

12/8/02

any way.

1882. Sally Edgerly, widow of the late David Edgerly, aged 86 years, 5 months and eight days. By this death, not only the circle of relatives, but almost the entire community become mourners. A native of this town, and one who has always resided here, connected by ties of kindred with a large number of families, and highly esteemed by all who knew her, she has reached the end of a long and useful life and entered into rest, leaving the sweet memory of her goodness and worth to those who survive her. Mrs. Edgerly was the youngest of three daughters of Mr. Asa Tilton, of Gilmanton, and before her death, was the only surviving member of his family. In 1817 she was married, and with her husband established the home which has been graced by her presence, through all the years of mingled happiness and affliction until her death. Two children died in childhood, one son at middle age; two daughters remain to mourn their loss. Her husband died very suddenly in 1849, and in 1868 the son who remained at home and who would have cared for his mother in her old age was taken away, leaving his own family and his mother and sister in the old home to meet the conflicts of life alone. Her children have rendered faithful assistance in all her trials, her grand-children have aided with one another in kindness, and as the years went have learned only to love her more. Her home has been a meeting place for all her relatives and neighbors alike. Every one inquired for "Grand-mother Edgerly" or "Aunt Sally" when she was sick. She was an earnest Christian and a member of the old C. Baptist church at Lower Gilmanton. The Bible was her constant companion. Ministers of Christ were always welcomed at her home, and since she has become aged social meetings have often been held at her house. If all who have shared her hospitality, or who have been reached by her deeds of kindness could speak, these would be a multitude to rise up and call her blessed. The bereavement is especially hard for the youngest daughter, Mary, who has lived with her mother and cared for her always. We are sincere mourners, but we know that she possessed a treasure more valuable and more enduring than the riches of earthly friends, and that sickness cannot enter her everlasting home.

Sally Edgerly

Gilmanton Iron Works.

Died at Gilmanton Iron Works, Dec. 5th, 1882, Sally Edgerly, widow of the late David Edgerly, aged 86 years, 5 months and eight days. By this death, not only the large circle of relatives, but almost the entire community become mourners. A native of the town, and one who has always resided here, connected by ties of kindred with a large number of families, and highly esteemed by all who knew her, she has reached the end of a long and useful life and entered into rest, leaving the sweet memory of her goodness and worth to those who survive her. Mrs. Edgerly was the youngest of three daughters of Mr. Asa Tilton, of Gilmanton, and before her death, was the only surviving member of his family. In 1817 she was married, and with her husband established the home which has been graced by her presence, through all the years of mingled happiness and affliction until her death. Two children died in childhood, one son at middle age; two sons and four daughters remain to mourn their loss. Her husband died very suddenly in 1849, and in 1868 the son who remained at home and who would have cared for his mother in her old age was taken away, leaving his own family and his mother and sister in the old home to meet the conflicts of life alone. Her children have rendered faithful assistance in all her trials, her grand-children have aided with one another in kindness, and as the years went have learned only to love her more. Her home has been a meeting place for all her relatives and neighbors alike. Every one inquired for "Grand-mother Edgerly" or "Aunt Sally" when she was sick. She was an earnest Christian and a member of the old C. Baptist church at Lower Gilmanton. The Bible was her constant companion. Ministers of Christ were always welcomed at her home, and since she has become aged social meetings have often been held at her house. If all who have shared her hospitality, or who have been reached by her deeds of kindness could speak, these would be a multitude to rise up and call her blessed. The bereavement is especially hard for the youngest daughter, Mary, who has lived with her mother and cared for her always. We are sincere mourners, but we know that she possessed a treasure more valuable and more enduring than the riches of earthly friends, and that sickness cannot enter her everlasting home.

12