
 He took her home with him, on the old farm to live,
 And when she made a batch of bread she used a wire sieve.
 Her work was done all neat and clean, she was no wretched sloven,

And when her bread was raised enough she used the old brick oven.
 She learned to be a noble cook, could make good pumpkin pie,
 She had one good trait about her, she never told a lie.
 They were married in the month of May, in eighteen thirty-three ;
 They lived upon the same old farm till forty-nine, you see.
 They did n't seem to multiply, as people used to do,
 Their family was just themselves, and children only two.
 Charlie H. and Daniel A., they were not nat'ral fools ;
 Charles worked at the machinist's trade,—Dan used the printer's tools.

When Dan grew up to man's estate he did n't like the trade ;
 The grocery business then he tried, he thought it better paid.
 Charles found his wife in Newburyport, her name was Lizzie Wheeler ;

I 'spose 't was all good honest work, he says he did n't steal her.

*Author of these Reminiscences.

They have one little baby, he was born in seventy-five,
 He is a little witchcraft as e'er was born alive.
 He'll be another fiddler, just as his father was,
 The music is all in him, must come out by nature's laws.
 He is a smart young fellow ; when he becomes a man
 I hope he'll be a steady one, I know full well he can.
 Charles enlisted in the army, in a regimental band ;
 He is a good musician, playing anything at hand.
 Altho' his voice is very good, I never heard him sing ;
 His music is all natural, he was born a fiddling.
 He would play upon the fiddle when quite a little fellow,
 He would also play the big one, I think they call that 'cello ;
 He also plays the tuba when he travels with a drove,
 But he never undertook to blow a cooking stove.
 Dan enlisted in the army, was also in the band,
 The rebs disliked his music, so the cusses left the land.
 Dan married Nellie Hastings, she was Capt. H's daughter ;
 She knew just how to do housework, because her mother taught her.

They have a little family, their children number five ;
 They are very good musicians, in music's art they thrive.
 Dan plays the noisy cornet, and leads them as a band,
 He also plays the fiddle, has both at his command ;
 And when he plays for dancing he does the prompting, too,
 He is called a first-rate prompter because he is so true.
 I said their children numbered five, I think I am correct,
 Christie is the oldest one, if right I recollect ;
 He plays the fiddle and cornet, he plays them very well,
 But he is now attending school at Boston for a spell ;
 But what he now intends to make, I do not understand,
 Perhaps he may turn out to be a shark upon the land ;
 What e'er position he may take, this much I recommend,
 To fill the station faithfully, with honor to the end.
 The next of Daniel's children is Lelia bright and fair,
 She has a blushrose countenance, tho' not a curly hair ;
 She's a modest little creature as any one I know,
 And when she gets just big enough I 'spect she'll have a beau.
 She also plays the fiddle, makes music on the horn,
 She is modest, unassuming, which does herself adorn ;
 She's mighty neat, she's good to work, she'll make a lovely spouse ;
 But when I said she played the horn, I did n't mean a cow's,
 Nor did I mean a horn of rum, as some might understand,

I only meant a French horn, she has one near at hand.
And now comes Charlie L., the third one in the crowd,
He is about thirteen years old, with common sense endowed ;
He is a nice young fellow, and there is no denial,
He can play upon the tuba, also the bass viol ;
He's good to work upon the farm, his work is all done well ;
In winter time he goes to school, to learn to read and spell ;
He lives just now in Berlin town, with Mrs. Grandma Hastings,
And when she cooks a turkey-hen, I 'spect he does the basting.
The fourth of Daniel's children is the one we all call Daisy,
She's as nimble as a chipmunk, you cannot call her lazy ;
Her real name is Hattie C., her cheeks resemble roses,
And so we took up for a name a little bunch of posies ;
She is a lovely little thing, the prettiest ever born,
Altho' she is but eight years old she plays quite well the horn ;
She is a splendid singer, in singing she don't fail,
In music she's a splendid match for the old nightingale ;
She'll make a splendid woman, as I have said before,
When over her devoted head have rolled a few years more ;
She'll make a choice companion, with her none need have trouble,
The sorrows of this life divide, the joys she'll ever double.
The fifth of Daniel's children, and this one is the last,
He is only six years old in this last summer past ;
And being a descendant of Peregrine of yore,
They named him for that ancestor, whose age was full fourscore ;
He was born the twentieth of July, the date I name with pride,
For 't was the twentieth of July that senior Perry died ;
And so they named him Peregrine, as I have said before,
Being seventh in generation from Peregrine of yore.
The third of Enoch's children was Hannah White by name,
She married Willard Converse of Grandpa Converse fame ;
He was formerly a preacher, of the good old Baptist sect,
But he relinquished that idea, he thought 't was incorrect ;
He then turned his attention to pegging brogan shoes,
But those are not the kind which the Yankees mostly use.
And after trying various schemes he took the iron trade,
To the mending of such implements as other hands had made.
He soon desired another change, and so he went to farming,
And so he went to Wisconsin, and that he thought was charming.
But Hannah died in Wisconsin, in eighteen fifty-two,
And Willard went to Iowa ; his race will soon be through.
They had four children born to them, the youngest was a boy,

I cannot tell you where they are or what they all enjoy,
 Except the one called Sammy, who to Iowa went,
 And settled with his father, who was to westward bent.
 They purchased there a little farm, about one thousand acres,
 They raise some noble crops o' wheat, which helps supply the bakers.

