ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S REPORT.

General Headquarters State of New-Hampsher; Adjurant, Inspector, and Quarternaster General's Office,
Concord, June 1, 1868.

To His Excellency Walter Harriman,

Governor and Commander-in-chief.

Governor, - In submitting this my Annual Report upon the condition of affairs pertaining to, and the public property in charge of, this office, I shall endeavor to make it as brief and succinct as possible. And; in the first place, I deem it fitting to speak of the duties devolving upon, and performed in, this office during the year just past: and although I cannot expect that all will comprehend or appreciate the necessity of its continuation, since the late terrible civil strife is so happily ended, and knowing that for a period prior to the inauguration of that strife no active duty was required to be done here; yet I hope to convince all thinking people, having at heart the best interests of the State and nation, that there does exist an imperative necessity for its continuation, and that the expense of the same is not only unavoidable, but a saving to the State, as was shown in my Report for 1867.

The legitimate business of the office for the past year has been, aside from that specially mentioned hereafter, of the same nature as that during the preceding year; nor can I say that I think there has been the least diminution.

It has been so varied, that to mention it in detail would require a much larger volume than I propose to make; and I will therefore only cite a few of the leading features.

The endless number of inquiries made by officials, claim-agents, late officers, soldiers, and sailors, or their heirs, relative to the enlistment, muster, service, and final disposition of thousands of our braves, has occasioned much labor.

The object of these inquiries is mainly to obtain information on which to ground applications for bounty, back pay, pensions, &c.; and, in almost every case, requires certificates, aside from letters of explanation.

The number of letters written, of which copies have been retained, is upwards of twenty-five hundred; and of certificates given, upwards of two thousand.

No call for information, from whatever source, has been unheeded, but in every instance has received the promptest attention; and all information on file touching the points in question has been cheerfully given, which, although occasioning some little expense to the State, is but a trifle compared with that expended by Massachusetts and other States in assisting their volunteers.

In Massachusetts and several other States, the State has not only furnished this information, but has borne the entire expense of prosecuting the claims of soldiers and their heirs against the municipal and general government.

They have had State agents at Washington, with office and clerks, for this especial purpose, at the expense of the State; and who will say but that the expense, however much or little, attending this recognition of the services of our soldiery, is justly, and in duty bound, due from each and every State!

We owe to them a debt of gratitude which we can never pay, and it has been a source of infinite pleasure to me to be able to do what lay in my power for this class of our citizens.

As in the last year, many cases have been brought to my notice where injustice was done some officer or soldier by reason of erroneous returns having been made, and I have done all I could to set their record right.

The following are some of the most important corrections made in the records during the past year, and should read as here given, instead of as formerly reported:—

Seventy General and one hundred and twenty-five Special Orders have been issued during the year, with an average of fifteen copies each, making in all two thousand nine hundred and twenty-five, aside from a large number of printed letters and circulars, and various blanks, &c., for the use of the militia, all of which require time and labor.

OLD MILITARY RECORDS.

At the last session of the Legislature, the following joint resolution was passed:—

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened:

"Section 1. That the Adjutant-General is hereby authorized to procure the military records now on file in the office of the Secretary of State, and place them on file in his office."

In accordance with the above resolution, I have gathered in all such records that I have been able to find, and properly arranged, labelled, and filed the same, so far as time and the business of the office would admit.

It will require, however, several months of patient, persevering labor to complete the work. More than forty bushels of miscellaneous papers have been examined, among which are found those belonging to the office of the Secretary of State, to the Treasurer's office, to the Executive Chamber, and even private documents, aside from those pertaining to this department, in a condition mixed and intermixed, bewildering and perplexing; in fact, a conglomeration of miscellaneous matter, marvellously heaped together, demonstrating the impolitic manner in which the records of this State have hitherto been kept, and the folly of half doing, or not doing at all, that which should be done at once and well done.

No adequate idea can be formed of the amount of tedious, persistent labor required in arranging and filing these papers; but with this, as has been the case with every branch of the manifold duties of this office, I have deemed it a public necessity that the work should be done, and have done it to the best of my ability, and as I believed would best subserve the public good. What papers I have examined and filed have been deposited in the fire-proof vaults of the office, where they can be preserved and referred to with ease at any time.

More than four months have already been devoted to this work, but the improvement made amply repays the State.

The following preamble and joint resolution was also passed at the same session:—

A JOINT RESOLUTION IN RELATION TO THE MILITARY RECORDS OF THIS STATE AT WASHINGTON.

"Whereas, certain books and papers were transmitted in 1818 from the Secretary's office to the War Department at Washington, relating to the War of the Revolution, and it is supposed that some of those books and papers still remain in said department; and, whereas, the rolls of the soldiers from this State in the war with Great Britain in 1812–15, and those of the soldiers in the Mexican War, as also those of our soldiers ordered to protect our frontier at Indian Stream, are in the War Department or Pension Office; and, whereas, the interest of the people of this State requires that those books, papers, and rolls should be in our own public archives; therefore,— "Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened:

"Section 1. That the Adjutant-General be authorized to obtain from the War Department and Pension Office those books, papers, and rolls, or copies of them, and deposit the same in his office.

"And be it further resolved, That the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council, cause said papers, or such portions thereof, to be arranged and published, as, in their judgment, the interest of the people of this State may require; and that the Governor be authorized to draw his warrant upon the treasury for such an amount as shall cover the expenses of obtaining such books, papers, records, and rolls, or copies of them, and for arranging and publishing the same in the next Annual Report of the Adjutant-General." (Approved July 5, 1867.)

Under this authority I proceeded to Washington, and, although I eventually succeeded in obtaining copies of most of the rolls, experienced much and unlooked-for trouble.

I first applied to Gen. Samuel Breck, having in charge the Roll Department, who referred me to Gen. E. D. Townsend, Assistant Adjutant-General. I told Gen. Townsend what I wanted, showed him the authority by which I made the request, and explained to him the importance and necessity of the State having in its possession copies, at least, of the rolls furnished the War Department through the courtesy of the State; that the rolls belonged to the State, and were loaned the Department for the purpose of effecting a settlement with the General Government for the services rendered by the troops furnished by New-Hampshire, but had never been returned, consequently we had no means of determining who or how many of our citizens served in the War of 1812, the Indian Stream War, or the Mexican War; and, in the name of the State, demanded copies or the originals.

He informed me that it was contrary to the rules of the Department to allow any rolls or papers to be copied, giving the reasons therefor, which in substance were, to prevent claim-agents and other parties from troubling or imposing upon the Department; and positively declined to grant my request.

I then called upon Senator Pafterson, and made known to him my wants and the result of my visit at the War Department; and he kindly volunteered to go with me to see Gen. Townsend, with a view of obtaining, if possible, a more favorable decision. He did so, and for more than an hour reasoned with Gen. Townsend on the subject; but no better result crowned his labors than had mine.

Our next move was to lay the matter before Gen. Grant, then Acting Secretary of War, who at once sent an order to Gen. Townsend directing him to furnish me such rolls and papers as I might wish to copy. This settled all controversy in that Department.

Upon examination, however, I only found in the War Department the rolls of the Mexican War, and learned that those of the War of 1812 were in the office of the Third Auditor, Treasury Department, under the supervision of Hon. John Wilson, whom I found to be a perfect gentleman, ready and willing to aid me in every possible way, as was also the case with his clerks. They were very courteous, and rendered me valuable assistance in copying the rolls.

The rolls of the Indian Stream War I found to be in the Second Auditor's office, in charge of E. B. French, who, although a native of New-Hampshire, and should have some little interest here, treated me in anything but a gentlemanly manner, and would not only not allow me to copy the rolls, but would not even allow me to see them, or enter the office where they were kept; consequently I was obliged to return without the rolls of the soldiers serving on our frontier. I was fortunate, however, in obtaining them from private individuals in Lancaster.

To Hon. J. W. Patterson, Hon. John Wilson, Gens. Grant, Breck, and others at the War Department, I am largely indebted for my success, and I would here tender to them my sincere thanks.

After getting the work well under way, I returned home, leaving its completion with Capt. H. A. Snow, who copied and forwarded the rolls to me. To him, and also to Messrs. Whitney and Brown, I am under great obligations.

Having laid the matter of publishing these records before your Excellency and the Honorable Council, I was instructed to use my own discretion. This I have done, and in Part Second of this Report will be found the result of my labors in this direction. As a whole, I am happy to say that I have succeeded in obtaining material for concluding the military history of our State, beyond my expectation.

Original letters and private papers, or copies of them, from officers engaged in the War of 1812-15, the Florida

War, the difficulties at Indian Stream, and the war with Mexico, have been placed at my disposal, which have enabled me to "set history right" as to many incidents connected with those wars, and to place the actions of many of our New-Hampshire soldiers in their proper light before the public. I have now brought down to the commencement of the late war as complete a military history of the State as is possible to obtain; which, with the histories of the several volunteer organizations which rendered such valiant service in the War of the Rebellion, makes the proudest monument that could be reared to the gallant volunteers of our noble State.

In collating these records, as was the case with those previously published, I secured the services of Col. C. E. Potter, of Hillsborough, a well-known antiquarian, who has rendered me valuable service, and is entitled to great credit.

Nearly the entire matter published, which I was unable to obtain from official sources, has been furnished by him, and is the result of many years of search and patient inquiry. But for him, much valuable information, and many important rolls and documents, would of a necessity had to have been omitted. His knowledge of our early history admirably qualifies him for the work entrusted to him, and he has done it faithfully and impartially. To him and to Hon. L. D. Stevens of Concord, Gen. John Bedel of Bath, Col. H. O. Kent and Horace White, Esq., of Lancaster, Col. John H. Jackson of Boston, Col. Thomas P. Pierce of Manchester, Col. George Bowers of Nashua, Edward F. Sise, Esq., of Portsmouth, and the Misses Miller of Temple, all of whom furnished valuable material, I am under great obligations. The material furnished by them could not have been obtained from any other source.

TESTIMONIALS.

As I mentioned in my last Report, I was instructed by Gov. Smyth and the Honorable Council to issue to every officer and soldier, and to the heirs of all deceased officers and soldiers, who might apply for the same, a testimonial of honor; and, during the past year, have issued some nine thousand, necessitating a great amount of labor, occupying, as it has, the individual attention of one clerk for the entire time.

Those ordered prior to your administration were paid for by the State Treasurer from the military fund, and consequently no special appropriation was asked for or made. Subsequently, however, the Treasurer refused to pay for more, and it was not until about the middle of January last that those last ordered were paid for, although the bills were approved by you some time previous. This delay in the payment of the engraver's bills caused no little embarrassment and correspondence on the part of this office; and I trust, therefore, that you will call to the attention of the incoming Legislature the necessity of making some adequate provision whereby the necessary expense incurred (about twenty-five cents each) in the distribution of these testimonials may be defrayed.

No postal expense has attended the distribution of these testimonials. The first few thousand were sent under the frank of Hon. G. G. Fogg, who kindly volunteered his services; and after the expiration of his franking privilege, in December, 1867, Gen. A. F. Stevens introduced, and with the aid of our other members of Congress secured the passage of a bill authorizing the Adjutant-General to frank such documents. The result of this move has been to save to the State nearly one thousand dollars during the past year; and to those gentlemen who so kindly rendered me their aid I desire to express my sincere thanks. No act could have given more general satisfaction, or elicited from those noble patriots who abandoned the peaceful pursuits of life, and the pleasant associations of family and home, and gave their services for their country in the hour of its greatest trial and necessity, a more hearty, spontaneous approval than has this. Hundreds, on the receipt of a testimonial, have sent to this office their acknowledgments, couched in the most flattering and grateful terms; which, with the eagerness to obtain them, is sufficient proof of the popularity of the measure.

A specific appropriation should be made, in order that those parties who have not already received them may be furnished with one of these testimonials.

BATTLE-FLAGS.

At a suggestion made in my Report for last year, the following resolution was passed relative to these glorious mementos:—

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened:

"Section 1. That the Adjutant-General be instructed to remove the battle-flags now on exhibition in Doric Hall, and place them in proper and suitable cases for their preservation; and the expense of the same shall be paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the Governor may draw his warrant for the same." (Approved July 6, 1867.)

This resolution has been complied with, and they are now so arranged and protected as to prevent premature decay, and also add much to the appearance of the Doric Hall.

Four glass cases have been provided, and the flags placed in them with great care, commencing with the case on the north side of the hall, in which are placed those of the First Regiment, and following in numerical order of the regiments. In the first case (north) are the flags of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, and Fifth Regiments; two guidons of the Fifth, one of the Second, and one of the Tenth Regiment. No. 2 case (northwest) contains the flags of the Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Regiments; two guidons of the Sixth, and two of the Seventh Regiment. No. 3 (southwest) contains the flags of the Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, and Twelfth Regiments; two guidons of the Tenth, and two of the Twelfth Regiment. In No. 4 case (south side) are deposited the flags of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and Eighteenth Regiments of Infantry; those of the First Cavalry, First Battery, and First Regiment of Heavy Artillery: two guidons of the Thirteenth, those of the First Cavalry, and two of the Sixth Regiment; making sixty-six flags, and eighteen guidons. Many of the flags are in a sad condition of decay, and will scarcely bear the most delicate handling, and it is well that early steps were taken looking to their better preservation. They are now safe from all molestation of visitors or the inclemency of the weather; and here let them rest, hallowed mementos of the fearful strife in which our noble State bore such an honorable part: and, as we gaze upon their tattered and blood-stained folds, may we all swear anew to sustain the principles embodied in their once bright and glorious colors!

MILITIA AND MILITIA LAWS.

I feel assured your Excellency will be pleased to learn that the active military spirit manifested by our citizens, since the close of the late rebellion, has not in the least abated during the year just past; and that our volunteer militia has taken no retrogade steps during your administration. For decades of years, we have not had such a reliable, efficient force within our borders as we now have, and which, with a little fostering care and encouragement on the part of the State, will so continue, and prove not only a safeguard, but a credit, to the State. During the year there have been organized five companies, which are located and designated as follows:—

Lincoln Rifles		Milford.
Parker Guards		Lisbon.
Newfound Lake Rifles		Bridgewater.
First Light Battery, Section "B"		Manchester.
Clarke Guards		Manchester.

One company, the Smyth Guards, at Fisherville, having failed to comply with the requirements of law, and to maintain an effective organization, has been disbanded by the following order:—

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS,
STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE;
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, CONCORD, May 1, 1868.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 3.

I. The "Smyth Guards," New-Hampshire Volunteer Militia, having failed to maintain an effective organization, is hereby disbanded, and the members thereof released from further obligations attending their enlistment.

II. Capt. Charles Reiley, First Lieut. John C. Linnehan, and Second Lieut. William Maher, of the "Smyth Guards," are hereby honorably discharged the service of the State.

By order of His Excellency.

WALTER HARRIMAN,
NATT HEAD, Adjutant-General.

Numerous petitions have been received, praying for authority to organize new companies, from almost every part of the State, which have been disapproved, or laid upon the table until some more convenient time, or rather until some company or companies should be disbanded; it not being deemed expedient or necessary to augment our present force, which now consists of twenty-seven companies of Infantry, one of Cavalry, one of Heavy Artillery, and two sections of Light Battery, and is organized as follows:—

NEW-HAMPSHIRE VOLUNTEER MILITIA-ROSTER. HIS EXCELLENCY WALTER HARRIMAN,

GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

1386694 By order of His Excellency.

> WALTER HARRIMAN. Governor and Commander-in-chief. NATT HEAD, Adjutant-General.

In accordance with the above order, at a little past nine o'clock on the day designated, the several companies stationed at Manchester formed under command of Lieut.-Col. Maxwell, and, escorted by the Manchester Cornet Band, marched to camp, and were followed by the other companies of the regiment as fast as they arrived.

Company B, National Guards, Capt. Charles H. Reed commanding, went into camp the day previous, for the purpose of arranging camp and pitching the tents; so that, upon the arrival of the troops, nothing remained for them to do but to enter at once upon their duties, which, for the first day, were mostly of a preliminary character. The grounds selected were well adapted for an encampment, and the camp was designated "Camp Lincoln," in honor of our martyr President. As provided by law, I had, previous to this encampment, purchased one hundred wall-tents, made from the best of material, and obtained from R. M. Yale, Esq., of Boston, the loan of thirty A tents and two large marquees.

The order of exercises on the second day was as follows: Reveillé at sunrise; breakfast call at 7 o'clock, A.M.; surgeon's call at half past seven; orderly call at eight; guard-mounting at nine; inspection half past nine; battalion drill at eleven; dinner-call at twelve, M.; review at two o'clock, P.M.; dress parade at five.

At the hour for inspection, the regiment was formed in line, and, after passing in review, was inspected by myself, assisted by Col. T. L. Livermore, Assistant Inspector-General. As a whole, the condition of the arms, clothing, and equipments was very good, and the appearance of the troops highly creditable, of which I shall speak more in detail under the head of "Inspector-General's Report." The grand review took place at the hour designated, and reflected much credit on all concerned.

The marching and wheeling of the troops was done with a soldierly precision, giving unbounded satisfaction to the vast concourse of people assembled to witness it; and the gratification of yourself can in no wise be better expressed than it was in your address to the officers and soldiers on this occasion; namely:—

"I congratulate you on the admirable bearing and efficiency of the First Regiment New-Hampshire Volunteer Militia. In the duties of the camp, and in the labor of the drill, you have done your whole duty. Your conduct and your appearance are evidence that this encampment is something more than a holiday affair. Your discipline and enthusiasm attest the accomplishment of the purpose that brought you here."

The words of cheer contained in your address elicited. prolonged cheers from the entire camp; and I doubt not that every soldier went to his tent a better soldier. Soldiers need encouragement, need to have their services appreciated, else they may well become disheartened, and, where so little inducement is held out as in this State, will soon relax into a state of indifference and demoralization. mediately after review, at your request, I ordered a company drill, and for half an hour all present had the satisfaction of witnessing one of the most pleasing sights ever beheld. Every company entered into the work with a will, and the field presented such a panoramic scene as is seldom witnessed. An imposing dress parade closed the exercises of the day, which was witnessed by your Excellency and staff. During the forenoon of the third and last day, the men were kept continually on the move, either by company or battalion drill. At one o'clock, P.M., the signal for striking camp was given from the well-handled guns of Section "B," of the Light Battery, and in three minutes every tent was down and securely rolled and bound. Then came dress parade, and the regiment was marched through the principal streets of Manchester to the depot. The following congratulatory order was issued by Col. J. N. Patterson at the close of the encampment, and shows how that officer looked upon the affair:-

> HEADQUARTERS FIRST REGIMENT NEW-HAMPSHIRE VOL. MILITIA, CAMP LINCOLN, Sept. 20, 1867.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 6.