Well, Sammy married him a wife, 't was one he picked up there,
 I cannot tell you now her name, nor neither do I care.
 They have some pretty children, the number I know not,
 They are a noble family, their names I have forgot ;
 They cultivate their little farm, raise corn, and rye, and wheat,
 Which helps supply the great demand for something nice to eat.
 And now I've told you all I can, I cannot tell you more,
 Except they 'll end their days there, if they don't die before.
 Well, Enoch had another son, born of his second wife,
 His name was Ambrose Capron, he had not a long life.
 He went out on a whaling voyage, his age about eighteen,
 He was absent just about three years, then home again was seen ;
 He took Maria Foskett, his own half-sister's daughter,
 He married her as I am told, (perhaps he had n't ought to),
 They have some little children, I do not know their number ;
 He died, I think, in Hudson, this is his place of slumber.
 His wife, I'm told, then wed again, and went out to the West,
 But what has now become of them, the Lord, I think, knows best.
 And now as I've already passed my fourscore years and ten,
 I'll take a retrospective view of scenes which transpired then :
 Our happy days in childhood's ways, the merry laugh that rings
 O'er hill and dale, bring back the scenes to which fond memory clings.

When with our lovely sisters dear, around the cottage hearth,
 We spent our youthful happy days, the happiest days on earth,
 Or played around the cottage door, or in yon willows' shade,
 Or sported with the flocks and herds, our tiny hands had made,
 Or wandered o'er the verdant lawn, to gather flowers of spring,
 Or in the cooling woodlands shade, to hear the warblers sing,
 Or with our youth's companions dear, we played beside the rill—
 Tho' more than fourscore years have passed that same brook runs there still.

We roamed along the pasture green, or o'er the field we strayed
 To gather up the berries red that 'neath the green leaves laid,
 And when our vessels were all full, toward home we bent our way,
 To share with those who were at home the bounties of the day.

And when we came to riper age we took the slate and rule
 And with our youthful playmates dear attend the village school,
 To work our problems on the slate, to learn to read and spell,
 To practise on the writing desk, to learn our grammar well,
 To find the nouns and adjectives, the verbs and tenses all,
 And have them ready in our minds just at the teacher's call.
 But time flies on resistless wings, and ere we are aware
 Our fathers have declined in life and left to us the care.
 Soon we shall leave life's busy stage to others yet unborn,
 And while they fill our places here, let truth their lives adorn.
 And while we meditate the past, a thousand scenes it brings
 Unto the mind, of youthful days to which fond memory clings.
 No more shall we those scenes behold, no more this form be pressed

Within a mother's fond embrace, or on her loving breast ;
 No more on the maternal hearth, or round the cottage door,
 Shall these once youthful limbs of mine play as in days of yore,
 No more with youthful playmates dear, sport by the pearly rill—
 A thousand years may come and go, that stream will run there still.
 No more shall these frail limbs of mine roam o'er the meadows gay,
 No more these tiny youthful hands pluck flowers that bloom in May,

No more these childish feet of mine trip o'er the flowery lawn,
 To chase the birds and butterflies, who wake at early dawn ;
 No more this once young youthful head shall wend its way to school,

To treasure up the lessons there that once were learned by rule ;
 No more that mother's smiling face or gentle voice of yore,
 Will e'er again on earth be heard till time shall be no more ;
 Full seventy years have come and gone, the time I know full well,
 She left the fleeting scenes of time no more on earth to dwell.
 Her only son has now survived his fourscore years and ten,
 Soon he'll be called to leave earth's joys, the social haunts of men,
 To leave the pleasant scenes of youth, and scenes of riper years,
 And close his eyes on earthly things with naught of grief or fears.
 Clinton, Mass., January, 1894.

WHITE FAMILY GATHERING.

A gathering of the descendants of the oldest family in New England met at the house of Thomas White in Marlborough, January 2, 1893, in honor of his seventy-fifth birthday and the thirteenth anniversary of his second marriage; and to take measure to make, up to date, a record of the descendants of William White of the Mayflower. William White was the sixth signer of the compact drawn up on the lid of Elder Brewster's chest. He died March 14, 1621. His widow married Governor Winslow, who adopted and educated her two sons, Resolved and Peregrine. Peregrine was born on board the Mayflower.

“T was bleak and cold on old Cape Cod,
 'Mid the fierce November gale,
 While there the little Mayflower roamed
 With a lingering stranger's sail;
 And close a fair young creature clasped
 Her helpless infant's form,
 And cheerily sang 'mid the chilling blast,
 Oh! a mother's heart is warm.”

Peregrine died in Marshfield, Mass., in 1704, aged 84 years. His son Daniel also died in Marshfield. His son Thomas died in Bolton, Mass., in 1770, aged 92 years. His son William died in Marlborough, N. H., in 1820, at the age of 84 years. His son Thomas also died in Marlborough. He was 83 years of age at the time of his death, and his son, Thomas White, Jr., is the writer of these lines. The love of ancestry seemed to animate all present at the gathering. The virtues of our heroic fathers were such as to call forth our greatest admiration for the noble heritage left us by them.

“Their toils were not in vain,
 Lo! their seed possessed the land,
 Right royal were our ancestors,

Speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Buzzell of Marlborough, Mr. Peregrine F. White of Worcester, Mass., and Mr. Thomas H. White of Harrisville, N. H., eulogizing the part taken by the Whites in the first compact framed on board the Mayflower, and in establishing and laying the foundations of our republic. Some forty or more were present. The ages of seven of them were as follows,—90, 85, 82, 78, 75, 70, and 60 years. The following letter was received from a cousin, Mrs. Sarah E. (White) Bosworth of Pembroke, Mass., which was read and listened to with great interest :

PEMBROKE, December 15, 1892.

Dear Cousin Thomas—Greetings :

If I cannot be with you in person, I can be with you in spirit of good-will, love, kind wishes, and congratulation to you and yours, that you yet walk among them, an honored, revered, and beloved father.