The Colonel commanding desires to return to the officers and soldiers of this command his most hearty thanks for the prompt and faithful manner in which they have discharged their several duties during the encampment just ended.

Assembling, as you did, from remote localities, with (in many instances) but little acquaintance with each other, you have maintained at all times that degree of decorum seldom if ever equalled in an encampment like this, and in which you have done yourselves and the State much credit.

With the trifling amount of drill which you have had as a regimental organization, you have acquitted yourselves with great credit, and sustained well the reputation of New-Hampshire soldiers which many of you did so much to make in the field during the late civil strife, and which, he is proud to say, was second to that of the soldiery of no other State.

No weary months of drill are required to fit you for the sterner duties of the soldier, as was the case in '61. Let the tocsin of war but sound in your ears, and you are ready to respond with lion hearts and arms of steel.

Since your last annual encampment, you have made rapid strides in discipline and efficiency; and he hopes that the noble spirit which has animated you thus far will still be apparent, and that a year hence, when you shall again assemble on this or some other field, still greater improvement may be visible.

By order.

J. N. PATTERSON,

Colonel Commanding.

JOHN M. HAINES,

Adjutant.

Altogether, this encampment was the finest military display seen in this section of the State for many years, and does great credit to those who participated, and to the State. The orderly conduct and soldierly bearing of the rank and file, and the military accomplishments of the officers, was the subject of general encomiums.

The Second Regiment went into camp about a mile north of Lake Village, on the eighth day of October. The camp was well laid out, and, like that of the First Regiment, presented a beautiful and picturesque appearance. It was christened "Camp Cole," in honor of Councillor Cole from that place.

The programme of exercises carried out at this encampment differed but little from that at Manchester; consequently the details need not be given. At two o'clock, P.M., on the second day, the regiment was reviewed by your Excellency, accompanied by your staff, Assistant Inspector-General Livermore, and Adjutant Haines of the First Regiment, with the same pleasing result as attended that of the First Regiment. The attendance on this day was very large, — estimated at from eight to ten thousand people, of all classes, colors, and ages; especially gray-haired veterans who, under the old régime, were accustomed to shoulder the old Queen's arms, and fight it out on the line of the muster-field. These were especially pleased to see a revival of old muster-days; and the younger class, to whom musters were only known in tradition, now feel the profound satisfaction which flows from personal inspection and consequent knowledge. Here, too, unusual order was maintained throughout the encampment. The discipline of the regiment was very good, and the proficiency shown in drill worthy of commendation.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S REPORT.

Brigadier-General NATT HEAD, Adjutant and Inspector General of New-Hampshire.

GENERAL,—I have the honor to forward herewith my report of the annual inspection of the First Brigade of New-Hampshire Volunteer Militia, made in September and October, 1867.

Owing to the brief time during which I could ask the attention of commanding officers, I was obliged to rely upon reports subsequently made by them as to the number of men not at inspection, and for the items on page 5; and I fear that some of the statistics drawn therefrom are inaccurate, while it will appear that some columns are incomplete; but, as in all essential items reports on file in the Adjutant and Inspector General's office can supply deficiencies and correct errors, I do not think that any injury can result from these errors and omissions, small as they must be.

I took pains to ascertain the number of "substitutes" in the First Regiment, and, as appears by column 57, there were forty-five; and I presume that the Second Regiment was not free from this evil. It is unnecessary for me to enlarge upon the dangers of the practice of suffering men to appear at muster by proxy; and I will only say that, in my opinion, it is decidedly to the detriment of the service. It is just to say that, while Company "F" of the Second Regiment appeared with dirty arms, yet in it there was one, if not more, of the neatest and most soldierly men in the regiment; and that Companies "M," "H," and "G," First Regiment, and Companies "G," "H," and "E," Second Regiment, deserve especial mention for cleanliness and soldierly appearance.

The Artillery also claims mention for proficiency in drill. The proximity of the camps to a city and town was the source of much evil. The men broke the guard, and officers passed right out of camp,—practices which cannot exist in company with discipline.

The large number of men absent without authority illustrates well the remark of an officer of the line, that fines for non-attendance are poor means of coercion, when the delinquents may escape by taking the "poor debtor's oath."

The fault of not wearing the prescribed uniform prevailed to a certain extent among the officers; and this leads me to say that our community cannot expect men to purchase costly uniforms, in which to appear as officers, upon a dollar and a half a day for four or five days in the year; and further, that, however much patriotism may prompt men to pecuniary sacrifices, yet that soldiers of the first order, of whom a large portion are laboring men, cannot afford to assume the responsibility of arms and clothing, and devote time and money to the service of the State, on such trivial pay.

I am constrained by a sense of duty to again say that proper regimental organizations, brigade encampments, boards of examination for officers, and competitive trials among the troops, are absolutely necessary for a prosperous militia in our State; and that, to accomplish the best results in every particular, the duration of the musters should be increased to a week at least.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

THOS. L. LIVERMORE,

Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General N. H. V. M.

The report proper of this inspection is so lengthy and difficult to insert in a report like this, that I deem it unadvisable to attempt the publication of anything more than a general summary of it:—

Number of regiments, 2; number of companies, 30. 1 general staff-officer, 101 field, staff, and company officers, and 1,247 enlisted men were present for duty, and 18 men present sick; making a total of 1,367 present at the encampment. 21 enlisted men were absent with leave, and 58 without leave, 1 officer and 7 enlisted men absent sick, and one officer absent without leave; making an aggregate of 1,455. 102 officers and 1,245 enlisted men were reported as effective for the field. 93 of these officers and 570 of the men have seen service in the field. They have done their duty nobly once, and, should an emergency arise, may be relied upon as doing it again.

The arms of three companies, C, B, and F, of the First Regiment, and those of three companies, C, D, and F, of the Second Regiment, are reported as having been, in a degree, dirty.

Condition of accourtements good, of horse-equipments good, and condition of clothing good; the military bearing and discipline, not as good as it should be, but under the circumstances, perhaps, as good as could be expected.

The poor condition of the arms of Company B, First Regiment, was quite excusable, inasmuch as the company was on police and fatigue duty for three days previous to inspection. So also with Company C, of the Second Regiment. Through the negligence of its former commander, Capt. Mitchell, the arms became much scattered, and in an almost unserviceable condition; but Capt. Hodgdon, the present commander, took hold of the matter in earnest, just before encampment, and is entitled to much credit. No excuse is given for the other companies whose arms are noted as dirty. The instruction in guard-duty had not that uniformity which it ought, and it is hoped that this defect will be remedied in the future. Owing to the shortness of time in camp, and the fact that many of the companies were never before attached to a regimental organization, it could not be expected that the best of discipline could be maintained, or that the movements could be executed with the precision of veteran regiments; but, in a majority of cases, the companies were quite proficient, and showed careful instruction in the school of the company: and in the battalion movements there was more precision than last year, which, considering the long interval of a year between these drills, was highly creditable.

A three days' encampment annually does not give sufficient time in which to regulate camp, and put the command in condition for inspection, or even to execute battalion movements with any degree of precision.

Nearly the entire first day must necessarily be devoted to preliminaries, so that not more than one or two battalion drills at the most can be had, before the troops are called upon for inspection and review. In view of this fact, I feel constrained to again urge upon your Excellency the importance of an annual encampment of five days' duration, and that it be by brigade rather than by regiment; thus allowing one day for assembling, establishing camp, and attending to the minor details, and another day for breaking camp and dispersing homeward.

The three days intervening could be devoted exclusively to drill, camp and guard duty, which would result in a marked improvement in the proficiency and effectiveness of our militia; fully compensating for the extra expense which might be incurred, if indeed there were any, which I very much doubt.

The encampment should be held at the most central and accessible point; and, as the law now stands, I believe arrangements can be made for transportation, so that enough can be saved to pay the expense of the two additional days in camp.

I hope, before the time for another encampment arrives, the militia of this State may be thoroughly reorganized, and that it consist of three regiments and one brigade. Let there be ten companies of infantry, one of cavalry, and one section of light battery to each regiment. Then let there be frequent drills, military displays, and an annual encampment by brigade of five days' duration. This would bring the men together in large masses, and they would become habituated to the varied duties of the camp and field, and very soon become familiar with the profession of arms, and be in readiness at all times for any emergency which might arise. If so organized and schooled (and I see no reason why it cannot be), we shall very soon have a military force which would do credit to any State or people; and, as relates to this, no further legislation is needed. It lays wholly with the Commander-in-chief.

No one thing is conducive of so much good to the military service, and consequently to the State, as military displays on holidays, and other occasions requiring a military escort, whether it be on Inauguration Day, the reception of distinguished personages, or any other public day. On all such occasions the entire force is ever ready to respond favorably to any call made, as is plainly evidenced by the enthusiasm manifested on the occasion of your inaugural in June last, and that of the reception of Maj.-Gen. Sheridan on the 29th of October, 1867. In both instances every company invited were present, and not only did great credit to themselves, but their presence was a source of gratification to our citizens. When it was decided by the city of Concord to give to Gen. Sheridan a formal reception, the Committee of Arrangements extended, to such companies as transportation could be furnished for, an invitation to be present, which was unanimously accepted. One company furnished its own transportation, and came in teams a distance of more than twenty miles. Other companies came by rail, after receiving information that transportation could not be furnished, and paid their fare. It was a rainy, disagreeable day; yet the display made was never equalled in this State. Unfortunately, the hero of the Shenandoah was detained, and the major portion of the troops were obliged to return without seeing him; but, notwithstanding their disappointment, they insisted upon carrying out the programme laid down by the committee, and marched through mud and rain through the principal streets of the city. The action of the militia on this occasion was so praiseworthy that the following congratulatory circular was issued from these headquarters:—

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, Concord, Oct. 30, 1867.

CIRCULAR No. 1.

The undersigned feels that he would do injustice to the military organizations of this State, did he fail to make some formal expression of his admiration for the alacrity with which they responded to the invitation to participate in the reception of Major-General Sheridan; for the magnanimity with which they bore the disappointment of losing an interview with that gallant soldier; and the willing hearts and martial step with which they marched on parade.

He regrets his inability to procure transportation for the several organizations not present, and assures them that no effort on his part was spared in that direction. For their manifest eagerness to be present they have his sincere thanks.

He desires to convey to those organizations present, his profound thanks for their services on that day, and the assurance that such conduct as theirs, although on a peaceful occasion, evinces, in his estimation and that of many observers, that fortitude and discipline which constitute a good soldier.

NATT HEAD,

Adjutant-General.

Such military displays promote discipline and efficiency, afford our citizens an opportunity of real enjoyment, and of acquainting themselves with the workings and worth of our militia, and should therefore be encouraged in every possible way.

REPORTS OF INSPECTION OF ARMORIES.

Much good having accrued from the inspection made last year, I deemed it advisable to again inspect the several armories, and consequently issued the following special order:—

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS STATE OF NEW HAMPSHICE.
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,

SPECIAL ORDER No. 7.

Colonel Thomas L. Livermore, Assistant Inspector-General, is hereby directed to proceed at once to inspect the armories, arms, equipments, and uniforms of the several military companies in this State, excepting the State Capital Guards, Grant Guards, Hooksett Light Infantry, and the Lancaster Rifles, and to render a full report of the same to these headquarters. He will not only report the condition of the armories and property, but also that of the company records, the apparent discipline, and the ability and qualifications of the several commanding officers, and will recommend such action as may be deemed necessary for the good of the public service.

By order of His Excellency.

WALTER HARRIMAN,
Governor and Commander-in-Chief.
NATT HEAD,

Adjutant, Inspector, and Quartermaster General.

Col. Livermore at once entered upon the discharge of his duties, and submitted the following report: —

Office of Assistant Inspector-General, First Brigade, First Division, N. H. V. M., Milford, April 27, 1868.

Brigadier-General NATT HEAD, Adjutant and Inspector-General.

GENERAL, — I have the honor to report that, in compliance with S. O. No 7, A. G. O., State of New-Hampshire, dated April 6, 1868, I have inspected the armories, arms, etc., of the companies hereinafter mentioned, and that their condition was found to be as noted.

FIRST REGIMENT.

Company B, National Guards, Manchester, had a new and excellent armory, suitable for drill by company, with rooms for clothing and arms. The armory is not yet completely fitted up, and the uniforms and accourrements were packed in boxes. The captain reported that there were fifty sets of accoutrements and fifty uniforms in the armory. There were forty-four rifles in the armory, rusty and in bad condition.

Company C, Head Guards, Manchester, had forty-seven rifles in the armory, rusty and in poor condition, and forty-six sets of accourrements and some spare belts; forty uniforms, less four caps and one pair of trowsers, in the armory, all in fair condition. The captain reported that he had not succeeded in getting his men together for a long time, that they manifested no interest in their company, and that he advised disbanding. I am not prepared to say where the fault lies, but would recommend an investigation among the members of the company, and, if the captain's report is correct and a remedy is not found, that the company be disbanded.

Company D, Smyth Rifles, Manchester, had in the armory fifty rifles, numbered, a part of which were rusty; fifty sets of accoutrements, numbered, in good condition; and forty-eight uniforms, numbered, dirty.

Company E, Sheridan Guards, Manchester, had in the armory fifty rifles, in excellent condition; fifty sets of accoutrements, numbered, in good condition; and forty-six uniforms, some of which were dirty.

Company H, Lincoln Rifles, Milford, had a new armory, suitable for squad drill, with a good room for clothing and arms, and had in the armory forty-seven rifles, in excellent condition, except three which were rusty, not numbered; forty-eight sets of accourrements in good condition; and forty-one uniforms, a few of which were dirty, all of which were neatly hung up, but not numbered.

Company I, Manchester War Veterans, had in the armory forty-seven uniforms packed in a box, as the captain reported; forty-six rifles, numbered, in good condition, except a few which were rusty; and forty-seven sets of accountrements, less one belt and bayonet scabbard, in good condition.

Company K, Wilton Light Infantry, Wilton, had in the armory fifty rifles, numbered, ten of which were rusty; and forty-eight sets of accourrements, numbered, in good condition; and no uniforms.

Company M, Nashua Light Guards, had in the armory forty-nine rifles, rusty and in bad condition, and fifty sets of accourrements and thirty-three uniforms, in good condition.

First Company of Cavalry had a new armory, large enough for company drill dismounted, with well arranged rooms for clothing and equipments; and had in the armory fortyeight sabres, numbered, in good condition, except a few needing cleaning, in neat racks; forty-eight belts, fortyeight uniforms, and fifty sets of horse-equipments, all in good condition and neatly hung up.

Lafayette Artillery, Lyndeborough, had in the armory fifty-nine muskets, in fair condition, except four which were rusty; fifty-eight sets of accoutrements; on the floor one field-piece in poor condition, and parts of twelve uniforms in good condition.

First Light Battery, Section B, Manchester, had an armory not suitable; and, from the report of the officers, it seems impossible for them to obtain one except through an appropriation with which a new one can be built, or the one now occupied altered and repaired. There were in the armory two guns and caissons, harnesses and equipments complete, with the exception of a few minor articles; and thirty-nine uniforms neatly packed in boxes, all in good condition.

SECOND REGIMENT.

Company A, Strafford Guards, had in the armory fifty rifles, in good condition, with a few exceptions; fifty sets of accoutrements and fifty uniforms, all in good condition.

Company B, Granite State Zouaves, had in the armory forty-eight rifles, rusty and in bad condition; forty-eight sets of accoutrements in good condition, and eight uniforms in fair order. This company was reported as being in loose order, and there evidently is an evil in it.

Company C, Portsmouth City Guards, had forty-five rifles in armory, rusty and in bad condition; thirty-seven sets of accoutrements, in good condition; and fifty uniforms, reported by the captain to be packed in boxes. The armory of this company is a poor one, but the captain said that negotiations were pending for a better one.

Company E, Bell Rifles, Lake Village, had a new and fine armory, suitable for squad drill, in which were fifty rifles, in racks, and fifty sets of accourrements hung up, in excellent condition; and twenty-three uniforms in boxes, in fair condition.

Company G, Laconia Rifles, Laconia, had in the armory, as the captain reported, forty-seven rifles and forty-seven sets of accourrements, packed in boxes. Uniforms out, because the moths had got into them.

Company H, Rockingham Guards, Newmarket, had in the armory fifty rifles, some in good condition and some rusty; fifty sets of accourrements in good condition; and fifty uniforms, as the captain reported, packed in a box.

Company K, Harriman Guards, Lyme, had in the armory forty-nine rifles, forty-nine sets of accourrements, and twenty-three uniforms, all in good condition.

Company L, Patterson Guards, Hanover, had in the armory thirty-nine rifles, some in good condition and some rusty; and thirty-nine sets of accoutrements and thirty-nine uniforms, all in good condition. It was reported that disaffection prevailed among some of the men, and that the organization was spiritless on that account. As was suggested to me, I am of the opinion that, if a new captain were appointed, the disaffected men discharged, and the armory placed in more commodious quarters at "Hanover Plain," the vacancies could be easily filled, and the company inspirited.

Company M, Head Rifles, Bristol, had a new and fine armory, suitable for drill purposes, and had in the armory thirty-three rifles, numbered; fifty sets of accourrements, numbered; and thirty-four uniforms, all in good condition.

Parker Guards, Lisbon, had a good armory, suitable for squad drill, and had in the armory fifty rifles, in good condition, except a few which were rusty; and forty-seven uniforms and fifty sets of accourtements, in good condition.

Newfound Lake Rifles, Bridgewater, used a small room for an armory, not fitted up, and had in the armory thirtyeight rifles, thirty-eight sets of accourrements, and thirtyeight uniforms, all in good condition.

First Light Battery, Section A, had in the armory two guns, caissons, harnesses, and equipments complete, in fair condition. They want, however, tompions and gun-covers. There were in the armory forty-four sabres and belts, and twenty-four uniforms, partly numbered, all in good condition. The harnesses are neatly hung up in the gun-house.

UNATTACHED.

Clark Guards, Manchester, had a good armory, suitable for squad drill, and had in the armory fifty rifles, numbered, in racks; fifty sets of accoutrements, not numbered; and forty-nine uniforms, not numbered, all hung up and in good condition.

The books, as far as I was able to inspect, were in good order, apparently, though not generally filled up to date of inspection.

Where the armories have not been changed, and the property has remained unnumbered since my report of last June, I have not so specified.