Threescore and ten and five years has been a long, weary journey, where most of the "mile-stones" you have passed are changed into "headstones" of the dear friends of "long ago"; and the road now must seem strange and shadowy, with few faces, and keeping tryst by the stiles of the past, but yet ever brightened and gladdened all the way by many an oasis, none brighter, greener, or more cheering than this of to-day, when children, grand-children, and great grandchildren gather to honor the patriarch of the home and hearthstone.

May they have many returns of this happy privilege.

You do not need to turn back the "wheels of time" to see that journey to-day.

The good father and mother, the farmhouse with its rosy, noisy boys and girls, level fields of waving grain, and orchards bending with fruit, the woods that held the choice wild flowers, sparkling brook, robin and whip-poor-will; and oh! the tender, crowding memories you cannot speak, but bow your head and thank the All Father for His good gifts to you all the way, and that to-day you can rise up before your children and children's children and call your parents blessed, that they may see that those prayers, tears, and labors were not in vain, declaring that never since the world began was child more honored with noble ancestry, and entreat them to be an honor to worthy sires.

And now your autumn time has come, yet that does not mean sad time, but rather happy time, for you have earned the golden wage, that this dear old world is better by your having lived in it, by your least duties well done.

I do not know the warp and woof of your life, only as I know all human lives.

Job like you've gone through great afflictions.

The loved wife of your youth, and your sons have been taken, fire has consumed your buildings, sickness and pain has racked and worn your mortal body, yet you have stood blameless, steadfastly leaning upon the arm of the Eternal Helper, saying,— “Though He slay me yet will I trust Him. He is my salvation.”

The good wife who is by your side to-day can answer with you when you are asked :

“Is life worth living? Go ask a pair
 Whose heads are crowned with silver hair,
 Who hand in hand down the stream of life
 Have gone together through joy and strife;
 Who lived not for self, but others to bless;
 Go ask it of them, and they'll answer
 ‘Yes.’”

And the sister whose chair is yet by yours, answers from a full heart, “Amen!”

You have proved that when you began your journey you did not take “the path that leads over the lazy hills by the dreamy brooks of sleep,” but the “path that led to a loaf of bread and suit of clothes,” though it wound through the “swamp of toil;” and the path that “led to a house of your own,” though it climbed over rocky hill.

“These paths are hard in the summer heat
 But in winter they lead to a snug retreat.”

You have borne many sweet titles in your life,—son, brother, husband, father, grandfather, and great-grandfather.

May the mystic weaver of memories weave the silver thread from associations of each loved title into a gleaming and golden strand, that when your work is done here, and the web of your life's weaving is turned, you will receive that last grandest title from the Master, “Faithful one, well done,” and with God's help hail joyfully

“Twilight and evening star,
 And one clear call for me,
 And may there be no moaning of the bar

When I put out to sea ;
 But such a tide, as moving seems asleep—
 Too full for sound or foam
 When that which drew from out the boundless deep
 Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
 And after that the dark,
 And may there be no sadness of farewell
 When I embark ;
 For though from out this bourn of Time and Place
 The flood may bear me far,
 I hope to see my Pilot face to face
 When I have crossed the bar."

Yours with much love, and wishes for happy returns of this day.

SARAH E. WHITE-BOSWORTH.

TO THE GRAND MONADNOCK.

By Samuel White.

Proud Monarch of nature ! thou rough, ragged hill,
 Whose grandeur sublime thro' the heart sends a thrill,
 Thy storm-beaten sides which through centuries have stood,
 Thy summit so cloudless, thy breezes so good.
 Proud monarch of nature ! thee I hail with delight,
 Since from my youth's cot thou wert ever in sight,
 While night's cloudless orb with her bright silver ray,
 O'er thy summit would peep at the close of the day ;
 And ere she assumes her meridian height,
 She reflects on thy sides her sun-borrowed light,
 And when she reclines to her home in the west,
 She leaves thee in darkness when sinking to rest.
 But thou art not long in the shades of the night,
 For on a cold morning in December bright,
 Sol follows Luna o'er thy summit so gay,
 And travels her path on a cold winter day,
 And so in succession one follows the other,
 And Luna retraces the steps of her brother ;

They have moved in their orbs since Creation began,
 Or e'er there was any such creature as man.
 Monadnock ! Monadnock ! fain would I once more
 Revisit thy top while on life's fleeting shore,
 As oft in the past with my playmates so dear,
 As we roamed o'er thy rough sides with hearty good cheer,
 And when on thy top viewed the landscape around.
 With lakes and with church spires and villages crowned ;
 While viewing these scenes every guest would proclaim,
 In rapturous delight thy wonderful fame.
 And when we had rambled o'er pebble and glen,
 We wandered and found what was called the "bear's den,"
 But Bruin was absent, and ne'er could we find
 A trace of his honor or aught of his kind.
 In years long gone by, a hundred or more,
 Our forefathers rambled thee over and o'er
 In search of such game as the wolf and the bear
 Who prowled in the thickets, whose home was found there.
 Proud monarch of nature ! the red men of yore
 Roamed free o'er thy sides, years five hundred or more,
 Before the pale faces thy rough sides e'er viewed,
 Or ever a pathway to thy summit pursued.
 But now thou art naked, thy forests are gone,
 No home for the wild man, no home for the fawn,
 The wild deer and wolf seek some wilderness cave,
 The red man is driven from his forefather's grave ;
 The fir tree that waved o'er thy rough sides so gay,
 The pines and the hemlocks have fled in a day,
 Thy fine blooming shrubbery, which all would admire,
 Was swept from thy sides by the ragings of fire ;
 And now thou art stripped of thy foliage so green,
 And nought but thy rough, ragged rocks to be seen ;
 We would love a retreat 'neath thy wind-beaten shore,
 To regale in thy breezes as in days of yore ;
 But time flies apace, nor for mortals will stay,
 Waits not for the proud, the humble, or gay ;
 Tho' threescore and ten years have whitened these locks,
 Fain would I revisit thy wind-beaten rocks.
 I may never more view thee nor climb thy rough side,
 While I with frail mortals on earth may abide.
 Soon I shall retire with old friends good and true,
 Proud monarch of nature, I bid thee adieu.

Now I must digress and a story relate,
 'Tis of an old preacher* of Puritan date,
 A preacher he was of the Puritan kind,
 He was dyed in the wool, few such we now find,
 A goodly old servant of famous renown,
 Who held forth on Sundays in old Dublin town ;
 Well, one Sabbath morning he took for his theme
 The moving of mountains, (it was not all a dream),
 He told them with faith they 'd accomplish the act,
 But now just consider, was that thing a fact ?
 While from his desk window he saw at a glance,
 A huge pile of rough rocks, (he had a good chance),
 For his eye fell at once on the vast hill behind ;
 When he saw the big hill many doubts filled his mind.
 The mountain he saw was both ragged and rough,
 'Twas high and 't was broad, that he thought was enough,
 He turned back to his hearers, with a twinkle in his eye,
 " 'Tis a very big hill, you can try. you can try." †
 Perhaps you would like to hear some one relate
 How this mountain came here, (it was not by fate),
 When I was a youngster I have heard people tell
 How it came to be here, I suppose they knew well.
 A fellow that walks up and down in the earth,
 Seeing when he may catch one, (I know not his birth),
 He owned all the country as sure as you are born,
 From near the North pole down as far as Cape Horn.
 Well, he thought he'd go farming, raise 'taters and corn,
 And fill up the pond that lies close to the horn,
 And make him a meadow and raise lots of hay,
 For his pastures would summer more stock than his bay ;
 But he had no oxen just then at command,
 So he thought he would do all his work up by hand ;
 He got him an apron, when that he had donned,
 He filled it with stones to fill up the pond ;
 He came from the north somewhere near the north pole,
 With his huge pile of rocks to fill the mud hole.
 When he arrived here his apron string broke,
 And spilt the whole contents, it made him provoked,
 For it knocked off his toenails and battered his shins,

*Rev. Edward Sprague, former minister of Dublin, N. H.

† A fact which might have been attested to by many of the early settlers of that town.

And made him commit some heinous sins.
 He now gave up farming, the pond is there still,
 It remains as he left it for others to fill.
 Do you ask what became of this old English guest ?
 He sold out his farm and away he went west,
 And here lies the apron full just as it fell,
 How long it has lain here no one can tell ;
 It will probably stay quite a number of days,
 Till a railroad is wanted just right where it lays.

CENTENNIAL SONG.

Written for the Centennial Celebration at Marlborough, N. H., by Samuel White, a native. Air—"Uncle Sam has Land Enough to Give Us All a Farm."

One hundred years ago to-day, when this old hat was new,
 The men folks dressed in plain sheep's grey, their hair tied in a queue,

The women folks could spin and weave and in the garden hoe,
 They were a blessing, I believe, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when implements were few,
 The men and boys would plow and sow, and plant potatoes, too ;
 The women folk would bake the bread, and make bean porridge, too,

They did perform a noble part one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when this old scythe was new,
 The men would mow and make the hay, all fragrant with the dew ;
 The women folks would ply the rake, 't would do them good, you know,

To exercise and stir their blood, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when wild the forests grew,
 The men would fell the sturdy trees of all kinds not a few !
 The women folks would pull the flax and dig potatoes, too ;
 They were n't afraid to soil their hands, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when grain luxuriant grew,
 The men and boys hauled in the corn all bright and shining, too ;
 At eve the girls stripped off the husks, they saved the red ears tho' ;
 For every one they had a kiss, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when farms no fences knew,
 The men would yoke the oxen up and lay the wall so true ;
 The women folks performed their part, no gossip did they know ;
 The girls would feed the pigs and chicks, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when people ne'er got blue,
 The men would work from morn till noon, from then till evening
 dew ;

From early dawn till evening shade the wife was on the go,
 The girls would milk the brindle cow, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when morning naps were few,
 The men would rise at early dawn their premises to view ;
 The women then were up and dressed before the cock'rels crow,
 They didn't snooze till ten o'clock, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when bleak the March winds blew,
 The men would break and swingle flax, and sing, and whistle, too ;
 The women folks would comb the flax, and card in rolls the tow,
 Their music was the spinning wheel, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when fires burnt bright and new,
 The men would chop and sled the wood, and cleave the logs in two ;
 The women patched the children's clothes and sang a song or two,
 They didn't play pianofortes, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when this old coat was new,
 The men folks wore their striped frocks, their pants were often blue ;

The women wore some tidy dress, 't was made of calico,
 They didn't wear a polonaise, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago when boys to manhood grew,
 They donned their best, and at the girls they cast a "sheep's-eye view."

The girls then wore some striped dress the warp of which was tow,
 They didn't wear "tuck up behind," one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day when girls wore tow skirts, whew ?
 Men's wedding suits were pure home-made, and trimmed with buttons few ;

When women had a choice new dress, 't would have a flounce or so,
 It didn't take quite fifty yards, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when fashions were but few,
 The women wore plain bonnets then, they'd have a plait or two ;
 The men wore very decent hats, but nothing nice you know ;
 Their calf-skin boots grew on a cow, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when barber shops were few,
 Men never had their hair cut short, 'twas all tied in a queue ;
 The women's hair lay straight and smooth, they wore a comb or two,

The * rats were in the cellar then, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, men did no ruffles show,
 They wore plain bosoms in their shirts, no paper dickeys, no,
 A woman's dress was straight behind and minus was the tow,
 They didn't wear a camel's hump, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when folks were sparse and few,
 The people then made friendly calls, they were a social crew ;
 The women then made little clothes, and nursed the babies ; oh !
 They weren't ashamed to multiply, one hundred years ago.