From reports of the captains, I learned that moths had injured the clothing extensively; and I would recommend that a method of storing it be ordered which would prevent such injury.

It is my opinion, in view of the many rusty arms and dirty uniforms above reported, that the armorers generally have not, at regular and frequent intervals, examined and cleaned the property in their charge, and that the men have not been required generally to clean their uniforms as soon as practicable after using them.

These evils, and the decline of interest exhibited in some instances, may be attributed to two causes,—lack of time spent by good officers in supervising their companies, and the incompetency of poor officers, and the want of a sufficient inducement to the men to become thorough soldiers.

The remedies which present themselves to my mind are, sufficient pay to officers and non-commissioned officers to induce them to devote the requisite time and attention to their duties; and a board of examination, before which every officer should come, which should ascertain whether he was fit for his position, and worthy of receiving the pay offered; and to require of officers and soldiers in camp and armory to conform strictly to army discipline, having offered them the inducements which I have urged in other reports.

Good officers are resigning because they CANNOT AFFORD to be officers, and good soldiers are becoming wearied because discipline is not enforced; and I think I can safely say that all good officers and soldiers in the militia support me in the declaration that, if the State will offer inducements worthy of the service, they will put out this spirit of a "holiday soldiery," and become soldiers worthy of their hire.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS L. LIVERMORE, Col. and A. I. G., N. H. V. M.

Col. Kent inspected the armory of the Lancaster Rifles, and made the following report:—

Lancaster, New-Hampshire, April 23, 1868.

General, — Acting under your commission, bearing date April 15, I have this day inspected the armory of the Lancaster Rifles, Capt. Jared I. Williams, and find there —

50 muskets, complete, in good order, in racks, and numbered; 50 sets equipments, minus one set reported stolen (the same report being made in 1867), said equipments being hung on pegs; 48 uniforms, well kept, and hung on pegs; 1 tenor drum; 1 fife,—the above articles being the property of the State. The articles here enumerated are in good condition.

The present armory is dry, but not of sufficient size for a drill-room. The lease of the premises expires June 1, and Captain Williams is negotiating for quarters which, if procured, will afford the advantages of a light, dry armory and drill-room combined.

I deem it proper to remark, as connected with the interests of the volunteer militia in this region, that a regimental organization in this Congressional District would much enhance its efficiency. There are already five companies within the district limits, and it is believed that two additional companies could easily be organized in Coös, preliminary steps to that end having already been taken. I understand the present law and the voluntary enlistments under it, I believe there is sufficient margin for two or three more companies. As yet, there are no troops in Cheshire or Sullivan Counties; and I respectfully suggest that such measures as may be deemed judicious be taken to encourage the formation of companies in the counties referred to, with a view to the organization of the Third Regiment New-Hampshire Volunteer Militia prior to the annual fall encampments. I am very confident that any official indications of a desire in this direction would meet with success, and that the action would stimulate the military spirit more than any other policy.

I am, General,

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,

HENRY O. KENT, Colonel and Acting Inspector.

Brigadier-General Natt Head, Adjutant, Inspector, and Quartermaster General, Concord, N.H.

The Grant Guards, Northwood, and Messer Rifles, New-London, were inspected by Adjutant Haines, of the First Regiment, who rendered the following report:—

Headquarters First Regt. N. H. Volunteer Militia, Concord, April 24, 1868.

Brigadier-General NATT HEAD, Adjutant, Inspector, and Quartermaster General, Concord, N.H.

GENERAL,—In obedience to your instructions of the 22d inst., I proceeded to Northwood and made the required inspection, with the following results; viz.:—

In the armory I found -

- 41 Springfield rifle muskets, in racks, and numbered.
- 43 cartridge-boxes and belts, on pegs, numbered.
- 36 bayonet scabbards, on pegs, numbered.
- 36 waist-belts and cap-pouches, numbered.
 - 1 sergeant's sword, on peg.
 - 1 musician sword, on peg.
 - 1 drum.
 - 1 pair drum-sticks.
- 35 pairs scales, in box.
- 17 frock-coats, not numbered.
- 16 pairs trousers, not numbered.
- 16 caps, not numbered.

The armory is a very good one, — dry, light, and well adapted for a drill-room, though rather small. It is the largest, however, that can be obtained.

The arms and equipments are in a very good condition, with the exception of one or two guns, which are somewhat rusty and need care.

The uniforms are soiled considerably in some cases, though perhaps in as good condition as could be expected after two years of service.

Capt. Hoitt, failing to receive your notice of this inspection, was not present; but I was politely treated by Lieut. Bean, and by him shown every facility to assist me in the performance of my duty. I called on Capt. Hoitt, who lives some two miles from the armory, and was informed by him that a part of the missing property was in the hands of members of the company, and the residue he had loaned to be used at an exhibition to be given by the Seminary. He also informed me that he proposed to turn the property over to Lieut. Bean, on Saturday next, agreeably to your order.

The company is now much broken up and demoralized, mainly for the want of a proper and efficient commander; but I am of the opinion that, when Capt. Hoitt shall have been discharged, and a new board of officers appointed and qualified, new life will be infused into its ranks, new and good men will unite themselves with it, and it will again be a good company.

I have the honor to be, General, Very respectfully, your ob't servant,

> JOHN M. HAINES, Adjt. First Regt. N. H. V. M.

Headquarters First Regt. N. H. Volunteer Militia, Concord, May 6, 1868.

Brigadier-General NATT HEAD, Adjutant and Inspector General State of New-Hampshire, Concord, N.H.

GENERAL, — In compliance with instructions from your headquarters, I have inspected the arms, armory, &c., of the Messer Rifles, and have the honor to make the following report:—

The company have an excellent armory, in which I found the following property; viz.:—

49 rifles, in racks, numbered, and in very good condition. 49 sets of equipments, on pegs, numbered, condition good.

47 uniforms, in clothes-room, on pegs, numbered, and in good condition.

1 drum, 1 fife, 1 sergeant's sword, and 2 musician's swords were also in the armory in good condition.

This company is under a high state of discipline, and is in every way efficient, and a credit to itself and the State.

Very respectfully, your ob't servant,

JOHN M. HAINES, Adjt. First Regt. N. H. M. V. Company L, Hooksett Light Infantry, Hooksett, has the use of the Town Hall for drill purposes, and also have a room fitted up expressly for arms, accourrements, and clothing.

With the exception of one rifle, the entire property is in the armory, in racks, numbered, and in good condition.

The armory of the State Capital Guards, Concord, has not been inspected, from the fact that the one formerly occupied had been given up just prior to this inspection, and the property temporarily stored in a room in Stickney's Block. This company is not composed of the best material, and is badly officered; but these evils will soon be remedied.

The Auburn Rifles, Auburn, were also obliged to vacate their armory, so that no inspection could be made; but the property is safely stored, and in good condition. This company proposes to erect an appropriate building for armory and drill purposes, as a private enterprise, and is entitled to credit for the patriotic zeal and interest manifested in this, and all other matters pertaining to good order and military discipline.

The Bedford Light Infantry, Bedford, is in good condition, and the arms, accoutrements, and clothing well kept.

In some few cases, the facts elicited by this inspection are not as satisfactory as was the case last year; but, as a whole, the condition of the public property in the possession of the several companies is, in a high degree, satisfactory. The benefits of these inspections are threefold. The officers, anticipating such an inspection, take pride in having the property in the best possible condition. The State ascertains from personal knowledge the true state of such property; and also becomes cognizant of many facts concerning the discipline and standing of companies, which otherwise would be unknown, and cause no little embarrassment, misunderstanding, and correspondence.

MAY INSPECTION.

Although the Revised Statutes provide that this inspection shall be made two weeks earlier than formerly, yet I have not been able to obtain returns from all of the companies, and consequently am obliged to omit an abstract of the same, which, were it possible, would be desirable to be given in this Report.

It now occurs on the second Tuesday, but should, as I recommended in my last report, be held on the first Tuesday; thus affording ample time in which to obtain returns make up the abstract, and submit the report of this office in season for the same to be laid before the Legislature in the early part of the session. I would therefore recommend that the first be substituted for the second Tuesday.

With one exception only, the various companies paraded on the 12th of May, in accordance with the provisions of law, and, so far as known, acquitted themselves with credit. The State Capital Guards, of this city, failed to come out, and for neglect of duty the commander will be summarily dealt with. Several companies made extensive arrangements for the occasion, and not only complied with the requirements of law, but indulged in exercises, such as target-shooting, dress parade, &c., much to the benefit of the service and the enjoyment of our citizens. especially true of the three companies at Dover (the Strafford Guards, Granite State Zouaves, and Section A, First Light Battery), and of the Parker Guards at Lisbon. former companies made such an extensive display as to render the occasion really a gala day in Dover. The Portland and the Dover Cornet Bands were employed, at the expense of the companies; and everything that could be done, regardless of expense, was done to add to the interest of the occasion and to please the public: and the citizens of Dover have every reason to be proud of these efficient companies, and of the good order everywhere manifested on the occasion.

The Parker Guards assembled at nine o'clock, A.M., and continued to drill until five o'clock, P.M. They also had the services of a band, and, before breaking ranks, voted unanimously to turn out five full days in the year, in addition to the drills required by law; which shows how much interest the men take in the service, and that it is not for the pay they receive, as pay for only two days' drill annually is allowed, and that will no more than pay their expenses, saying nothing about the time which they lose.

A radical change in tactics has been effected by the adoption of Upton's new system, which I believe will result in much good to the military service.

The following orders were received and issued relative to this matter:

Headquarters of the Army,
Adjutant-General's Office,
Washington, Aug. 1, 1867.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 73.

The following order received from the War Department is published for the information and guidance of the army:—

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington City, Aug. 1, 1867.

To insure uniformity throughout the army, all Infantry exercises and manœuvres not embraced in that system are prohibited, and those therein prescribed will be strictly observed.

By command of General GRANT.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, Concord, Nov. 26, 1867.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 9.

In pursuance with General Orders No. 73, Headquarters of the Army, Adjutant-General's Office, Washington, D.C., dated Aug. 1, 1867, the following is published for the information and guidance of the Militia of the State of New-Hampshire:—

I. The new system of Infantry Tactics prepared by Brevet Major-General Emory Upton, U. S. Army, recommended for adoption in the place of all others by a Board of officers of which Gen. Grant is President, having been approved and adopted for the instruction of the Infantry of the Army and the observance of the Militia of the United States, the same is hereby adopted by this State; and all military exercises and manœuvres not embraced in that system are prohibited, and those therein prescribed will be strictly observed, that uniformity throughout the State may be insured.

II. Copies of Casey's Infantry Tactics now in the possession of company and regimental officers will be immediately returned to this office.

By order of His Excellency,

WALTER HARRIMAN,
Governor and Commander-in-chief.
NATT HEAD,

Adjutant-General.

Copies of this new work have been obtained, and issued to those officers entitled to receive them, and their receipt taken for the same.

In the foregoing pages I have stated in brief the present condition of the militia of this State, and also given a sketch of its doings since my last report.

That the militia is essentially a State institution and must be maintained, requires but little argument. The Constitution of the United States recognizes the fact. The Articles of Confederation declare that "every State shall always keep up a well-regulated and disciplined militia"; and our own Constitution wisely declares that "a well-regulated militia is the proper, natural, and sure defence of the State." The necessity of having an organized military force within each State has ever been advocated by the greatest and best statesmen of our land; and at no time in our existence has this necessity been greater or more obvious than at the present, or than it has been for the last ten years, during which time we have had, until recently, but little more than an organization upon paper.

To this neglect of duty, on the part of the Northern States, may well be attributed the prolongation of the Great Rebellion and the consequent evils.

The efficient Adjutant-General of New York thus speaks of this matter:—

"How many of these lives might have been saved, had there existed a more perfect organization at the outset, cannot be determined; but all confess that tens of thousands of lives, and millions on millions of treasure, were uselessly lost, because our citizens had forgotten that in a great and noble sense they were also soldiers, and, thus forgetful, had despised warning, and derided the efforts of those who had attempted to secure even a scanty organization, and encourage a military zeal.

"This prolongation of the war, with all its vast and incalculable sacrifices and losses, was one lesson, apparently too sad, too mournful, too heavily burdened with remorse, to be readily forgotten; and, if forgotten, then experience is indeed worthless, and history repeats itself in errors only because a stolid world refuses to learn from the past.

"A Mohammedan fatalism would be more commendable than such disregard of a costly lesson by a nation that claims to be progressive in all the avenues that tend towards perfection, and should, above all others, appreciate and cherish the lives of its citizens."

By none is the expense and burden of the militia so severely felt as by those composing it; and to such, those who are exempt, or who do not perform such duty, owe an obligation which ought never to be ignored.

He who unites himself with a military company does so with the knowledge that the contract not only requires a large expenditure of time and money, but possibly places life and limb in jeopardy; and the sacrifices thus cheerfully made should be appreciated by those citizens who escape them.

Certain it is that they should bear the expense as cheerfully as does the soldier, and not, while enjoying the security of life and property afforded by him, demand his services as a gratuity.

The militia is the only safe insurance; and yet, while men pay with pleasure the premium required to insure life and property in stock companies, they grumble at the expense of this their only safeguard.

In suggesting these few facts upon the economy, necessity, and effectiveness of a judicious militia system, I might make reference to the policy of other governments in regard to this important arm of national defence, but I deem it unnecessary. Under one name or another, all the Continental nations have their militia; and the point revealed by reviewing their systems is, that they make a soldier of every citizen, keeping perpetually in view the right the State has to his services.

If the powers referred to, sustaining large standing armies for the ordinary purposes of government and police, have their citizens so thoroughly enrolled for duty in case of emergency, the lesson applicable to our State and nation seems irresistible. Here, government depends upon the people for stability and power; and hence the militia, which in monarchial States is secondary to the standing army, becomes with us of the first importance, as affording the support on which in time of peril the State must rely.

In fact, it is because ours is a government of the people, and for the people, that a judicious militia establishment should be encouraged. I apprehend it useless to attempt the demonstration of a fact so patent as that the existence of a well-organized militia prior to the war would have saved millions of treasure, thousands of lives, and, in all probability, would have rendered the struggle less prolonged. The Southern States had their military organizations, that sprang to arms at the first signal. The North had comparatively few troops that could be put in the field at a brief notice, and hence the advantage gained at first by the Confederate forces. The services rendered by the Sixth and Eighth Massachusetts Regiments in April, 1861, saved the nation its capital city, and proved beyond cavil the invaluable advantage of a well-organized militia.

It is not sound logic to say that, the war being over, there is no call for an active militia. If a militia was needed in 1861, there is no proof that the contingency demanding its services may not again arise. "In time of peace, prepare for war," is sound doctrine; and we are forced to admit by costly experience that unceasing vigilance alone secures national safety.

The matter of expense naturally obtrudes itself in considering this subject. It is proper that it should; for, as any system in a republic is that of the people, they should be conversant with all its details. No necessary expense is extravagant. Precaution, shaped in the form of a few thousand dollars expended for the military of the State in 1861, would have saved hundreds of thousands of dollars expended annually for five succeeding years; and a proper expense in the present era of peace may be the means of preserving that peace, or of restoring it if assailed.

Primarily every citizen owes allegiance to the State that protects him, and his exposure in the field is a part of that duty. It is not generally necessary that so extensive measures be resorted to as that all the military of the State be arrayed at once; and hence a system that comprehends all able-bodied men, while it puts on an actual military footing only so many as is consistent with economy, and so many as shall form a nucleus in time of need, around which the enrolled militia can rally, seems to meet the demands of the times, and satisfy the teachings of experience. Such a system is that in successful operation at the present time in New-Hampshire.

Several considerations of weight, in connection with our annual encampments, present themselves for consideration. First, the active militia comprises but a small fraction of the gross enrolment, and the companies are so situated as to afford a military nucleus at convenient points. The companies are at the minimum of the regulation number, and could easily be increased in time of need. The expense is not heavy, even if estimated at the outside figures; but, when we consider that no money goes out of the State, but that what is expended merely passes from the people through the treasury to the people again, affording them both recreation and valuable information, while it perpetuates a system that at any time may be of the utmost importance and save heavy expenditures, it must be admitted that the burden bears very easily, if indeed it is felt. Thus far, the present system has worked effectively and with comparatively small expense.

I would also make a few suggestions and recommendations, for your consideration, as to the government and maintenance of the militia.

As I have mentioned, no class of our citizens feel the burden of the militia as do those who compose it; and I would therefore recommend that an act be passed requiring every one subject to military duty under the laws of the State, who is not a member of some volunteer company, to pay an annual tax of one dollar, the fund so raised to be used for the support of the active militia. This military tax should be placed upon the same footing with other taxes, to be collected by the collectors of the several towns, cities, and wards, in the same manner, and at the same time, that other taxes are collected, and by them paid into the State treasury, as a commutation fund, from which the expense of the militia should be paid.

Numerous States, and those too which are usually foremost in the tramp of progression, have adopted this measure, given it a fair trial, and are well pleased with its workings and benefits.

The amount which might in this way be collected would be all-sufficient to defray the entire expense of the militia; and the burden would fall more equally and lightly upon all, as the militiaman, performing the duty at a rate of pay altogether inadequate to defray his expenses, would thus be relieved of a part of the expense, inasmuch as, under this arrangement, the amount received is not in part made up from his own purse.

I really can see no objection to such a law, and believe it would be productive of much good. No citizen who has at heart the best interest of the State, or values the protection of life and property, can object to paying the small sum of one dollar annually for the support of a military force which at all times would be ready and willing to expel foreign foes, or suppress domestic insurrection.

As says Gen. McCreary, of Pennsylvania: "If it be praiseworthy to expend money to educate the children of the State in a knowledge of the principles and blessings of a free government, it must be equally so to contribute to the support of the military arm of the country, without which no government ever did, or ever can, long endure."

I hope an act providing for this may be passed at the present session of the Legislature. I would also recommend that three dollars, at least, be allowed for horse-hire. As the law now stands, those officers obliged to furnish horses, and the cavalry, only receive one dollar and a half for the same, which will but little more than pay for the horse's keeping. Saddle-horses cost all the way from three to six dollars a day; and for an officer or cavalryman to have to perform military duty, at one dollar and a half a day, seems to be rather a serious burden.