One hundred years ago to-day, when men were good and true,
 The people were all neighbors then, and each one had his due,
 If anyone required a boost, no one would answer no,
 And women were a blessing then,—one hundred years ago.

LINES SUGGESTED BY THE APPROACH OF MY NINE-TIETH YEAR.

By Samuel White.

How swift the fleeting scenes of time on eagles' pinions fly,
 How soon these ninety years of mine have passed unheeded by.
 The pleasing scenes, childhood, and joyous youth were mine,
 Now ninety years have come and gone and leave but life's decline.
 'Tis ninety years since first these lungs inhaled the vital air, Since first these aged eyes of mine the sun's bright rays could share,
 Since first these tiny limbs of mine were by a mother pressed,
 And in a mother's fond embrace were lain upon her breast.

*A something worn by the ladies as an ornament.

But childhood's years' with youth have gone, while manhood once was mine.

Now ninety years have swiftly sped, we bow to age's shrine ;
The pleasing scenes of early years now youth has passed away,
While manhood's busy cares in life, renewed were, day by day,
When the strong arm of manhood's prime life's burden freely bore,
While childish joys, which once were mine, I call them mine no more.

For childish days and youth's fond plays give place to riper years,
Then in a retrospective view will fall the unbidden tears.
Those youthful playmates, dear and true, I never can forget ;
The pleasing scenes of joyful youth are in my memory yet ;
The hills and dales where once I roamed, I fondly visit now,
Which oft' reminds me of the past, while to old age I bow.
Our ancestors have traveled o'er this thorny road before,
And landed safely upon the banks of Canaan's happy shore.
As time rolls on, and down life's rapid stream we glide,
A few more fleeting days or months will waft us o'er the tide.
When time is counted not by months, nor yet by fleeting years,
Then may we leave the scenes of earth with naught of grief or fears.

Gratitude and praise to God for intellect and ability to compose such lines as the above at ninety years, so close to peace and the home of the soul.

PEMBROKE, N. H., December 23, 1893.

TO SAMUEL WHITE :

My dear nonagenarian Uncle : Ninety years, my dear friend, is a long time, but as you review it to-day, it will present itself in two distinct ways : One, that it has been short, it has sped quicker than "a weaver's shuttle," the other, how long, how varied, how vague, almost like a story you've read, certainly not what you have been an actual actor in. This day you are looking through the kaleidoscope of your life, and many dear forms and scenes, bright and sombre, pass in swift review before your misty eyes, all along the way from the long ago. The long ago when mother was there in that dear childhood's home, with the dear father and sisters, whose memory begins with life and lingers with us clear and sweet till that life shall pass away.

Involuntarily you cry out: "There are no days like the old days, no love like the good old love that mother gave us in the dear old home," and your heart gives the quick throb of boyhood as you sob out:

Backward, turn backward,
 Oh, time in your flight,
 Make me a boy again
 Just for to-night.

But another turn, and you know that sweeter loves come into your maturer life. And you with the young wife commenced another home, and thanked God that in his wisdom he "setteth the solitary in families." You know that your home was a garden of Eden, with the old, old, ever new story of love, marriage, and birth. And you have that great comfort left you that you proved faithful to her you promised to love and cherish; and in her long, wearying illness you were all the world to her. No care was like your care, no hand so tender, no footstep so light as yours, and yours the last face she wished to see here, and hers will be the first to meet and welcome you there. That face glorified that you loved, when you and all the world were young. One of the many things you know but cannot explain in words, that your love and care for the dear wife and children, it was love (akin to divine love) that lightened labor, made all things bright and hopeful.

As Jacob served for Rachel, it seemed but as one day. You were always cheered by that inner consciousness ever whispering "Be patient, be strong, and faithful" to those that endure to the end. The cross we bore here shall be for us there, the crown of exceeding great joy and happiness.

Thank God for friends your life has known,
 For every dear, departed day,
 The blessed past is safe alone,
 God gives, but does not take away;
 He only safely keeps above
 For us the treasures that we love.

Your life has extended over an interesting period of your country's history. You commenced to be when she was young, hardly out of swaddling clothes, certainly had not recovered from the throes of her great and momentous birth.

Two years after Thomas Jefferson, third president, had taken the oath of office, a little boy was born in New Hampshire to Enoch and Hannah White, whom they name Samuel, and dedicated to the good Father, and "Whose life has been long in the land the Lord thy God giveth thee." Your birthday was a day connected with that ever memorable Mayflower, and the heroic men and women who crossed the stormy, perilous ocean in that frail ship to found homes here in a new, strange land, looking only to God for guidance and support. And no other support could have delivered them from their many perils and guided them into safe places. Oh! what a winter that was. On Saturday, December 23, 1620, as many as could went on shore, and commenced cutting and carrying timber for a common house. Their need was great, but they kept the Sabbath holy with praise and prayer.

Amidst the storm they sang,
And the stars heard and the sea ;
And the sounding aisles of the dim woods rang
To the anthem of the free.

And on Monday, the 25th, they commenced building the first house. It was twenty feet square, designed for common use. On the 28th they divided themselves into nineteen families, measured out and assigned each man his lot. There was rain and wind and severe cold weather, in consequence of which many were taken ill. It continued cold. The people were sick from exposure; and on Lord's day, January 14, about six o'clock in the morning, their common house took fire from a spark which fell upon the thatched roof, and was entirely consumed. Troubles followed, and they laid eight of their company, this month, to rest in a new land. Those Pilgrim fathers and mothers knew it was cold and cheerless. And we receive with almost thankless hearts many comforts denied to them, that they so richly deserved, and secured for us. Yet they did "bear their wants with cheerfulness, and rest on Providence." Let no descendant of the Pilgrims doubt the efficacy of diligence, fortitude, perseverance, and prayer. The next month, February, our father, William White, died, and left in the new, strange land the widowed mother with her two boys. Then she knew in all its bitterness, that came over her like a flood, that

'T was wintry cold on Plymouth beach,
 Where the log-reared cabins rose
 'Mid frowning rocks and howling storms
 And the shaft of Indian foes,
 'Mid dearth of bread and thickening graves,
 Yet hark to the tuneful song
 That soothed the wail of the lonely babe,
 Oh ! a mother's heart is strong.