The law provides ample pay for artillery horses, and I believe it to be an oversight only that the cavalry was not included. Justice to the soldier and credit to the State demand further legislation on this subject, and I hope that before the present Legislature adjourns there will be substituted for sections thirteen and fourteen of chapter seven of the Militia Law the following, which might be printed and pasted over the original sections with but little expense or trouble. Thus:—

- (13.) For attendance and performance of duty at the May inspection, the officers shall receive two dollars, and the non-commissioned officers and privates one dollar, and the same sum for the training required prior to the annual encampment; but no compensation shall be paid for any other company training.
- (14.) For attendance, subsistence, and performance of duty at any encampment, the officers shall receive the sum of three dollars, and non-commissioned officers and privates the sum of two dollars, per day, and transportation shall be furnished by the Quartermaster-General. For every horse required to be furnished there shall be allowed the sum of three dollars per diem.

The expense incurred by officers far exceeds the amount received, and with three dollars a day they can no more than pay their expenses.

They are required to furnish their own arms, equipments, and uniforms, necessitating a great outlay; and, aside from the varied duties required in managing the company affairs, obtaining and caring for armories, &c., they are required to furnish bonds to the Quartermaster-General, conditioned upon the faithful performance of duty, and safe keeping of the public property.

No one not connected with the militia can form an adequate idea of the care and expense devolving upon officers; and it is no more than right that they should be, in part at least, compensated for such trouble and expense.

MILITARY EDUCATION IN SCHOOLS.

I believe that the introduction of military drill and discipline into our high schools, academies, and colleges, would produce most beneficial results both to our youth and to the State.

It would not only afford them an opportunity to become acquainted with the art of war, but it would give them that physical and mental exercise which they could in no other way obtain; as it must be admitted by all that no exercise is so conducive to health as that of military drill. Massachusetts and other States are already introducing into their schools such drill, and I believe every State should encourage the practice.

If military drill could be made to take the place, in part at least, of base-ball and other athletic sports, it would be much better for our youth and for our State.

DISCIPLINE.

Discipline is the most essential feature of our militia, and should be maintained with rigor. However well calculated may be the law to render effective the militia, or however easily reduced to practice and simple in detail may be its provisions, if the officers are guilty of negligence in the discharge of their duties, or of a looseness in discipline, the unavoidable consequence of their example is a corresponding disregard of duty on the part of the soldier, and a tendency to destroy the efficiency and capacity of the militia to answer the great end for which it is designed.

The officers are the source from which should emanate such precepts and examples as will tend to promote and enhance the proficiency and discipline of the service, and no apology can be given by those entrusted with commands for any act having a contrary effect.

Although all able-bodied men (certain classes excepted) are by law liable to enrolment in the service of the State, no one is made an officer without the concurrence of his own will; and he must therefore be held to a faithful discharge of his duty, conformably to the trust reposed in him and his oath of office.

The major portion of our officers are competent and willing to perform their duties, but I believe the effectiveness of the volunteer militia would be much enhanced by your availing yourself of the authority granted by section fifteen, chapter three, of the Militia Law; thus doing away with the demoralizing practice of elections, and also by the creation of an examining board to inquire, when necessary, into the military capacity and moral fitness of officers. On the recommendation of said board, let the commission of the officer found incompetent be annulled, or let him retire by resignation. This would soon rid the service of all incompetent and useless officers. Both officers and men are too apt to think their duties and responsibilities of a trifling character, and that, when ordered out for drill or encampment, it is more for a matter of form than for any actual service, and that it is to be an opportunity for carousal, and a general good time. This is entirely wrong.

While on duty, the same discipline should be enforced and adhered to as would be required did the troops belong to the volunteer army of the United States, and no looseness or want of discipline should be tolerated.

Camp and guard duty should be performed in the same prompt, soldierly, and precise manner which characterized our veterans in the late war. Regimental and company records and files should be kept in a neat and correct style, and all business transacted in the most military and prompt manner. Returns and reports should be made with the utmost care and exactness, and, in fact, everything constituting a soldier's duty, should be done in all respects the same as if in the field.

No man should unite himself with a volunteer company for the purpose of having a social time, or with the idea that his duties are to be a pastime merely; but rather because of the duty he owes to the State, and to aid in rendering the volunteer service a credit and safeguard to our people.

Nor should any man be enlisted who is in any way, either morally or physically, disqualified to perform the duties of a true soldier, both in time of peace and time of war.

We have plenty possessing ample qualifications to fill the ranks of a much larger force than is now required by law; and the same rules should govern the enlistment of our militia force that govern that of the regular army. Care should also be taken to enlist only those who are intending to make the limits of the company or regiment their permanent residence, or at least to guard against the enlistment of persons who, in ten days, are in parts unknown. We could then boast of an efficient militia, second to that of no other State.

ANNUAL ENROLMENT.

Following will be seen the number of men liable to do military duty, as returned by the several town clerks, for 1868; also, that of 1867, and the population of the State.

The city of Concord and one or two other towns have failed to render any return, and it is therefore put in the same as last year. There appears to have been a gain of nine hundred and fifty-five since last year's report.

It will be seen, by comparing the strength of our volunteer force with the enrolments, that only about one twenty-sixth of the men subject to military duty are organized as active militia.

Annual Enrolment, April 1868 and 1867, of every ablebodied white male citizen of this State, resident therein, of the age of eighteen years, and under the age of forty-five years, not by law exempt from doing military duty; also, the population of each town, census of 1860.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Under this head I have not much report to make, except to give a statement of the public property in the possession of the State, as its duties are so closely allied to those pertaining to the Adjutant, Inspector, and Commissary General's (all of which I have to perform) that no real distinction can be made.

In almost every other State, these departments are kept distinct, and are managed by different officers; but, with us, one officer performs the duties of each, and it is therefore useless to attempt to keep the duties of the several departments separate. In everything pertaining to this department, I have practised the strictest economy, whether it be in purchasing stores, obtaining transporation, loans and favors, or in performing the labor required to be done. Other States and ours ought to-have a State armorer, whose duty it is to care for the property and keep it in repair, and is paid a living salary for his services. In shipping, receiving, repairing and cleaning arms, and caring for the three hundred thousand dollars' worth of property, I have paid the sum of one hundred and twenty dollars and eighty-three cents during the year, which certainly cannot be considered as extravagant.

During the past year, I have succeeded in gathering in and obtaining information of property to a very considerable value, as will be seen by Abstract B.

Doubtless much more is still in the hands of individuals and towns; but there seems to be a disposition to withhold all information concerning it, and consequently it is difficult to learn its whereabouts. Since the date of my last report, I have purchased, by your order, various articles of quartermaster stores and camp equipage, as will be seen by Abstract A; and it is hoped that, during the ensuing year, but few purchases will have to be made, as the militia is now very well equipped.

The tents purchased are made in a substantial manner, are of the very best material, and, with proper care, will last a great many years. If the militia is organized into three regiments, as I recommend, it is my opinion that it would be economy on the part of the State to obtain tents for each regiment, which should be issued to the regimental quartermaster, and kept at regimental headquarters. This would save the expense of transportation to and from the several encampments, which, in a few years, would amount to the cost of such property.

The quartermasters are required to give bonds, and the property would be perfectly safe in their hands.

ABSTRACTS AND RETURN.

The following abstracts represent all military property in the possession of the State at the commencement of the year; property received by purchase; property found and taken up; property issued to the volunteer militia, to public institutions, towns and individuals; property lost or destroyed and expended during the year; property now in the possession of the militia, public institutions, &c.; property remaining on hand in the storehouse at Concord; and the total amount of public property in the possession of the State. Proper returns have been received from each of the companies, excepting the State Capital Guards, Capt. H. J. Griffin, and the Manchester War Veterans. In these cases I have been obliged to make up the returns from the records of this office.

The return covers the several abstracts, and shows at a glance the amount and disposition of all public property in the possession of the State.

The property remaining on hand in storehouse, in possession of the militia, independent organizations, public institutions, &c., June 1, 1867, added to that received by abstracts A and B, makes the total amount of property to be accounted for. That issued to the militia during the year, added to that in its possession June 1, 1867, makes the total to be accounted for by the militia. The property turned in, lost, and destroyed, subtracted from the amount to be accounted for, leaves the amount now on hand by the militia. The property issued to independent organizations, &c., and that on hand June 1, 1867, makes the amount now on hand; which, with that in possession of the militia and that in the storehouse at Concord, makes the total amount of property in the possession of the State, showing a loss of so much as is reported as "lost or destroyed."

CONCLUSION.

Since I have had charge of the affairs of this department, I have studied with great care the pecuniary interests of the State, and have economized as far as possible in all expenses connected with our militia system and this office. Where a dollar could be saved to the State, I have taken no less pains to save it than I should were it a personal rather than a public transaction. In the purchase of military equipments, I have not only corresponded with various parties, but have visited them and made careful and personal inquiries at my own expense. I have spent days with parties in Boston and other places in examining the quality and prices of articles required by law to be purchased, paying my own fare and expenses. But I do not speak of this matter as in any way grumbling, but to prove that, in all my transactions with and for the State, I labor to make the expense as small as possible. During the past year I have saved to the State one thousand dollars in postage, which is referred to under the head of "Testimonials." This has put me to no little trouble and personal expense; but, while I am a servant of the people, or have in my care, so far as the duties of my office go, their interest and protection, I shall deem it not only a pleasure, but a solemn duty, to manage the affairs of this department with the strictest economy, and for their good, to the best of my ability.

And in this connection I am happy to say that, during the year, there has been obtained from the General Government, through the persistent efforts of Col. C. H. Roberts, our efficient State agent, the sum of seventeen hundred dollars on account of office expenses incurred by this department on account of the late war, the payment of which depended upon the vouchers and certificates furnished by this office.

The amount thus far obtained from the General Government, on account of office expenses incurred by this department in raising, organizing, and mustering out of troops, is eight thousand four hundred thirteen dollars and three cents.

Of the two thousand four hundred and fifty-four dollars and sixty-nine cents, shown in the Report of the State Treasurer as having been expended by this department for clerk-hire during the past year, five hundred accrued prior to 1867 in obtaining back records, and three hundred and thirty-nine dollars and ninety-nine cents has been paid for filling out soldiers' testimonials; thus reducing the current expense of the office for the past year, for clerk-hire, to one thousand six hundred and fourteen dollars and seventy cents, which, deducted from the amount recovered from the General Government on the strength of evidence furnished by the office during the year, leaves a balance of eighty-five dollars and thirty cents saved to the State; thus making the office a paying institution rather than one of expense.

In relation to the expense of the militia for the past year, as shown by the Treasurer's Report, justice demands that I make a brief explanation.

The entire amount paid to the volunteer militia for services rendered at May inspection, fall drill and encampment, for rent of armories and for miscellaneous expenses, is $19,035.17, as will be seen by deducting, from the sum total ($24,003.15), the $4,967.98 paid for military equip-These equipments are now on hand, and, so long as kept in use, will remain in good condition, and the expense of the same will not again have to be made. again, the expense of transportation to and from encampment is full one half of the amount paid for the several drills, encampments, and armory rents; which, as the law now stands, can be saved hereafter, as, instead of mileage being allowed, transportation is to be furnished by the Quartermaster-General; and I am confident that it can be done with little or no expense to the State, so that the entire expense of the militia for the ensuing year need not exceed $15,000, even though the additional pay recommended be allowed by the present Legislature, as in all conscience sake it should.

In Massachusetts there has been paid for compensation of the militia, during the past year, over $121,000.00; for rent of armories, $25,275.45; and for other military expenses, $37,373.22,—making a total of $183,648.67, aside from the militia bounty of over $80,000.00; which, when compared with similar expenses of our own State, must, I think, convince all that the cost of the militia of New-Hampshire is at a remarkably low figure. It is true that Massachusetts is a more wealthy and enterprising State than ours, and that we cannot expect to maintain such an extensive militia; but I do think that, when ours are compared with the expenses of any other State, no one has reason to complain.

As I remarked in the early part of this Report, the duties of the office during the past year have been onerous, much more so than I anticipated; and, although my clerks have labored persistently, it has been found absolutely necessary that they should work evenings, and, with but very few exceptions, have been in the office until late in the evening, and oftentimes until midnight, and this, too, without extra compensation, and without grumbling.

The correspondence of the office has been so heavy that much important work has, of necessity, been neglected, and even now some seventy-five letters are on my desk awaiting replies, which, owing to the pressure of other office business, have accumulated during the last week. On the information asked for in these letters depends upwards of two thousand dollars for bounty, back pay, and pension, and I hope in a few days to be able to answer them.

The books containing the description and full history of our volunteers, having been in daily and constant use for seven years, are rapidly assuming a sad and alarmingly worn appearance; and, unless they are copied, the records of many will soon be obliterated.

The necessity of immediately opening a new set of books is imperative; and I purpose to do so, as the clerks now in the office are conversant with the many complications, and they alone are competent to perform the task, as to their care has been left the duty of transferring the information and data received to the books; and, owing to the style and inadaptation of those first started, one must be perfectly familiar with them, or else he could not decipher them.

With this Report I conclude the military history of our State from 1623 to the present date; and for the many favors received at the hands of the people, and especially from the officers and soldiers of the late war, I desire to express my sincere thanks.

While I have had charge of this important department of our State government, my intercourse with the rank and file of our brave volunteers has been of the most pleasant nature, and all have generously aided me in my work. I am aware that some of the calls made upon them occasioned a great amount of labor; but I am happy to know that while, at the time, these calls were deemed hard, all now see their importance, and feel grateful for the privilege of aiding me in making up a correct record of the noble part taken by this State in the war of the rebellion.

The services rendered and the sacrifices made by them entitle them to the grateful remembrance of our people, and no act of appreciation should be left undone. I have ever labored to promote their interest; and, if I have been instrumental in doing them justice, and of placing upon record the tale of their noble deeds, I shall be amply repaid for my endeavors.

In closing, allow me to tender to your Excellency my grateful acknowledgments for the confidence you have at all times reposed in me, and for the kind and courteous treatment I have received at your hands.

I would also express to Lieut. John M. Haines, my chief clerk, my obligations and thanks for the earnestness and interest he has ever shown in aiding me to perfect and complete the record of our brave soldiery, and for the faithfulness and intelligence with which he has discharged his every duty. He entered the service early in 1861, shared the hardships and glory of the Third Regiment New-Hampshire Volunteers for three years; was mustered out with his regiment, August 23, 1864, and at once entered this office as clerk, since which time he has labored with untiring zeal for the good of the soldier and our people at large.

And to Mr. Charles G. Remick, too, my acknowledgments are due for the faithful manner in which he has discharged his duties since he has been connected with the office.

Hoping this Report, and the conclusion of our military history herewith published, may meet with your approbation and that of the public,

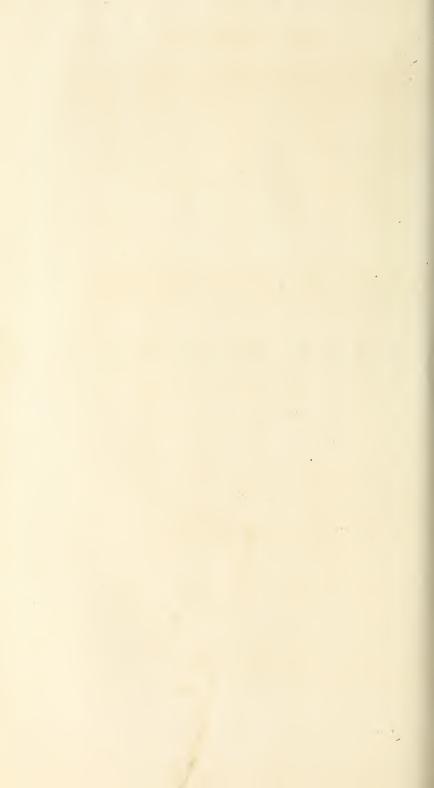

I have the honor to remain, with high regard, Your obedient servant,

NATT HEAD,

MILITARY HISTORY

OF

FROM

TO

CONCLUDED.

MILITARY HISTORY OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE:

WAR OF 1812-1815.

A series of aggressions on the part of England, long continued, without apology or redress, convinced the American government of her hostile intentions, and led it to make preparations for the coming conflict. An extra session of Congress was called in November, 1811, by President Madison, who laid before them by message the state of our foreign relations, and recommended preparation for The Congress, of like opinion with the President, enacted laws augmenting the navy, increasing the regular army, accepting the service of volunteers, detaching the State militia, and in other ways increasing the national At length, in the early part of 1812, insults having been added to injuries, by the assumed mistress of the ocean, the American Congress, convinced that there was no hope of a change of policy on the part of that haughty power, and that a resort to arms was the only alternative for maintaining our rights, sustaining the national honor, and protecting our citizens, on the 18th day of June of that year, passed an act declaring war against Great Britain.

Meantime, in anticipation of this result, active preparations for war had been carried on by our government. President Madison made requisition upon the government of New Hampshire for its quota of militia to be detached, under act of Congress of April 10, 1812; and His Excellency, John Langdon,* the Governor, issued General Orders under date of May 29, 1812, for detaching three thousand five hundred men from the militia of this State, and organizing them into companies, battalions, and regiments, the same to be armed and equipped for actual service, and in readiness to march at the shortest notice. The draft was made, and the companies, battalions, and regiments duly organized; but it being so near the close of Governor Langdon's term of office, he left the completion of the organization of the detached militia to his successor, His Excellency Governor Plumer,* who entered upon the duties of his office on Thursday, the 5th day of June, 1812.

The declaration of war found the militia of New-Hampshire in a flourishing condition, as much so as at any period of its existence. The Governor, who from his position is Commander-in-chief of the militia, though not a military man, was one of energy, patriotism, method, and great executive ability. His heart and hand were in the cause. His predecessors in that important office, without an exception under the present Constitution, had been men engaged in the Revolutionary struggle, and had learned by experience the worth of a well regulated militia, carried out the maxim of "in time of peace prepare for war," and did not believe in the more modern idea that "the militia system was a nuisance, and tended to demoralize the people."

^{*} William Plumer was a resident of Epping. He was a native of Newbury, Mass., where he was born June 25, 1759. He was a descendant of Francis Plumer, of Boston in 1634, who removed to Newbury and resided there till his death. His father, Samuel Plumer, married Mary Dole in 1755. William Plumer moved to Epping in 1768, where he ever after resided. He was a lawyer by profession, and most successful in its practice, early gaining a competency which enabled him to gratify his ambition for political life, and his taste for literature. He had received only an education at our common schools, yet few of his day had a better knowledge of English literature, or could write with more ease or force upon subjects that engrossed his mind. He often represented his adopted town in the Legislature, was a member of the Convention that framed the Constitution of our State, was Senator, and President of the same in 1810, was elected Governor of the State in convention of both branches of the Legislature in 1812, was succeeded by John Taylor Gilman in 1813, was re-elected Governor in 1816, 1817, and 1818, declined a re-election in 1819, and retired to private life. In 1820 he was a Presidential Elector. This was his last public office. For near thirty years, subsequently, he enjoyed the pursuits of literature at his residence in Epping, and died December 23, 1850, aged 91 years. Governor Plumer, in addition to his other qualifications, was a man of method and statistics, and with his administration of 1816, commenced method in our State records, particularly with those pertaining to the militia. The records of the Adjutant-General's Office commence with 1816, and, without a doubt, at the suggestion of Governor Plumer.