And a mother's heart is strong, warm, and true, as you and I know up to this time. God's love is over all to bless and guide; and His arm is not shortened, shall we trust Him less than our fathers did? We have much, very much to thank God for, we can thank him devoutly that we are that "posterity" that our fathers were willing, aye so glad, to be "only stepping-stones to."

And now, my dear uncle, I give you greeting on this your natal day, and may you be spared to walk with us here for many another year. As you sit by the raked-up ashes of your hearth of ninety years, you can, amid the ashes, find many a bright, glowing coal to light and warm all the way to that Beautiful Gate you are approaching, which will open upon eternal day. I thank God that you have come into my life. Contemporary with my father, your birthday follows in succession to my mother's, blest associations. I shall always remember you with much love and gratitude. And now may God bless you and yours.

Truly thy friend,

SARAH E. WHITE-BOSWORTH.

WHY WISH TO LIVE ALWAYS ?

By Samuel White.

Why wish to live always ? Why fear to depart ?
 Why fear the dread summons that pierces the heart ?
 Why wish we to linger in this lone vale of tears,
 While loved ones of earth bask in heaven's bright spheres ?

The friends of our childhood, oh, where are they now ?
 The laws of our nature have forced them to bow.
 'Then why should we mortals so cling to this life
 Of toil and contention, of trouble and strife ?

The loved and the lost ones we oft shall deplore,
 They have passed from earth's scenes, we shall see them no more.
 'Tis the will of our God earthly ties all are riven,
 Dear friends and companions, we'll meet you in heaven.

Then why should we mortals so cling to this life,
 Since some loving friend, since husband or wife
 Have left all earth's troubles for mansions above,
 To bathe in the ocean of redeeming love ?

Then content let us be, while the days swiftly glide,
 Which are wafting us gently o'er life's ebbing tide ;
 'Till the last breath is drawn and the last sigh shall end,
 And those eyes closed in death by the hand of a friend.

And this mortal frame shall lie low in the grave,
 While green be the foliage which over us shall wave,
 And the wide spreading willow which stands at our head
 Shall wave so majestically over the dead.

When friends and companions look mournfully on,
 They drop a lone tear for the friend that has gone,
 And place on our headstone, that each passerby
 May read this short epitaph : " Resting on high."

Then why should vain mortals wish always to stay ?
 Why fear the dread summons, which all must obey ?
 Why wish we to linger in this lone vale of tears
 While loved ones of earth bask in heaven's bright spheres ?

GROWING OLD.

By Samuel White.

Time was when I was young and gay
 And passed life's cheerful hours away,
 And in youth's pleasures rolled ;
 Those years have passed unheeded by
 And retrospect brings forth a sigh,
 I'm growing, growing old.

When in my parent's humble cot,
 With youthful friends not yet forgot,
 As o'er the green we strolled ;
 Our childish sports, our youthful glee,
 Remembered long will be by me,
 Altho' I'm growing old.

But youth and childhood soon are gone,
 And when too late I sigh and mourn,
 For misspent hours untold ;
 Too soon with folly friends did make,
 Too late I learned the dire mistake,
 For now I'm growing old.

And when to riper years I came,
 I panted not for wealth or fame,
 Nor yet for paltry gold ;
 I thought upon life's changing scene,
 Reflection is not all a dream,
 I'm surely growing old.

My head with whitened locks is crowned,
 And wrinkles in my face abound,
 Yet not from piercing cold ;
 My step is feeble, weak, and slow,
 And thus I ponder as I go,
 "I'm growing, growing old."

My years count up the allotted age,
 I've seen it stamped upon the page,
 The fiat has been told ;
 I could not change it if I would,
 Nor would I change it if I could,
 Through fear of growing old.

And now my days are almost o'er,
 To me this world will be no more,
 I'm gathering to the fold ;
 Time tells me I've not long to stay,
 And Death seems speeding on his way,
 Because I'm growing old.

When all life' ebbing sands have run,
 And when eternity's begun,
 And all my years are told ;
 When low I lie within the grave,
 When the green grass shall o'er me wave,
 I'll cease from growing old.

FAMILY GATHERING.

Twenty-eight out of thirty-four of the family of Thomas White met at his residence in Marlborough, N. H. Eight children, all married, three of the sixteen, absent ; seventeen grandchildren, all but three present ; one great-grandchild absent.

Being seventy years of age January 2, 1888, the son of Thomas White, who died in Marlborough, aged eighty-three, who was the son of William White, who died in Marlborough, aged eighty-four, who was the son of Thomas White, who died in Bolton, Mass., aged ninety-two, who was the son of Daniel White, who died in Bridgewater, Mass., aged seventy-four, who was the son of Peregrine White, who died in Marshfield, Mass., aged eighty-four, who was the son of William White, who came over in the Mayflower in 1620, and died at Plymouth, Mass., March 4, 1621.

This meeting was pleasantly passed in feasting, speaking, singing, and the delivering of a poem by Mrs. N. C. Alger, as follows : —

Fierce and wild were the winds, and the waves how they roared,
 As they beat on our stern, rock-bound shore ;
 Not delightful, I ween, was this new country scene,
 To those eyes which ne'er saw it before.