The Adjutant-General was a soldier of the Revolution, and had been in that position since the adoption of the Constitution, and many of the officers of the militia had been his comrades in arms in that great struggle. Such men, taught in the school of experience, brought military skill and pride, without which skill is of little avail, to the organization and completion of our military system. Such being the situation of our militia, compliance with the requisitions of the General Government was met with the greatest promptness.

The military organization of the State for 1812 was as

Timothy Upham,* John A. Harper,† Aids to His Excellency.

*Timothy Upham was of Portsmouth. He was the son of Rev. Timothy Upham, of Deerfield, where he was born in the year 1783. His mother was Hannah, the daughter of Rev. Nathaniel Gookin, of North Hampton. Timothy Upham moved to Portsmouth in 1807, and opened a store in Market street. In June, 1811, he was appointed, by Governor Langdon, one of his aids, with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He continued in business as a merchant until 1812, when, in anticipation of a war with Great Britain, he was commissioned a Major in the United States service in March of that year. In June following he was appointed to command the detachment of troops from New-Hampshire ordered to garrison Fort McClary, by Governor Plumer. In July he was commissioned as Major of the 11th U.S. Infantry. In September he joined his regiment at Plattsburg, N. Y. January 15, 1813, he was ordered to Portland as superintendent of the recruiting district of Maine. In the spring he joined his regiment, and was detailed to command a battalion which was to join Gen. Hampton's army preparing to attack Montreal. On this futile expedition, Major (now Lieutenant-Colonel) Upham fought his battalion with credit at Chrysler's Field. Just before this expedition he had been promoted to the Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the 21st Regiment. On the 14th of September, 1814, he was in command of his regiment at the "sortie of Fort Erie," and did gallant service with his regiment, in going to the rescue, by special order of Gen. Brown, of its former gallant commander, General Miller. At the close of this campaign, with impaired health, Col. Upham was ordered upon recruiting service. At the close of the war he resigned his commission, and in 1816 was appointed Collector of Customs at Portsmouth, and continued in that office for thirteen years. In 1819, May 15, he was appointed Brigadier-General of the 1st Brigade, 1st Division New-Hampshire Militia, and was promoted to Major-General of the Division May 19, 1820, upon the resignation of General Clement Storer. This office he resigned May 13, 1823. After leaving the Custom-House in 1829, he again entered upon commercial pursuits, and in 1841 was appointed Navy Agent at Portsmouth by President Harrison. He soon resigned this office, and in 1845 removed to Charlestown, Mass., following his business of a merchant in Boston. Here his success did not meet his anticipations, and, impaired in health, he retired from active business. He died at Charlestown, November 2, 1855, in the 72d year of his age.

†John A. Harper was of Meredith, and a lawyer by profession. He was Major of the 2d Battalion of the 29th Regiment in 1809-10, Lieutenant-Colonel of the same 1811-1814, aid to Gov. Langdon in 1811, aid to Gov. Plumer 1812, and Representative to Congress in 1812 and 1813.

*Gen. Richard Furber was of Farmington. He was born in Newington, September 20, 1753, and moved with his father's family, to that part of Rochester now Farmington, in 1762. In 1777 he enlisted as a soldier in the War of the Revolution, and served two years. He then returned home, and bought a piece of wild land in Rochester, which he cleared, and brought into a well cultivated farm. He early had a command in the Militia. Under the present Constitution, he was Major of the 2d Battalion in the 2d Regiment of Militia in 1796, Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant in 1800, and Brigadier-General of the 2d Brigade from 1806 to September 24, 1818, when he resigned. He died March 13, 1848, in the 95th year of his age.

† For notice of Gen. McClary, see Report for 1866, Vol. II., page 382.

‡Gen. Samuel Dinsmore was from Keene. He was born in Windham, July 1, 1766, and graduated at Harvard College in the class of 1789. Admitted to the bar, he settled in Keene, where he practiced his profession for the greater part of his life. In 1808 he represented Keene in the Legislature. In 1808 and 1809 he was Major of the 2d Battalion of the 20th Regiment of New Hampshire Militia. June 7, 1809, he was appointed Commissary-General, with the rank of Brigadier-General, which office he resigned December 7, 1816. He was a Representative in Congress in 1811 and 1812, and cast his vote for the declaration of war against Great Britain. Retiring from Congress, he devoted himself to his profession. In 1821 he was chosen to the Council of the State, and served one year. In 1823 he was appointed Judge of Probate for Cheshire County, and continued in that office until 1831, when he resigned. In 1825 he was

In 1831 he was elected Governor of the State, and was annually re-elected the two following years. ^{*}Daniel Hoit was of Sandwich, the son of Stephen Hoit, a Lieutenant in Capt. Baldwin's Company of Stark's regiment in the battle of Bunker Hill. He was born in 1778. He early entered upon military life. He was Lt. Colonel of the 19th regiment rom 1810 to 1817, Colonel of the same in 1818 and 1819, and Brigadier-General of the 2d Brigade in 1820, 21 and 22, when he resigned. He represented the town of Sandwich for several years, beginning with 1811, and again in 1830 and 1835. He was the Senator rom the 6th District in 1828, and Councilor of the 2d Councilor District in 1825 and 1826. He was a farmer and merchant, and the father of Albert G. Thus it will be seen that only one additional regiment had been formed since 1808, and in fact there had been very little alteration in the militia laws from that time.

Soon after the declaration of war, the President ordered the Secretary of War to request Governor Plumer to order into the service of the United States, upon requisition of Gen. Dearborn,* such part of the quota of the militia of this state, detached under the act of Congress of April 10, 1812, as he should deem necessary for the defense of the sea-coast of New Hampshire.

^{*}For notice of Gen. Dearborn, see Report of 1866, Vol. II., 362.

This order was made upon the representations of Governor Plumer and other prominent individuals from this State, that our sea-board and the public works in the harbor of Piscataqua were in a defenseless state and liable to attacks from the enemy.

In compliance with this order, Gen. Dearborn made a requisition upon Governor Plumer for a detachment of troops, for the defense of the sea-coast, to be stationed at Portsmouth. The requisition was complied with forthwith by His Excellency, as on the 20th of June, 1812, he ordered General Clement Storer of the first Brigade to detach two companies from his command for that purpose. Both companies were on duty by the 30th of the month; one under the command of Capt. Robert Neal, and the other that of Capt. Samuel Shackford, both gentlemen of Portsmouth.

This company entered the service July 3, and was discharged August 31, 1812, having been drafted for only thirty days' service.

Meantime, Governor Plumer ordered Brigadier-General Asa Robinson, of the 3d brigade, to detach a company of artillery from the brigade under his command for the defense of Portsmouth. The order was complied with, and the company sent forward as ordered. It was under the command of Capt. John Leonard, of Londonderry, and the draft was for six months, unless sooner discharged. It was attached to Major Bassett's Battalion, and was stationed at Jaffrey's Point, which commands Little Harbor, the western entrance to the harbor of Portsmouth, where a battery had been erected, by order of the Governor, consisting of "two nine-pounders." Capt. Leonard's Company was discharged Nov. 30, following. Its roll was thus:*

Fears for the safety of Portsmouth still increasing, the Governor ordered Brigadier-General Clement Storer, of the 1st brigade, to detach another company from his command. The draft was made, and the company placed under the command of Capt. Joseph Towle, of Epping. It entered the service Sept. 1, and was discharged November 30, 1812. It was attached to the command of Major John Bassett and its roll was as follows:—

About the same time, upon representation of the people in the north part of the state, that there was danger of pre datory excursions of the enemy from Canada, and that con traband trade was rife on that frontier, defrauding our government of its revenue and furnishing the enemy with sup plies, Governor Plumer informed the Government of thi state of things, and Gen. Dearborn made a requisition fo another company of detached militia to be stationed in tha quarter. The requisition was forthwith complied with, and through an order from Brig. Gen. John Montgomery, of the 6th brigade, a company was detached to be stationed a Stewartstown. This company was under the command of Capt. Ephraim H. Mahurin.* It entered the service July 27, 1812, and was discharged January 27, 1813, being drafted for six months. Its roll was as follows:—

*Capt. Mahurin was of Stratford. He was born in Westmoreland, March 1, 178 He received a good education in the academies of Chesterfield, N.H., and Middlebury Vt. After closing his studies at the academy he spent two years as a student at la in the office of Roger Vose of Walpole. He remained there about two years, but le before completing his studies and settled in Stratford, where he ever after remaine Of good education, a fair knowledge of law, and a practical surveyor, he soon became identified with the interests, public as well as private, of Coös County. At the breal ing out of the war he was appointed an officer of the Customs on the frontiers of Ne Hampshire and Vermont. When acting as such he was ordered with his company take post at Stewartstown, as above mentioned. About this time Samuel Hugh, Esc a prominent man of Essex County, Vt., was abducted from his home and imprisone in Montreal. Capt. Mahurin, as agent, visited Montreal and Washington, to obta Mr. Hugh's release, and accomplished the object of his mission. He repeatedly repr sented Stratford and other classed towns in the Legislature. He performed the duti of Deputy Sheriff and Sheriff for more than twenty-five years, being High Sheriff the County of Coös from 1824 to 1829. As Surveyor he was employed by the Commi sioners of New Hampshire during the "Indian Stream" difficulties in 1836, to explo the highlands betwixt the sources of the St. Francis and Connecticut rivers, to asce tain the north-western-most branch of the latter river, which duty he performed in satisfactory manner. He was Road Commissioner in 1850-1, which was his last publication office. Capt. Mahurin was a man of great energy and enterprise, and in addition to be other duties was engaged, in a greater or less degree, in mercantile pursuits through his varied life. He died at Stratford March 4, 1859, in the 80th year of his age.

John Page, jr., was the Lieut. of Capt. Mahurin's company. He was the son of Jol Page of Haverhill, and was born May 21, 1787. His father was the first white man the ever "wintered" in the town of Haverhill. John Page, jr., had no great liking a military life. Of retired habits he was the better fitted for civil life, and residing up the old homestead his delight was to be a successful farmer. He represented the tow of Haverhill in the Legislature in 1818, '19, '20, and '35. He was Register of Deeds at the County of Grafton in 1827, '29, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34, and '35. In 1835 he was elect Councilor for the Grafton District. The following year he was elected to the U. Senate to serve the unexpired term of Governor Hill, who had resigned. He was Go ernor of New Hampshire in 1839, '40, and '41. To his interest in agricultural matter is the State indebted for the Geological Survey of the State, and Dr. Jackson's Rept of the same. He was an honest, upright man, and had the respect of the people of the State to a great degree. He died Sept. 8, 1865, in the 84th year of his age.

On the 23d of July, 1812, Governor Plumer issued a General Order completing the organization of the detached militia of the state commenced by Governor Langdon by his General Order of May 29, 1812. By this order, so much of said detached militia as was from the first, second, and third brigades of the militia of this State was made to compose one brigade, to be known as the Eastern Brigade, and to be commanded by Brigadier-General Clement Storer.* So much of said detached militia as was from the fourth fifth, and sixth brigades was made to compose a second brigade to be known as the Western Brigade, and to be commanded by Brigadier-General John Montgomery.

* General Clement Storer was of Portsmouth. He was the son of Capt. John Store of Kennebunk, Me., where he was born in 1760. His mother was a sister of Dr. Clem ent March of Greenland. Clement Storer came to Portsmouth about 1781, and read Medicine with Dr. Ammi R. Cutter. After passing a year in Europe he settled at Ports mouth, and married Dorothy, a daughter of Dr. Cutter. Of fine personal appearance and urbane manners, Dr. Storer soon became a favorite of the people, not only in hi profession but in civil life. Having no great love for his profession, and his marriag placing him beyond the necessity of practising his profession, he early entered publi life, and for many years was a prominent politician. He represented his adopted town in the Legislature for several years. Was elected a Representative in Congress, in 1807 was Speaker of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, in 1812; a Member of the same, in 1813, and a Member of the U.S. Senate, 1817 to 1820, succeeding Hon Jeremiah Mason. Meantime he held the various offices in the New Hampshire Militia from Captain to Major-General, being in command of the 1st Battalion of the 1st Regi ment in 1796; Lt. Colonel Commandant of the same from 1799 to 1804; Brigadier-General of the 1st Brigade from 1804 to 1813; Major-General of the 1st Division from 1813 t 1820, when he resigned. He was also High Sheriff of the County of Rockingham from 1818 to 1824. Gen Storer was an upright, honorable man, and had the esteem in the highest degree, of the community in which he lived. He died November 21, 1830, in th 71st year of his age.

† Gen. John Montgomery was of Haverhill. He was the grandson of Thomas Mont gomery, of the County of Armagh, in Ireland. His son, John Montgomery, was born in 1730 in Armagh, emigrated to America in 1749, landing in Boston, and soon afte settling in Londonderry, where he married Mary, the daughter of Capt. George Knox stationed at Halifax, and the grand-daughter of Hugh Montgomery, whose wife was McGregor, doubtless a relative of the Rev. Mr. McGregor, the Minister of Londonderry and hence the presence of the grand-daughter in that town. John Montgomery die March 4, 1802; his son, General John Montgomery, was born in 1764, and removed to Haverhill, where he engaged largely in mercantile pursuits. He married a daughte of Jonathan and Zilpah (Adams) Ring, and their descendants are among the most re spectable citizens of the state. He engaged in early life in military affairs as an office in the 13th Regiment of New Hampshire Militia, was Major of the 2d Battalion of tha regiment from 1804 to 1806, and was Lt. Colonel Commandant of that regiment from 1806 to 1812. June 15, 1812, he was appointed by Governor Plumer Brigadier-Genera of the 6th Brigade of the New Hampshire Militia. The 23d of July, 1812, upon the com pletion of the organization of the detached militia, General Montgomery was appointed by Governor Plumer Brigadier-General of the "Western Brigade" of the detached militia of New Hampshire, and as such received the thanks of the Governor in hi Message in November, 1812. In 1814, when the brigade was ordered to Portsmouth These two brigades, thus constituted, were made to form a division, commanded by Major-General Henry Butler.* About the middle of July, for fear of an attack upon Portsmouth and the Navy Yard near, Fort McClary, on the east bank of the Piscataqua (then in Massachusetts, but now in Maine), was garrisoned by a detachment of New Hampshire Militia, under command of Major Timothy Upham of the 21st Regiment of U. S. Infantry. Major Bassett† was also for a time in command of this detachment.

These precautions were highly necessary, and probably prevented an attack upon the Navy Yard and possibly the town of Portsmouth, as British vessels were cruising off the coast and had even entered the bay of the Piscataqua. At any rate, great excitement and consternation existed among the people of Portsmouth, and upon the sea-board generally; families, women and children, and valuables of every kind were being sent into the country for safety. Rumors of the landing of the enemy and predatory attacks were of frequent occurrence, and these early measures for defense suggested and carried out by Governor Plumer allayed excite-

General Montgomery accompanied the same and rendered important service. He was appointed Major-General of the 2d Division, New Hampshire Militia, Oct. 18, 1818, and resigned in 1821. Gen. Montgomery was a man of great energy and enterprise; was largely engaged through life in mercantile pursuits, had a commanding influence in the northern section of the State, and enjoyed largely the esteem of its citizens. He died at Haverhill, February 25, 1825, aged 61 years.

*General Henry Butler was of Nottingham. He took an active part in the war of the Revolution. He was Captain of the 8th Company in Col. Thomas Bartlett's Regiment raised in 1780 for the defense of West Point. After the Revolution, upon the reorganization of the militia in this State, he took an active part in military affairs. He was Lt. Col. Commandant of the 18th Regiment in 1796, Brigadier-General of the 3d Brigade from 1799 to 1805, and Major-General of the first Division of New Hampshire Militia from 1805 to 1812. His experience as a soldier in the field led to his appointment by Governor Plumer in 1812 as Major-General of the Division of New Hampshire Detached Militia. Before called into active service as commander of the Division of Detached Militia, Gen. Butler died at Nottingham, July 20, 1813, in the 59th year of his age.

tCol. John Bassett was from Atkinson. He was born in Norton, Mass., April 14, 1762. He was a house-carpenter by trade, and settling in Atkinson soon after his maority, he followed that business through his active life. He was a man of sound udgment, and aside from minor offices in his adopted town, he represented it in the Legislature in 1807 and 1809. He was much in military life and was an excellent officer.
From a private in the militia of Atkinson, he rose through the various grades, and in 804 was Major of the 2d Battalion of the 7th Regiment of the New Hampshire Militia.
He was Lt. Col. Commandant of the same Regiment in 1812, and as such was selected by Governor Plumer to command the detachment ordered to Portsmouth, with the rank of Major. In 1819 he was appointed Colonel of the 7th Regiment, and resigned Ian. 1820. Col. Bassett died at Atkinson, Oct. 1, 1826, in the 65th year of his age.

ment and restored confidence among the people, so that they could pursue their daily avocations, if they effected no other purpose. But they accomplished another important object. Then, as now, and in all ages, there were men of sordid minds and great avarice, ready to sacrifice their country and its interests on the altars of Treason and Mammon. Treasonable and illicit intercourse was carried on with the enemy on the sea-board and upon our northern frontier. Supplies for the enemy were of frequent occurrence in these directions. Fresh provisions passed through these channels from the interior, and were exchanged for dry goods, spices, and the like, from the enemy. Thus the government was defrauded of its dues, and demoralization was becoming rife among the people. The forces thus early placed at these extreme and exposed points checked in a great measure this illicit trade and traitorous intercourse.

But while fears of war merely existed in this part of the Union, war with all its aggravated horrors raged in 1812 on our northern and western frontiers. The Indians upon the Great Lakes and the rivers tributary to the Mississippi, under the insidious influence of emissaries of the British Government residing among them, had become openly hostile to our government, and had committed many depredations upon the persons and property of our citizens upon the exposed and unprotected frontiers. As early as the spring of 1811 our government had determined to restrain the turbulent intentions of these Indians by chastisement or negotiation. Gen. Wm. H. Harrison with a force of militia and regulars was ordered to Vincennes with that intent. Lt. Colonel James Miller, of New Hampshire, lately commissioned as such, was attached at this time as Major of the 4th U.S. Infantry, under the command of Col. John P. Boyd. This regiment was stationed in the harbor of Boston and was ordered to join Gen. Harrison's army at Vincennes, by the way of Philadelphia, Pittsburg, and Newport, Ky. Col. Miller accompanied the regiment, and at Newport took command of the same, Col. Boyd having joined the army at Vincennes at the request of Gen. Harrison. The descent of the Ohio for three hundred miles, and the ascent of the Wabash for one hundred and seventy miles more, was one of exhausting labor and the severest toil. The troops were transported in boats some sixty or seventy feet in length, and these had to be hauled past snags and sawyers and over bars and rapids by main strength, the men often wading for hours in water to the middle, and the gallant Colonel sharing this toil with his soldiers. They were from the 30th of August to the 19th of September in performing this toilsome voyage from Newport to Vincennes! But steamers were then things unknown upon the western waters. Arrived at Vincennes, the regiment at once went into camp with the army and commenced drilling for Indian warfare, as the Indians were determined upon resistance under the influence of the able warrior Tecumseh and his brother "the Prophet."

On the 27th of September, the army broke camp, and marched for "the Prophet's" town, in the neighborhood of Tippecanoe,—where they arrived the 2d of October,—seventy miles from Vincennes. Here they halted and built Fort Harrison.

On the the 29th of October the army moved forward for the principal Indian town, Tippecanoe; arriving the 6th of November near the town, where it was met by messengers from the Indians desiring an amicable conference. agreement hostilities were postponed till morning, when the conference was to take place; but the Indians broke the armistice, and just before break of day on the morning of the 7th of November commenced a furious attack upon our camp. Nothing saved the army from defeat, but the precaution of sleeping in order of battle. Aroused, and running in front of the white tents, the soldiers became conspicuous marks for Indian rifles. The tents were uickly struck, and then commenced a furious struggle for he mastery. Sometimes the awful struggle was mainained hand to hand, and then again our soldiers had no nemy in sight, but only in hearing, and were obliged to end their leaden messengers at the flashes of the Indian rifles from each bush and tree. Thus the strife continued, our men suffering dreadful slaughter; but at length the savages gave way, and our army remained victors upon the field. The 4th U. S. Regiment was in the thickest of the fight, and in it were the men of New Hampshire.* Its gallant Lieut. Colonel, however, was chafing at Fort Harrison, having been struck down by the climate fever, from which he never fully recovered, but which finally ended in paralysis and death.†

In May, 1812, the gallant Fourth, still under the command of Lieut. Colonel Miller, marched to join General

*John Langdon Eastman, of Concord, was Adjutant of the 4th Regiment. He was born at the East Village in Concord, and was the son of Jonathan Eastman, Esq., being born November 31, 1786. He served with credit, was promoted to a majorship, and, when retiring from the army, settled as a farmer in Fryeburg, Me. Subsequently he removed to Concord, but after tarrying a few years, returned with his family to Fryeburg, where he died June 12, 1865, aged 78 years.

† Col. Miller was a native of Peterborough, the son of James Miller, of that town, who was of "Scotch-Irish" stock, from the North of Ireland, and was born April 25, 1776. After pursuing his studies in the Academy at Amherst, and for a time in the College at Middlebury, Vt., he entered upon the study of law in the office of James Wilson, Esq., of Peterborough, Having finished his course of study, he was admitted to the bar of his native county in 1803. He settled in the practice of the law in the neighboring town of Greenfield, where he was soon in command of the company of artillery attached to the 26th Regiment of the N. H. Militia. His military bearing, aptitude, and skill in manœuvring and drill, attracted the attention of Gen. Benjamin Pierce, and at his earnest recommendation, Capt. Miller was appointed Major of the 4th Regiment of U. S. Infantry, commanded by Col. John P. Boyd, and then stationed at Fort Independence, in the harbor of Boston. His commission bears date March 3, 1809, taking rank from the 8th of July, 1808. This regiment contained many officers and men from New Hampshire, and after Major Miller's appointment to it, many more joined the regiment from the interior of New Hampshire. At the battles of Brownstown, Chippewa, Niagara, and "the sortie on Erie," he won distinguished honors. After the battle of Niagara he was made a Brigadier. On the 3d of November, 1814, Congress presented him with a gold medal and the unanimous thanks of that body. The State of New York, through its Senate and Assembly, presented him with a sword. It is inscribed as follows:-

"Presented by his Excellency, Daniel D. Tompkins, Governor of the State of New York, pursuant to resolutions of the Senate and Assembly of the said State, to Brigadier-General Miller, as a testimony of gratitude for his services, and admiration of his gallant conduct."

Upon the close of the war, General Miller returned to his native State, and devoted himself to agricultural pursuits.

In 1819, he was appointed Governor of the Territory of Arkansas, by President Monroe, but the climate not agreeing with him, in 1823 he returned to Temple in poor health. The following year he was appointed Collector of the Port of Salem. This position he held for twenty-four years, when his health becoming still more enfeebled by paralysis, in 1849, he resigned his office of collector, and was succeeded by his youngest son. Upon his resignation, he retired to his farm in Temple, where he died July 7, 1851, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. General Miller was a Christian and a gentleman as well as a gallant soldier. He won the respect of all who knew him.

Hull at Detroit, Mich., by the way of Dayton, Ohio. Soon after his arrival preparations were made by General Hull for invading Canada. Accordingly, on the 12th of July, he crossed the Detroit river with two thousand regulars and volunteers, unmolested, and encamped on the Canada shore. The next day he issued a vaunting proclamation promising the blessings of civil and religious liberty to the people of Canada. Col. Miller under date of July 14, 1812, thus wrote as to the crossing of our army into Canada: "We remained at Detroit until Sunday morning the 12th inst., when we marched up Detroit river about a mile and a half to a convenient place to embark in boats. I, with the 4th Regiment and a regiment of militia under command of Col. Cass, from the State of Ohio, with a company of artillery under command of Capt. Dyson, crossed the river very soon. I had the command of the whole, as the General did not pass until we sent back the boats for two other regiments, which were unable to pass with us for want of craft to carry them. We expected to meet with considerable opposition in crossing the river, as the British had been at work several days throwing up a breastwork, and had been seen carrying up several pieces of cannon. With a glass we could see their soldiers and movements from our shore, but were never able to see but one or two hundred troops. They had frequently sent up parties of Indians, but the Indians dare not stay. As we were crossing the river we saw two British officers ride up very fast, opposite where we intended landing, but they went back faster than they came. They were Col. St. George, the commanding officer of Fort Malden, and one of his captains. However, we landed safely. * * * I had the honor and the gratification, as commanding officer, to plant with my own hands the first United States Standard on the pleasant bank of Detroit river, in King George's Province of Upper Canada.* We have it now waving by the gentle breeze of Heaven, and well supported by brave and true American soldiers. The common people are generally friendly disposed, and very glad to see us. When we shall march against Malden is not yet known, but I presume not for a number of days."* Hull's purpose was doubtless to attack Malden and then go against Montreal. A man of greater daring and executive ability might have done this, but Hull lost his opportunity by delay, giving General Brock opportunity to call in his savage allies, collect the Canada militia, drill and concentrate his raw troops, and cut off Hull's communication with the lakes and Ohio, from whence he received his supplies. His situation became critical, and he determined to open his communication with Ohio. For this object he detached a force of regulars, with two fieldpieces, under command of Colonel Miller. The troops began their march at five o'clock, P. M., on the 8th of August, 1812. Certain citizens of Detroit volunteered as spies, and the detachment moved off in the highest spirits. They arrived at the river Rogue, six miles below Detroit, about sunset, but did not succeed in crossing the river till ten o'clock at night. There they encamped, and at early dawn of the 9th, took up their march. They proceeded through the settlements some five miles, and entered the woods, which were occupied here and there by an Indian hut and clearing, but met with no enemy. As they passed from the woods into an open field covered with rank corn, — the clearing of a celebrated chief, Walk-in-the-water, they were fired upon by ten Indians, who were on horseback, and concealed behind the house of this chief, and one man, a volunteer from Detroit, was killed and scalped before his body could be rescued. The entire American force was quickly moved up, but the Indians had escaped. They were only a party sent out from the British fort at Brownstown to watch the movements of the Americans, and to give notice of their approach. The British fortifications were in an oak opening, at the base of some rising ground, over which the Americans were to pass. They consisted of a breastwork of trees, logs, and the like, with two flanks. Behind the breastwork, which lay directly in the path or trail, the British regulars of the Forty-First Regiment of foot were posted, two deep, under command of Major Muer, the officer long in command at Fort Malden. The flank of the enemy's right was lined with Canadian militia and Indians, under the command of Walk-in-thewater and Marpot. The militia were painted, and in Indian costume.

The left flank was lined exclusively by Indian warriors under the command of the noted Tecumseh. The British force amounted to seven hundred and fifty: two hundred regulars, a hundred militia and four hundred and fifty Indians.

At 12 M. our troops halted in an Indian clearing, its huts deserted, for refreshments. In an hour they resumed their march and had proceeded but little way when Capt. Snelling, of the advanced guard, found the enemy and commenced the attack, firing a volley and receiving a heavy fire Snelling maintained his ground till the Amerin return. ican force came up in line of battle, though within pistol shot of the British works and the bullets were falling like hail around him and his little company. As our first line advanced, it received the fire from most of the front ranks of the enemy, which was returned with spirit. The British troops with their brother savages then set up a yell, rushed from behind their works, and the fight became severe and general. In a moment silence prevailed in our ranks, broken by the discharge of a six pounder. This carried dismay among the savages; but nearly became disastrous to us, as frightened by the noise, Col. Miller's horse began to rear and plunge and finally threw his rider. All thought him killed, and the Indians ran forward to take his scalp, but were repulsed. The Colonel soon remounted and continued to cheer on his men to the encounter. A second discharge of grape from the six-pounder broke the line of the enemy and the troops fled in disorder. Tecumseh and his Indians were so sure of victory, that they were in advance of the British lines, and were driven back only at the point of the bayonet. Seeing the British troops fleeing down the river in disorder, Tecumseh and his Indians fled westerly into the wilderness. The retreating and routed enemy were hotly pursued, Tecumseh till he was lost sight of in the dense woods, and Muer to the shore of Lake Erie, where he took to his boats and returned to Malden with the greatest precipitation. Thus ended the battle of Brownstown, giving confidence to the Americans and disheartening the British and their savage allies. Caring for the dead and wounded, the little army returned to Detroit. Gen. Harrison observed, in his report, "that the detachment led by that brave officer, Colonel Miller, did not exceed three hundred and fifty men; and, it is very certain, that they defeated two hundred British regulars, one hundred and fifty militia men and four or five hundred Indians."

Gen. Hull thinking his position on the Canada shore untenable, hastily retreated across the Detroit River, soon followed by the British General Brock, with a force superior in numbers, but composed mainly of militia and Indians.

On the 14th of Aug., Gen. Brock erected his batteries opposite Detroit, and the next day commenced cannonading the town. The following day his army crossed the river, and meeting with no resistance marched directly forward to assault the fort. The Americans, in high spirits and confident of success, were prepared to meet him. What was their disappointment and chagrin to see a white flag run out from the wall, in token of submission. The army, and with it the Territory of Michigan, was surrendered to the British. The officers and soldiers were filled with indignation, and in fact the whole people of the country, at this cowardly or traitorous surrender. Upon the surrender of Detroit, Col. Miller, under date of August 27, 1812, thus wrote: "When I last wrote you my feelings were very different from what they are now. I thought things appeared prosperous and flattering; I considered we had a sufficient force to break down all opposition, and I still think had we done as we ought, we could have carried conquest to a very considerable extent. But, alas! times are now altered. We are now all prisoners of war." * * * * * * * Only one week since I, with six hundred men, completely conquered almost the whole force which they then had, but now they came and took Fort Detroit and made nearly two thousand prisoners, on Sunday the 16th inst. There being no operations going on against them below us, gave them an opportunity to reenforce. The number they brought against us is unknown, but my humble opinion is we could have defeated them without a doubt, had we attempted it, but Gen. Hull thought differently and surrendered."

Gen. Hull, in his report of the surrender, says: "Before I close this dispatch it is a duty I owe to my respectable associates in command, Colonel McArthur, Findlay, and Cass, and Lieutenant Colonel Miller, to express my obligations to them for the prompt and judicious manner they have performed their respective duties. If aught has taken place during the campaign which is honorable to the army, these officers are entitled to a large share of it. If the last act should be disapproved, no part of the censure belongs to them." *

But disaster followed disaster. An army of regulars and militia was posted at Lewiston on the northern frontier of New York. It was commanded by General Van Rensselaer of the militia of that state, and was intended for the invasion of Canada by the way of Queenstown, a fortified British fort opposite Lewiston. On the 13th of October, Gen. Van Rensselaer crossed the river and commenced the assault. At first he was successful, but the enemy being reënforced and the militia refusing to cross the river, the British gained a complete victory. Of one thousand men crossing into Canada, but very few escaped.

Gen. Van Rensselaer retired from the army. His successor, Alexander Smith, of Virginia, in command of the army of the Centre, did little else than promise to plant the American standard in Canada. On the 28th of November and the first of December, attempts were made to cross into Canada, but the troops did not come to time, councils of war were held and the attempts abandoned, and the project was a failure.

^{*}He might well say this, for all of these officers begged of him not to surrender, and told him they could hold the Fort against all the forces the enemy could bring against them. Col. Cass and Lieut. Col. Miller were particularly indignant at Hull's course.

Gen. Dearborn was in command of the army of the North, in camp at Greenbush and Plattsburg, N. Y. Little was accomplished in this quarter. A detachment marched from Plattsburg into Canada, surprised a party of British and Indians and destroyed a considerable amount of military stores.*

Thus the campaign of 1812 ended in discomfiture and disgrace. But while disaster followed our arms upon the land, upon the ocean our gallant little navy won victory upon victory, and established our superiority in naval warfare.

In the fall of 1812, Governor Plumer made a requisition upon the government for one thousand stand of arms. The requisition was answered, and on the 18th of November, the Commissary General acknowledged their reception at the Arsenal at Portsmouth.

The 18th of November the legislature assembled at Concord, and Governor Plumer by message communicated to that body his action through the preceding summer and recommended such measures for their consideration as he thought the public good demanded. His action in ordering out detachments of our militia at the request of the President was thought reprehensible by some, particularly as he ordered out the detachments without consulting the Council. The Governor in his Message went into an elaborate argument to sustain his action, closing with the following "summing up" which includes a quiet allusion to the fact of his not having consulted the Council in the matter, — "Believing" said the Governor "that the President was in fact, Commander-in-Chief of the militia of the several States, and judge of the time when it was necessary to order them out, as soon as I received requisitions from General Dearborn, without consulting with flesh and blood ^{*}Hale's History United States.

I promptly issued orders for calling into the service such portions of the detached militia as were required." He complimented Adjutant-General McClary, and Brigadier Generals Storer, Robinson, and Montgomery, for the promptness and fidelity with which they executed his orders, recommended that the Legislature should make additional provision for the detached militia, and should require the several towns to provide "gunpowder, balls and flints, to be ready for use in any emergency," and to make some other alterations in the militia laws of minor importance.

The Governor's message was received with favor by the majority of the Legislature, and this favor was pointedly shown in their answer to the message. "It is," said their answer, "the opinion of this House, that this nation had just cause of war against Great Britain, at the time our government declared it. 'The American blood which one of her officers shed in our own waters, and for which no satsfaction has been made 'is a sufficient cause for war. * * * The impressment of our citizens into her naval service is also a just cause for war. * * * The House of Representatives are not disposed to palliate any of the aggressions which he Emperor of France, that scourge of nations, has inlicted upon the United States; and we feel assured from ntimations given in the President's late message to Conress, that should the war continue longer or shorter, o alliance will be formed with that power which has proved destructive to the liberties of the people, wherever er arms have reached. We, Sir, would duly appreciate he correct conduct of your Excellency, for having promptly ssued orders for calling into the service such portions of the militia' of this State 'as were requested' by the President of the United States, agreeably to 'the laws of longress of April 10, 1812. We deem it a great unappiness that different sentiments and opposite conduct revails in any part of the Union. If the constitution does ot empower Congress to enact laws for the purpose of deaching certain portions of the militia, and to authorize the resident to call them into actual service when they are needed, and if his requisitions be not obligatory on the Governors of the several states, we are in a deplorable situation indeed, and one very important end, for which it has been thought by many the constitution was adopted, is entirely lost to the nation. It is to be lamented that different and opposing sentiments on this very important subject should have been practically brought into collision when the nation is in a state of war."

There was a large and respectable minority, however, who did not subscribe to the sentiments of this answer.

They exercised their constitutional right of entering their protest upon the Journal of the House. In this protest they say: "We dissent entirely from the general sentiments contained in the answer, in relation to the policy of the present war. * * * We do not deem this war to have been necessary, because we do not believe that 'all hopes of securing our rights by friendly negotiation had ceased.' We do not believe the war to have been expedient, because the nation was not adequately prepared for such an event. The answer echoes certain sentiments in regard to the power of the President over the militia of the State, to which we cannot assent. * * * In respect to the power of the President to call out the militia, it is, in the first place, exceedingly clear that he cannot compel them to go out of the United States, because all the occasions or events in which he is authorized to call for the militia must happen within the United States. If any citizen of this State, therefore, should be forced to bear arms beyond the limits of his country, we should deem it a gross violation of the rights secured to him, as well by the constitution of the United States as of this State. In the next place, we hold the State authorities not only at liberty, but bound, to inquire, whether that constitutional exigency has arisen which makes it their duty to place the militia of the State beyond their own control and under martial law.

* * * Is the President entitled to call forth the whole militia of the states, and put himself or his lieutenant at their head, whenever he shall say that a belief of the existence of a constitutional exigency reposes in his own breast? This is the true and real question. If the affirmative be maintained, then our militia is in effect a standing army, liable at any time to be marched to any place, and to perform any service the President may require. We do not say that such a power, if it did exist, would be observed, but we do say, that it is wholly inconsistent with the principles and spirit of the constitution to repose such a power in the hands of the Chief Magistrate."

But however opposite the opinions of the majority and minority, they differed little in principle, the principle that the State, every part of it, must be defended against the attacks of the enemy at all hazards, with all our military force if necessary; and these manifestoes of the majority and minority seem rather like the badges upon the uniforms of military men, to show to what corps of troops their wearers are attached.