But our fathers came not to hunt up beds of down,
 They had fled from Oppression's strong hand ;
 They were not seeking ease, but their Savior to please,
 When they came to this far-away land.

So the Mayflower sailed in that long, long ago,
 With its freight of brave women and men ;
 And if we've heard aright, the renowned name of White,
 First appeared in New England then.

FAMILY GATHERING, MARLBORO, N. H., JULY 4, 1893.

William White was the name ; from Delfthaven he came,
 With his wife and his children two,—three,
 One was born on the bay and rejoiced in his day,
 That he lived in the land of the free.

Tall and straight, firm and true, was the next one we view
 In this line of our brother's near kin ;
 The first Englishman born mid the sunshine and storm
 Of New England, and named Peregrine.

Next came Daniel, we 're told ; and may have been bold
 As the Daniel of Bible renown ;
 But no ruler was there, who could cause him to share
 With fierce lions a couch—not of down.

Yet we hope he trusted the same mighty God ;
 That he walked with the same Prince of Peace
 Who could strengthen His servant when with the wild beasts
 And alone could insure his release.

There are lions as fierce in these much boasted days ;
 And alas ! they are not kept in chains.
 O'er our land they are found, you may know by the sound
 Of the glanzen how great are their gains.

They are never content while a man has a cent.
 Both the body and soul they will spoil ;
 Take his houses and lands,—all the work of his hands—
 Leaving naught to reward his vain toil.

The descendants of Daniel may well fight this curse,
 Both with tongue and with vote, and with life :
 He who 'd quiet these lions should not be inside
 The vile dens which have always caused strife.

The next place we assign in this fine family line,
 To great-grandfather Thomas is given.
 We imagine him grave, like his father, the brave.
 He was fourth in the odd number seven.

In the list we move on unto William, his son,
 Who, a hundred and ten years ago,
 Came from Templeton old, where good ropes he had sold,
 To the town which is called Marlboro'.

Very temperate was he. Of his large family (11)
 Eighty-six was the average age,
 One a hundred and two—and not one ever knew
 Father William profane, or in rage.

In those somber old colcny times, when the men
 Wore long cues, a la "heathen Chinee,"
 If our fathers had met the same treatment we give
 To our brothers from over the sea,

Then the question arises: "Where would you have been?"
 Would this still be the "home of the free?"
 Or would we, sore oppressed, have sought out place of rest
 In the land of the gentle Chinee?

Now we come to the time, in our very poor rhyme,
 When the father asserted his right
 To be called Thomas, too,—a good name, far from new,
 In this family, whose surname was White.

In eighteen eighteen there appeared on the scene
 The same Thomas this gathering who cheers,
 And we now, in great state, his birthday celebrate
 Who has numbered his seventy years.

We will note in this place, of this time-honored race
 Four have lived more than four score of years.
 Brother White will, no doubt, watch the old century out,
 And rejoice when the new one appears.

Fifty years next September Brother White will remember
 As the time when he took him a wife;
 An odd fellow no longer, he was wiser and stronger,
 To contend in the battle of life.

We are not to suppose that they idleness chose,
 For twelve children were born on the farm,
 And, with cooking and mending, the farm needs attending,
 There was work to keep all out of harm.

Now the scene we will shift to a bright home of thrift,
 Where our sister first saw the sun's rays,
 Hopkinton, in this state (we have missed just the date),
 Was the place where she spent her first days.

In Warner she married, and straightway was carried.

In a slow, lumbering coach, far away
Unto Lowell, a city we may reach—what a pity!
On a Sunday, by car, in our day.

Here a girl and three boys just quadrupled her joys
And no children were ever more blessed
With a mother whose love could rebuke or reprove,
And could guide to the heavenly rest.

Earthly ties time will break. Death our loved ones will take.
Well for him whom with joy we now meet,
That a prize he had won when he brought to his home
The right, royal, wise woman we greet.

'Mid earth's scenes of confusion, and many complaints,
May they live in the sweetest of calms,
May they leave Lamentations, and sing with their might
Some of David's most beautiful Psalms.

Well, our brother lays claim to a fair, honored name,
He declares he has lived seventy years,
And his right hoary head proves the words he has said
May have given the truth to our ears.

We will credit his wife with five-fifty of life,
More than sixty we'll not let her claim;
Tho' she says (so we're told) "More than seventy years old,"
If you ask that her age she will name.

Ten children now live, help and comfort to give
To our friends on the down-hill of life,
What! down-hill did we say? never! never! for they Journey up towards the end of all strife.

With the dear ones they love, may we meet them above,
When earth's sorrows and joys are all o'er;
If we meet them there the true faith we must share,
Which alone leads to life evermore.

Golden weddings, we know, are but few here below.
In the land where the streets are of gold,
May you find sweetest peace; and may pleasures increase
To the glory which cannot be told.

THE OLD RED SCHOOL HOUSE.*

By Samuel White.—A Native.

Proud emblem of wisdom, I hail thee again,
 Nor can I forget thee while life shall remain ;
 Thy benches and seats where we nestled about,
 With the boys and their jack-knives so nicely carved out.
 Proud emblem of learning ! ah, long was thy stay ;
 Proud emblem of virtue, I deplore thy decay :
 Quite long hast thou stood as a guide to the youth,
 In which they were taught the wise lessons of truth ;
 Proud emblem of freedom, I hail with delight,
 Where virtue was taught, from which vice took its flight.
 Tho' crumbled and gone, yet thy old form I see,
 As in days of my youth when sheltered by thee ;
 Nor can I forget those wise servants of old,
 Who taught in thy borders so fearless and bold,
 The youth of the village to read, spell, and write,
 While virtue's true path was laid open in sight.
 The friends of my childhood I ne'er can forget,
 Tho' some have departed, their loss I regret ;
 Those scenes never more will return to my view,
 Thou little old school house, I bid thee adieu.
 Nor can I forget the glad hours in thee spent,
 Success was the aim on which I was intent ;
 Tho' oft' times thy room grew quite dreary and cold,
 As thy frame grew quite rickety, shattered, and old.
 But now thou art wasted forever from view,
 Thy form I remember as when thou wert new,— Thy ancient old chimney and old-fashioned fire,
 With fuel more scanty than one would desire ;
 Thy ragged, rough hearth-stone where often I've stood,
 And warmed with what heat was obtained from green wood ;
 Those times are all passed, all my youthful days o'er.
 Those merry companions, I behold them no more.
 Proud emblem of learning, I hail thee once more ;
 Fain would I behold thee again on life's shore,
 As in days of my youth, while thy story I tell,
 Proud emblem of virtue, and playmates, farewell.