Meantime the patriotism of the people was completely aroused, and, notwithstanding the heavy draft of three thousand five hundred men made from the militia of New-Hampshire, extensive enlistments in privateersmen, and in the regular army, volunteering on the part of our men went on apace.

"The District of New-Hampshire, for recruiting," was under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Moody Bedel, who had orders to recruit seven companies. His rendezvous was at Concord, where he established himself May 8, 1812. Between that date and the 16th of September, he recruited 397 men, and marched them to Burlington. These recruits were for the 11th Regiment of U. S. Infantry, of which he was Lieutenant-Colonel. It was fully organized in the winter of 1812 and 1813, and in June, 1813, the regimental and company rolls were nearly as follows. We give the rolls because the regiment was mainly from this State:

*Roll of Field and Staff Officers of the 11th U.S. Infantry.

†Isaac Clark, Colonel. Moody Bedel, Lieutenant-Colonel. Timothy Upham, Major. Newman S. Clark, Adjutant. Richard Bean, 1st Lieutenant and Quartermaster. Henry J. Blake, 2d Lieutenant and Quartermaster. Walter Sheldon, 2d Lieutenant and Paymaster. Jonathan W. Shaw, Surgeon. James Stark, Surgeon's Mate. John Gale, Surgeon's Mate. John Ladd, Surgeon's Mate. Theodore Gould, Sergeant-Major. James Goodhue, Quartermaster-Sergeant. Joseph C. Merrit, Paymaster's Assistant. ‡Royal Jackman, Chief Musician. Adin Carey, Chief Musician.

*It is much to be regretted that the rolls of the officers and soldiers of the War of 1812-15 are in such a loose and mixed state. There has been great difficulty in obtaining the rolls, and when obtained they have usually been in such shape as to require much labor and great attention in arranging them, and it is feared that even now they may not be perfect in arrangement.

† Col. Clark was from Vermont. He was one of those officers who owed their appointment to influence of friends, rather than to merit. Although he may have been a man highly qualified for the walks of civil life, he had no qualifications or love for the life of a soldier. He had neither the knowledge or skill to command his regiment on parade or in the field, or the executive ability to take charge of the same while in camp. As a consequence, his duties devolved upon his Lieutenant-Colonel and Majors. It was well for the reputation of "the bloody 11th," that in those officers he had men who knew their duty, and, knowing it, performed it. As it was, there was no regiment in the northern army that was before it in all the essentials that go to form "a fighting regiment;" tall and robust men, efficiency in drill, and cool and determined courage in action. After continuing in command of the regiment until the summer of 1813, but seldom with his regiment, Col. Clark retired from the service, and the regiment was consolidated, during the fall of 1813, with Col. Ripley's regiment from the District of Maine. Subsequently, upon the filling up of the two regiments, Col. Campbell took command of the 11th Regiment, a man who well knew his duty, and who fell near Street's Bridge at the commencement of the battle of Chippewa, July 5, 1814.

‡ Royal Jackman was of Canterbury. His skill with the drum, and astonishing dexterity with "the sticks," keeping one in the air while its fellow was continuing its duty in producing correct and excellent music, must be well recollected by many men (then boys) within the limits of the 11th and 38th regiments.

^{*}Capt. McNeil was of Hillsborough (see Vol. II. 1866, page 118). He raised a company in Hillsborough and vicinity, and marched the same to Concord. He was a powerful man, "being six feet six in his stockings," well proportioned, and weighing 250 pounds. Arrived in Concord, he could find no quarters for his men, and was forced to march them to East Concord for quarters for the night. Its company there quartered at the tavern of Isaac Emery, Esq. Emery was a Republican, and one Aaron Austin kept the opposition tavern in the same village. In the evening some of the opposition collected together, with Austin at their head, and got into an altercation with the soldiers in Emery's bar-room. From words they came to blows. At this juncture, Capt. McNeil appeared in the room, and seeing Austin busy in the melee, seized him and threw him out of an open window upon the green. The rest of the party, seeing the feat so easily performed, did not wait a repetition of it, but left the soldiers alone in their quarters.

In July, the 11th and 21st Regiments seem to have been consolidated — first under the command of Col. Smith, and the last of the year under Col. E. W. Ripley. This consolidation was necessary in consequence of the decrease of the number of men in the two regiments from death, disease, desertion, and other causes; and accounts, probably, for the decrease of the number of companies. Consolidated, the following companies seem to have been, for a time at least, all that constituted the regiment:

Note. In making this Muster Roll I have availed myself of all the information within my reach, and errors may be discovered not apparent to me, my means of acquiring accurate knowledge of the state of the company being very circumscribed, in consequence of all the company's books and papers being withheld from me by the former commander of it.

A portion of the 11th Regiment was recruited by officers of other regiments; thus, Lieut. Jonathan Eastman of Concord, attached to the 21st Regiment, recruited certain soldiers for the 11th, as appears by the following Roll:

ROLL OF A DETACHMENT OF LIEUT. JONATHAN EASTMAN'S COMPANY.

NAMES.	When enlisted.	For what time.	Remarks.
*Jonathan Eastman, 1st Lt. Josiah Bartlett, 2d Lieut. Joseph Low. Ensign, James Goodhue, Sergeant, Wm. Mitchell. Q. M. Sergt. Fearad La Farge, Musr. Benomi Potter, Private,	May 26 June 11 May 25	5 years ''

In November 1812, eleven companies of volunteers were nearly completed in our State, and some of them at the rendezvous at Concord. They were enlisted for a year.

On the 28th of that month, agreeable to notice in the N. H. Patriot, the "First Regiment of New Hampshire Volunteers" was organized at Concord, by the choice of the following officers, viz.:

Aquila Davis† of Warner, Colonel.

*Jonathan Eastman, Jr., born Nov. 14, 1781, at East Concord, was the son of Jonathan Eastman, Sen., of that village, and the great grandson of Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, the first settler of Concord. He was appointed Lieutenant, March 12, 1812, and Paymaster of Col. E. W. Ripley's Regiment, (the 21st U. S. Infantry,) raised in Maine and New-Hampshire, July 23, 1812. He was appointed Captain, July, 1813, of the 21st Regiment, then commanded by Col. James Miller. Capt. Eastman being an exact accountant was usually upon detached service connected with the Paymaster's department. After the close of the war he settled in his native village, following the vocation of farmer and surveyor, in which capacity he spent much time in Maine and in the "Indian Stream Territory," of which he was one of the proprietors. Capt. Eastman was a man of genial habits, much general information, and a valued citizen. He died at Concord, March 23, 1867, in the 86th year of his age.

† Col. Davis was from Warner, a well-known mill-owner and lumberman. He was born in Amesbury, Mass., Feb. 8, 1761, and moved to Warner (then called New Amesbury), at an early period of the settlement of the town.

He was Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of the 30th Regiment from 1799 to 1807, and Brigadier-General of the 4th Brigade from 1807 to 1809. In 1812, General Davis raised the 1st Regiment of N. H. Volunteers enlisted for one year, and was chosen and commissioned its Colonel. The law for raising volunteers having been repealed, January 29, 1813, by Congress, the 1st N. H. Regiment of Volunteers was mostly transferred to, and formed, the 45th Regiment U. S. Infantry, and Colonel Davis was commissioned its Lieut.-Colonel. It is related of Colonel Davis that while stationed or an Island, in Lake Champlain, he mounted a battery of huge guns, and kept the British at a respectful distance from the shore by his formidable battery. The chagrin

John Carter* of Concord, Lieutenant-Colonel. Wm. Bradford of Mont Vernon, 1st Major. Zabez Smith of Salisbury, 2d Major. Joseph Low of Amherst, Adjutant.

The officers thus chosen were duly commissioned, except Joseph Low, who declined, but accepted the office of Quartermaster of the regiment, and James Minot was commissioned as Adjutant.

The regiment was ordered into camp the first of February, 1813, and early in the spring marched to Burlington.

FIELD AND STAFF OFFICERS OF THE 1ST N. H. REGIMENT OF VOLUNTEERS.

Aquila Davis, Colonel.

John Carter, Lieutenant-Colonel.

William Bradford, Major.

James Minot, 1st Lieutenant, and Adjutant.

Joseph Low, 2d Lieutenant, and Quartermaster.

Henry Lyman, Acting Surgeon's Mate.

John Trevitt, Acting Surgeon's Mate.

Timothy D. Abbott, Sergeant Major.

Nicholas G. Bean, Quartermaster Sergeant.

Thomas Bailey, Drum Major.

Nehemiah Osgood, Fife Major.

of the British officers was not small, when, too late to profit by the knowledge, they discovered that the Yankee in command had exercised his mechanical skill, and had improvised a battery of huge guns from pine logs, hewn, fashioned, and painted in mitation of "the real article!" Upon the return of peace, General Davis retired to his mills, and spent his days in his usual avocation. He was a man of sound judgment and great energy and enterprise. He died Feb. 27, 1835, while on a journey to Sharon, Me., aged 74 years.

*Lieut-Colonel John Carter was a native of Concord, the son of David Carter, and was born in 1759. He was a soldier of the Revolution, having served in Captain Benj. Emery's company, Colonel Baldwin's regiment. He was Captain of the 8th Company of Infantry in the 11th Regiment in 1806.

He raised a company in Concord and vicinity, and was chosen Lieut.-Colonel of the First Regiment of Volunteers from New Hampshire, by the members thereof, and duly commissioned as such by the President. Colonel Carter was a man of great energy and enterprise, and an extensive farmer. He died Nov. 7, 1847, in the 89th year of his age.

It will be seen by the above, and some of the succeeding rolls, that the date of enlistment, and term of service, are not given—from the fact that they are bi-monthly pay rolls, and do not contain the desired information, but simply the commencement and ending of pay due on that muster. The men were accepted and mustered into service, however, by Lieutenant-Colonel John Darrington, at some earlier date, and it is to be regretted that the original muster-in-rolls are not to be found.

Meantime, January 29, 1813, Congress had repealed the "Volunteer Act," under which the regiment had been raised, and it was literally disbanded. But the soldiers had been enlisted for the term of one year, and were held. The same fate attended other regiments, among them one from Maine under Col. Denny McCobb, and the result was, that many of the volunteers enlisted in the regular service, while the remnants of the two regiments were consolidated, and formed "the 45th U. S. Regiment;" Col. McCobb of the volunteer regiment from Maine, being commissioned as Colonel of the new regiment, and Col. Davis of the volunteer regiment from New Hampshire, as its Lieutenant-Colonel. The field and staff was as follows:

FIELD AND STAFF OFFICERS OF THE 45TH REGIMENT.

Denny McCobb,* Colonel.
Aquila Davis, Lieutenant-Colonel.
H. B. Breevoort, 1st Major.
Daniel Baker, 2d Major.
Joseph Low, Paymaster.
Daniel G. Kelley, Sergeant-Major.

*Colonel Denny McCobb was from the District of Maine, and had command of a regiment of volunteers from that District, raised under the Volunteer Act of Congress, in 1812. When that regiment was broken up by the repeal of that act, he was appointed to the command of the new regiment, or 45th U.S. Infantry, formed by consolidating the Maine and New Hampshire volunteer regiments, as seen above. After the return of peace, Colonel McCobb settled in Maine, and as late as January, 1841, was the Collector of Customs for the District of Waldeboro, Me.

The above roll is a detachment of recruits mustered into service at Portland, Me., by Col. McCobb, and very many of the names appear on preceding rolls, but since all do tot, it is deemed advisable to insert the entire roll.

At the expiration of the term of service of the "or year's men," or the soldiers from the "1st N. H. regimer of volunteers," and those from the regiment of volunteer from the "District of Maine," various officers from the 45th were sent into New-Hampshire to fill up the regiment by recruits. The regiment was filled in a short time through the efforts of Paymaster Low, who had been detailed for that service, and early in the spring of 1814, we at Burlington for service.

On the first of December, 1812, there being less fear of an attack upon Portsmouth at this season of the year, the detached troops at Forts McClary and Constitution under Major Bassett were discharged.

In conformity to the suggestion of the Governor, the Legislature, Dec. 22, 1812, passed an act establishing the pay of men detached, or to be detached, including the pay from the General Government at the following rates:

Sergeant Major, $13 per month.
Quartermaster Sergeant, $13 per month.
Principal Musician, $12 per month.
Sergeant, $12 per month.
Corporal, $11 per month.
Private, $10 per month.

And it was also provided that the towns that had paid or should pay, their detached soldiers extra pay to the amount paid by the General Government, should be refunded by the State to the amount per month for each soldier as specified above.

As before stated,* a law was passed at this session for organizing a "Voluntary Corps of Infantry," to be composed of such men as were not liable by law to do militar duty. This corps was subject only to be ordered out by the Captain-General, except in case of an invasion, when the were to be subject to the orders of the commander then it the field. Companies were organized under this law it many of the large towns, but they were not called int service.

^{*}See Adjutant-General's Report for 1866, Vol. II, p. 393.

The time of service of Capt. Mahurin's company, stationed at Stewartstown, expiring with January, 1813, Gen. Montgomery of the "Western Brigade," was ordered by the Governor to detach another company to occupy that post. In obedience to that order, Gen. Montgomery ordered Capt. Edmund Freeman, of Lebanon, to march for that post with a detachment. Capt. Freeman received his orders, March 11, 1813, and the roll of his company was as follows:

In the spring of 1813, great alarm existed among the people of Portsmouth, and April 20, 1813, Gov. Plume ordered another detachment for the defense of Portsmouth. This was a company of "Sea Fencibles," under comman of Capt. Wm. Marshall, of the 35th Regiment. This company was stationed at Little Harbor, and its roll was a follows:

But the fears of the people were not allayed, as British cruisers still hovered continually upon the coast; and May 20, 1813, a town meeting was held in Portsmouth, at which it was voted, after much discussion, to instruct their Representatives to lay before the Legislature "the exposed situation of that town and harbor; and endeavor to obtain such assistance from the Legislature, as they in their wisdom might think expedient."*

Meantime active preparations for defense of Portsmouth and the sea-board were taken by Governor Plumer. By his direction, and in obedience to a resolve of the Legislature, Adjutant-General McClary purchased pieces of cannon for each of the artillery companies in the 15th, 31st, 34th and 35th regiments; and removed quantities of ammunition from Exeter to Portsmouth for distribution among the troops, and provided munitions of war, and magazines, as required by the resolution of the Legislature.

At the annual election, in March 1813, Ex-Governor John

*At this meeting, Mr. Daniel Webster made a marked speech. He remarked, that "he had heard the discussion with interest; but talk was not what the crisis demanded. The forts near the town want repairs, want men to defend them when repaired. The government of the United States and the State government have been applied to for men to repair and defend these forts; but we know not that either will attend to our application, but one thing we do know," said Mr. Webster, "the crisis demands labor, and we can labor, we can repair the forts, and then we know another thing, we can defend them." "Now," continued Mr. Webster, "I propose that every man who wants these forts repaired, wants these forts, aye, the town of Portsmouth, defended—appear on the parade to-morrow morning with pick-axe, spade, and shovel, and that they go to the Islands, and repair the forts." The meeting adjourned with a hurra for the pick-axe, spade, and shovel. The next morning hundreds of the patriotic men of Portsmouth gathered upon the parade, and with Mr. Webster, duly armed with his shovel, proceeded to the forts, commenced their work, and in two or three days the forts were repaired.

The writer would here state another fact within his knowledge. It has often been said, that Mr. Webster was in favor of and supported the Hartford Convention. It was not so. It was mainly through his influence that the Federal State Convention declined sending delegates to that convention. After the refusal to send State delegates to that convention, it was proposed to send delegates from the several counties. Judge Farrar, of New Ipswich, and Edmund Parker. Charles H. Atherton, and Robert Read, Esquires, of Amherst, were of the committee for the County of Hillsborough, and had the subject under consideration.

Judge Farrar wrote Mr. Webster for the committee, asking his advice in the matter. Mr. Webster wrote them in answer, that, in his opinion, it was inexpedient for the State or the counties to send delegates to the convention about to assemble at Hartford. That letter was in the hands of the Hon. Charles H. Atherton at the time of his death. Mr. Webster had his opinion as to the policy of the administration, but that opinion differing from that of the supporters of it, did not constitute a difference of principle. He was a true patriot, ready to act when danger threatened.

Taylor Gilman* was elected Governor for the ensuing political year.

Gen. Michael McClary, the Adjutant-General of the State since 1792, resigned his commission, and May 18, 1813, Col. Benjamin Butler was appointed his successor.

On Thursday the 5th day of June, 1813, Governor Gilman was duly inaugurated.

The minority of 1812, had now become the majority. Governor Gilman was a patriot and soldier of the Revolution, and conservative in his views as to the war, although the standard bearer of the opposition to the war. No one could find fault with his message. He said in relation to the war: "The consequences of the war in which our country is engaged cannot be foreseen, and there are divers opinions respecting the necessity of the war, as well as the causes which induced our government to make the declaration. Under such circumstances, it may be considered not only as the right, but the duty, of the representatives of the people to inquire into the causes which have brought so great a calamity on our country. We are bound to support our system of national government and the laws emanating therefrom; but this by no means hinders the right of free inquiry, or the full expression of sentiments upon the measures of government.

Indeed, such inquiry may be a duty, not only as we are a member of the Union, but as respects rights exclusively appertaining to the State.

It is not doubted, that we have had great causes of complaint against both Great Britain and France, and perhaps at some former period much greater against one or both of those governments, than existed against the British at the time of the declaration of war. * * * *. While we demand redress for injuries received from others, we should suitably regard their just expectations from us; and may we not, without being liable to the charge of justifying the conduct of Great Britain, inquire whether they have no just cause of complaint against our government? Whether our professions of strict and impartial neutrality, in the important contest between Great Britain and France had been constantly maintained? And whether there had not been a manifest difference in our resentments, and in the language and manner of seeking redress for wrongs, exhibiting an unwarrantable partiality for France? Whatever inquiries may be made, or opinions given, let us exercise candor and moderation; and constantly bear in mind, that those who differ from us in opinion possess equal rights."

^{*} For notice of Governor Gilman, see Adjt. General's Report for 1866, Vol. II, p. 381.

The answer of the House was a mere echo of the Governor's speech, and the minority entered no protest to the same.

The instructions of the town of Portsmouth were brought before the House early in the session, and a committee was appointed to take into consideration the situation of our maritime frontier, and report such a general system of defense as might be deemed proper. The committee after examination reported that there was no adequate defense of our maritime frontier.