*Reference is had to the old school house in Marlborough Harbor, N. H., so called sixty years ago (now Graniteville), where the writer obtained the little information he possesses.

AFTER THOUGHTS.

By Samuel White.

My infantile years have most suddenly flown,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago.
 And childhood and youth quite as quickly have gone,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago.
 The time that I spent in my own childish ways,
 The time that I passed in my school going days,
 Those times have all gone, and in various ways,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago.

The days that I spent at my own happy home,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago,
 While o'er the bright lawn, or thro' woodlands did roam,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago,
 Or gathered wild May flowers that came to my view,
 The brightest and fairest my childish heart knew,
 Those days have all fled like the bright morning dew,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago.

The days that I spent with my parents so dear,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago,
 That kind mother's voice, which I often could hear,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago,
 The hours that I passed by that fond mother's side,
 Or learned youthful duties in which I took pride,
 Those days have all passed, and those parents have died,
 Long, long ago, long, long ago.

In his ninety-second year, 1895.

ADDENDA.

Mason L. enlisted June 13, 1862, in Company B, Ninth Vermont Infantry. Mustered into service at Brattleboro, Vt., June 16, 1862, and left for Washington, D. C., early in July. Stayed near Washington three or four days; then went to Winchester, Va., in the Shenandoah valley. Here he did guard duty, building forts and breastworks until September, when they were driven back by the rebels and fell back to Harper's Ferry. They held the place until about the middle of the month, when the rebel armies made an attack, and after three days battle, forced them to surrender. They at once were paroled and marched to Annapolis, Md., and afterwards sent to Chicago, Ill., where they went into camp. March, 1863, they were ordered back to Virginia, having been exchanged about January 1, 1863. While on board a steamer in the Chesapeake Bay he was taken sick and, landing at Fort Monroe, was sent to Chesapeake Hospital, near Hampton, Va. By order of General B. F. Butler, November, 1863, he was sent on board the flag of truce steamer, New York, where he remained on duty until the close of the war. Was mustered out of service at Richmond, Va., June 13, 1865. His father, Calvin White, enlisted at the same time, and remained with him until the regiment reached Chicago, Ill., where, on account of poor health, he was discharged, November, 1862, and sent home.

Bertha C. White

FINIS.

While I review the honorable lives of my ancestry I feel most grateful to God for giving me my birth from such a lineage.

I find my ancestors to be men of worth, and faithful followers of the Blessed Jesus. They left their father-land, being persecuted for their love of freedom and true Christianity, and became pilgrims in this country. Those of their posterity with whom I have communicated I find endowed with the same love of God that our fathers possessed.

As an author of this work my attention was first called to collecting historical and traditional records by the traditions told me by my father, and substantiated by an old trunk containing old deeds and receipts belonging to my grandfather and great-grandfather, which came into my possession at the decease of my father in 1865, leading me to investigate this noble line of ancestry.

I wish to thank all who have rendered assistance to me in compiling this work, especially Mrs. Sarah E. Bosworth of Pembroke, Mass., and Mrs. H. D. Osgood of Somerville, Mass., also my grand daughter, Bertha C. White.

And now in my seventy-eighth year, while laying down my life's work so soon to close, I wish to say to all that I have been most wonderfully elated with so noble a posterity.

THOMAS WHITE.

The author and compiler of this volume undertook the labor involved in its preparation from sentiments entirely unselfish. He made it the object of his last ebbing energies. Having in weakness and illness survived to read the final proofs, he "fell on sleep" in the triumph of the Gospel on Friday evening, November 22, 1895, aged 77 years, 10 months, and 20 days. His surviving family deem it appropriate to add this postscript to the work of his hands.

Mr. White lived an unostentatious life of Christian usefulness and fidelity. He was aggressive in his opposition to wrong and in his maintenance of right. As an illustration it may be stated—as he omitted to mention it in his biographical sketch in this book—that he was one of the first four men to vote the Free-soil ticket in his native town. He was strong in his denunciations of slavery, intemperance, the liquor traffic, and every public evil. Yet his disposition in private life was sweet and gentle as a woman's. He has left an indelible impression not only on the character of his immediate home circle, but in a much wider sphere among his neighbors and friends.

After prayers at his late home, conducted by his pastor, Rev. G. W. Buzzell, the formal funeral rites were solemnized, on Sunday afternoon, November 24, in the little Methodist church, where he had so often been a devout worshipper. A very large company were present to testify their respect for his memory. Rev. Mr. Buzzell conducted the impressive exercises and delivered a judicious eulogy, founded on the closing words of the Ninetieth Psalm: "Establish Thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish Thou it." Appreciative words of personal esteem were also added by the pastor of the Congregational church, Rev. J. S. Colby. Hymns were sung by the Methodist choir, and an opportunity was given to all present to take their final look at the peaceful face of the dead. The remains were then borne to their permanent resting place in the cemetery near the house he had so long called his home.