They said, "Forts Constitution and McClary, at the entrance of Portsmouth harbor, are considered when fully manned, capable of resisting with effect, any probable force that may be sent against them. But at this time one hundred and twenty men compose the whole force of both garrisons, and it is not yet ascertained that the General Government will add to that force. Fort McClary being within the jurisdiction of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, it may be presumed an additional force will be provided by that government, if requested by us. The further defense provided by the United States consists of several gunboats manned by seventy-two seamen who are considered as a guard for the Navy Yard. Six 18 and 24 pounders mounted on travelling carriages, are deposited in the United States Gun-House at Portsmouth, with one thousand stand of arms exclusive of those belonging to the State. A guard of two officers and thirty non-commissioned officers and privates was ordered by Governor Plumer on the 20th of May last, and is now stationed at Little Harbor. Two nine-pounders were ordered to be mounted for the defense of that post, which order has been complied with. Eight six-pounders belonging to the State are also fit for service. It appears to the Committee that a sufficiency of the munitions of war are in readiness for the defense of the sea-coast of this State, excepting cartouch boxes, bayonet sheaths and belts, and an additional number of cartridges for the artillery and small arms."

Acting upon the information reported by the committee, the Legislature authorized the Governor, in case of invasion or apprehension thereof, to call forth such portions of the militia of the State as might be necessary to prevent such invasion and promptly to repel it. He was also authorized in such case, to distribute the arms and ammunition to such persons and in such manner as he should think proper, provided such arms were returned when the militia were disbanded.

In August, the people of Portsmouth became apprehensive of an attack upon the town, and application was made to the Governor for powder, balls, &c. Accordingly on the 20th of August the Governor "directed the Commissary-General to receive at Exeter and remove to Portsmouth two hundred and fifty pounds of powder and one thousand flints; and in case of any actual invasion of this State, or any well grounded apprehension thereof, to deliver the same, together with a sufficient quantity of musket balls for the powder to the order of General Storer, or the selectmen of the town of Portsmouth."

The 2d of November 1813, the Legislature authorized the Governor to "cause to be paid to the officers, non-commissioned officers and privates, composing the military watch or guard stationed near Little Harbor * * * such pay and rations as are allowed to the officers and soldiers in the service of the United States."

Capt. William Marshall's company of Sea Fencibles was at this time stationed at Little Harbor. Their time of six months' service expired the 27th of November. They were discharged at that time. On the same day, Capt. Marshall with fourteen of the detached Sea Fencibles, by order of the Governor, was continued as a guard at Little Harbor. They were discharged Dec. 31, 1813. It does not appear that any other detached troops from the State were on duty at this time. The roll of this detached company, or guard, under Capt. Marshall, was as follows:

Meantime the campaign of this year had been prosecuted with varied fortune. It commenced with disaster. To recover Michigan, so disgracefully lost, Gen. Harrison attempted a winter campaign. Gen. Winchester of his advance marched to Frenchtown, upon the river Raisin, a few miles below Detroit, and drove out of the town and neighborhood some three hundred British and Indians. The next day, at daybreak, while the American forces were encamped in the village and the open fields, they were attacked by a large force of British and Indians from the neighboring fort at Malden, and after a severe fight were forced to surrender—not without promise of protection. The next day, however, the wounded prisoners were attacked by the Indians and most inhumanly slaughtered. Six hundred prisoners were in the hands of the British, and three hundred fell in battle, or were murdered by the savages.

To avenge this massacre, other volunteers rushed to the assistance of Harrison. He had built Fort Meigs on the Miami River. On the first of May, it was invested by Col. Proctor from Malden, with a large force of Indians and British. Gen. Clay, at the head of twelve hundred Kentuckians, came to its relief, and drove the besiegers from the works. The Kentuckians, careless and confident of victory, were soon attacked by the rallied enemy and put to flight. Two or three hundred succeeded in getting into the fort; about three hundred were killed or taken prisoners, and the rest fled to the nearest settlements. Those in the fort made a stout resistance, the Indians deserted, the British became disheartened, and on the 9th of May made a precipitate retreat.

On the northern frontier, Gen. Dearborn was in command at Sackett's Harbor. It was determined to attack York in Upper Canada. On the 25th of April, seventeen hundred troops were conveyed across the lake by Commodore Chauncey's fleet. On the 27th, Gen. Pike landed, although met at the water's edge by a superior force, drove the enemy into their fortifications - and, in spite of the enemy's desperate fighting, and the explosion of their magazine, by which we suffered great loss in killed and wounded, the Americans carried the town and were completely victorious. Of the British, one hundred were killed, near three hundred wounded, and as many taken prisoners. Of the Americans, three hundred and twenty were killed and wounded, mainly by the terrific explosion. Among the mortally wounded was the gallant Gen. Pike.

Landing their wounded and prisoners at Sackett's Harbor, the combined forces went against Fort George at the upper end of the lake.

Fort George was held by Gen. Vincent with a considerable force of regulars, militia, and Indians. In forwarding the operations on this frontier, it was determined to take it.

Accordingly orders were issued on the 25th and 26th of May, 1813, to that effect. Gen. Boyd's order was thus:

"BRIGADE HEADQUARTERS, CAMP FOUR-MILE CREEK, May 26, 1813.

"Conformably to the general order of the 25th and 26th instant, the First Brigade will embark at 3 o'clock to-morrow morning. The several regiments will hold themselves in readiness accordingly. The boats of the brigade will form in three lines, succeeding Col. Scott's advance party. The 15th Regiment formed in column of battalion, the right in front, will precede; the 6th and 16th will successively follow in the same order. Col. McClure's volunteers will flank the right of the brigade, and move accordingly. Four pieces of the light artillery will move in the rear of the 15th Regiment, and four in the rear of the 16th Regiment, the first four to form on the right of the brigade. The troops will land in column, and form immediately in order of battle, Col. Miller, of the 6th, on the right, Major King, of the 15th, in the centre, and Col. Pierce, of the 16th, on the left. Col. McClure's volunteers on the right flank of the brigade.

JOHN P. BOYD,

Brig. General, Commanding 1st Brigade."

On the morning of the 27th, the attack was made and the Fort taken.

Gen. Miller on the next day thus wrote of the affair:

"FORT GEORGE, May 28, 1813.

"Yesterday morning at daybreak, we embarked from our shore to attack this place. I commanding the 6th Regiment, it belonged to me to command the right wing of the First Brigade; of course it fell to my lot to support the front guard in landing, to land immediately after them, and support the landing with them, against all the enemy's force until the others had landed to assist us. When we had arrived within thirty rods of the shore, crowded thirty-four in a boat, the enemy commenced an astonishing torrent of shot upon us. As we were in no situation to return the fire, we were obliged to force the shore in the face of their fire, and by the protection of God, we gained the shore and put the enemy to flight in a short time afterward; our loss in killed and wounded not one-fourth part so much as the British. Our loss in killed, in the whole, was but seventeen. My regiment, consisting of three hundred, had seven killed and thirteen wounded. The number of wounded of the others was small. We have completely succeeded in taking Fort George; the American standard is now planted in it. We killed seventy-five of the enemy, wounded one hundred and sixty, and took one hundred and twenty prisoners, and an immense quantity of public stores. The battle continued about three hours. All is in good trim for conquest here."

After this severe contest, the British abandoned the fort and retreated. Generals Winder and Chandler followed in pursuit, and on the evening of June 5th, encamped at Stony Creek, near the enemy, who fell upon them in the night. It was so dark that the officers could not tell their own troops. Both Winchester and Chandler got into the midst of the British troops by mistake, and the enemy, satisfied with the capture of the two generals and a few other prisoners, made good their retreat. The American troops returned to Fort George.

Another disaster soon followed. A body of the enemy had taken a position at Beaver Dams. Lieut. Colonel Boerstler was sent with five hundred men to dislodge them. He was surrounded, and his whole detachment taken prisoners.

On the 27th of May, the British squadron appeared before Sackett's Harbor. Gen. Brown of the militia was in command, and about one thousand, mainly raw troops, were collected for the defense of the town. On the 29th the British force landed one thousand strong of regulars. Gen. Brown had thrown up slight breastworks. Upon the enemy's advance upon this, the militia fled, and the regular troops were forced to retire, but they took to the houses on the road and from them kept up a galling fire, until the British troops halted, fell back, and then hastily retreated on board their vessels, leaving behind their wounded.

Meantime a British squadron was upon the Atlantic coast, spreading alarm and making their predatory attacks. Lewiston, in Delaware, was bombarded, and the inhabitants along the Chesapeake Bay suffered from the brutal warfare of Admiral Cockburne. Frenchtown, Havre-de-Grace, Fredericktown and Georgetown were destroyed, and Hampton was given to pillage, and its inhabitants to brutal outrages in revenge for the spirited defense of its small garrison.

On the first of August, 1813, a large force of British and Indians invested Fort Stephenson, on the river Sandusky. The garrison numbered one hundred and sixty men under Maj. Croghan, who had seen but twenty-one years. This little force, in a fort only of pickets and a ditch, effectually resisted the assaults of the enemy, consisting of five hundred British and eight hundred Indians. After two days of cannonading, they attempted to carry the fort by assault, but were repulsed with great slaughter. Their commander being killed, and many of his men either killed or wounded, the enemy made a hasty retreat to Malden.

On Lake Erie, the gallant Perry with a fleet mounting fifty-four guns, on the 10th of September, met the British fleet under the command of Capt. Barclay, mounting sixty-three guns, and in a splendid victory after a hard fought battle, gave to our country that laconic example of epistolary writing, "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Upon news of this victory, Gen. Harrison hastened to attack Malden, but the infamous Proctor had anticipated the movement, abandoned that post and retreated up the river. Harrison leaving a small force at Malden, made hot pursuit of the British army, which passing Detroit, had gone up the river Thames as far as the Moravian villages in Canada West, where Harrison overtook them in strong position, and after a short but severe conflict, killed or captured almost the entire British force. In this battle, the noted Indian warrior, Tecumseh, was killed in a hand-to-hand encounter with Col. Richard M. Johnson, of the Kentucky mounted riflemen.

By this decisive victory, Detroit and all the posts surrendered by Gen. Hull were regained by the Americans. Col. Lewis Cass* was left in command of the post at Detroit, ^{*}Lewis Cass was a son of Captain Jonathan Cass, of Exeter, and was born in Exeter, October 9, 1782. He obtained a substantial education at Phillip's Academy in his native town, read law, and at an early age removed to Ohio. In 1806 he was a member of the Ohio Legislature. In 1807 he was appointed Marshal of the State of Ohio by President Jefferson. In 1812 he was elected colonel of a regiment raised in Ohio, and which was attached to General Hull's army at Detroit. Before General Hull crossed the Detroit river with his army, Colonel Cass, with his regiment, and Lieut. Colonel Miller, with adetachment of the 4th U. S. Infantry, crossed that river, and first raised the American flag upon British soil. Shortly after they were recalled by Gen. Hull and recrossed to the American shore unmolested. He and his regiment were surrendered to the British soon after, against the decided remonstrances of Colonel Cass and his friend Lieut.-Colonel Miller, who ever contended that Detroit and its defenses might have been held against any force General Brock could have brought against them. March 12, 1813, Colonel Cass was appointed a Brigadier-General, and was in command of the post at and Gen. Harrison with a part of the regular troops retired to Buffalo.

In the fall of 1813, Gen. Wilkinson at the head of the "Army of the Centre" was ordered to descend the St. Lawrence and attack Montreal. The army numbered seven thousand men, but was so dilatory in its movements that the flotilla to transport them did not move until the 5th of November. They were opposed at every convenient point by parties of the enemy, and Gen. Brown with a large force was landed, to march down the bank ahead of the flotilla, to clear the passage. At a point upon "the long rapids" about thirty miles below Ogdensburg, at a place then and now known as "Chrystler's Field," on the 11th of November, Gen. Brown met in position, a British force equal to his own. An action followed, fought with great spirit and bravery, but indecisive, as both claimed the victory. The Americans lost three hundred and forty men in killed and wounded; but they drove the enemy from his position and the flotilla passed down unmolested. In this action, Gen. Timothy Upham of New-Hampshire distinguished himself as a brave officer. He had joined General Wilkinson at Sackett's Harbor with a battalion of five hundred picked men from his regiment. He was assigned the command of one division of the boats in passing down the St. Lawrence, "and lost some of his men from the severe cannonade poured upon them while passing the enemy's batteries at Fort Prescott." At Cornwall below "the rapids," the enemy showed themselves in rear and front. The troops debarked and at "Chrystler's Field," the enemy commenced

Detroit. In October, 1813, he was appointed Governor of Michigan Territory by President Madison. In 1829 General Jackson called him to his cabinet as Secretary of War, which position he held until he was appointed by him as Minister to France, in 1836. This position he held with much credit until 1843, when he resigned. In January 1845, he was elected to the U. S. Senate from Michigan. In May 1848, he was nominated for the presidency, and resigned his seat in the Senate. He was re-elected to the Senate in January, 1851. March 5, 1857, he was appointed Secretary of State by President Buchanan. This office he resigned the first of January, 1861, and retired to private life. He died at Detroit June 15, 1866, in the 74th year of his age.

General Cass was a brave soldier, an accomplished gentlemen, a true patriot and an able statesman,—a son of New-Hampshire, who has reflected much credit upon his native State.

a severe fire upon our troops. Their ammunition had not been landed, and Col. Upham was ordered with his battalion to hold the enemy in check, until the ammunition should come up. This he did with the greatest gallantry for an hour, amid a perfect storm of shot.

Wilkinson's army arrived the next day at St. Regis, where Gen. Hampton from Plattsburg had been ordered to meet him with the troops under his command, but where, to his great disappointment and dismay, he learned that Hampton had decided not to join him, and the campaign was abandoned.

At the South, our war with the Seminoles and Creeks, stirred up by the eloquence of Tecumseh, though fierce and bloody, was completely successful, as the victories of Tallushatchie, Talladega and Tohopeka won by Jackson and his gallant Tennessee militia abundantly testify.

Again on the water, our misfortunes by land, were relieved by the noble bearing of our gallant navy, and the names of Lawrence, Burrows, Perry, Rogers, and Porter were placed high on the list of naval heroes.

British ships of war remained off the coast of the United States during the winter of 1813 and 1814, their rendezvous being at the Bermuda Islands, and Gardner's Bay, at the east end of Long Island; while the coast of eastern New England was reached by an easy run of their cruisers from Halifax, their naval depot upon the coast of North America. During the winter there had been little fear of an attack upon the sea-port towns, and in some instances the regular troops had been withdrawn from the fortifications.

Early in March, 1814, Commodore Hull, who commanded at the navy yard near Portsmouth, addressed a letter to Governor Gilman, calling his attention to the defenseless state of the harbor at Portsmouth; and suggesting that an attack might soon be expected, as the British commander of the naval force in the neighborhood of Portsmouth would not be inactive while our army was about to enter Canada.

On the 8th of April a party of two hundred British in six boats quietly entered the Connecticut, ascended the river several miles, and destroyed some twenty vessels collected in the river for safety, before any adequate force could be raised to oppose them. This attack created the greatest alarm along the New-England coast, and on the 11th of April, Commodore Hull addressed a second letter to Governor Gilman stating that "from information he had received, he had no doubt but Portsmouth would be attacked, and that the destruction of the Seventy-four and other vessels would be their object; and that neither the fortifications nor the force stationed in Portsmouth were, in his opinion, an adequate defense." At the same time Major-General Storer addressed an urgent letter to the Governor, stating that "alarming apprehensions were entertained for the safety of Portsmouth, and suggesting the expediency of reorganizing the military guard or watch, for the defense of Little Harbor."

On these representations, Governor Gilman on the 15th of April ordered General Storer to make a detachment of not over one hundred men, from the 1st and 35th regiments of his Division, to be stationed at Fort Washington and Little Harbor. The order was obeyed forthwith, and the same day, two companies were detached and one entered upon duty. The company detached from the 1st regiment was from Portsmouth and commanded by Capt. Samuel Shackford. It was stationed at Fort Washington, and was discharged July 17, 1814. Its roll was as follows:

Both of these companies were raised for three months.

On the 23d of April, Admiral Cochburne, issued, from his rendezvous at the Bahamas, a proclamation declaring the whole coast of the United States in a state of blockade, thus including New England, before excepted, and forthwith British cruisers appeared in the Massachusetts Bay and captured and burned some thirty or forty coasting vessels. This produced the greatest alarm. In Portsmouth a town meeting was held and a committee raised "to call on the Governor for aid, and giving it as their opinion that eight hundred men, in addition to the force then already ordered, should be detached for the defense of the town and harbor."

On the 11th of May, Commodore Hull addressed another letter to Governor Gilman, stating that he had received such information as he relied on, that an immediate attack on Portsmouth was intended by the enemy, and that one thousand militia more were in his opinion, necessary for the defense of the harbor, in consequence of its defenseless state, and that if militia ever were wanting for the defense of any place, they were then wanting for the defense of Portsmouth. This letter was inclosed in one of the same date by Maj. Gen. Storer, and addressed to Governor Gilman then in session with the Council at Concord, in which he gave it as his opinion "that one thousand men ought immediately to be detached for the defense of Portsmouth."

Upon the receipt of these letters, the Council adjourned, and the Governor immediately returned to Exeter to take measures for the expected attack. On the 14th he addressed a note to General Thomas H. Cushing, stating the fears of an attack upon Portsmouth, and asking that the U. S. troops at Concord might be ordered for the defense of Portsmouth, or some other arrangements might be made for that purpose.

Gen. Cushing replied that two companies of the 40th Regiment had been ordered from Boston, one for Portland and the other for Wiscasset, Me., and that the latter might be halted at Portsmouth, if an attack was made upon that town.

On the 20th of May, the Governor issued general order for raising six companies from the First Division of the m litia, and two companies from the Second Division, eac company to consist of sixty-four men, exclusive of officers, b detachment if necessary, to be marched within five day for Portsmouth.

The same day he wrote the Secretary of War informin him of the alarm at Portsmouth, the measures pursued fo its defense; that he had ordered out eight companies of th militia, for sixty days unless sooner discharged, at the urgen request of Commodore Hull and the people of Portsmouth that the forts in that harbor were very deficient in the number of men, and suggested an immediate re-inforcement of United States troops.

On the 23d of May, the Governor ordered General Store to prepare comfortable quarters for the detached militis and authorized him "to permit the troops thus detached, t march by their voluntary consent, and not otherwise, to an points of defense without the limits of the jurisdiction of this State, which might be judged most advisable."

This permission and condition were introduced into the order as a salvo to the feelings of the extremists of the opposition, and at the same time to secure the more effectual defense of the harbor and town of Portsmouth, by stationing a detachment of our State troops at Fort McClary of the eastern bank of the Piscataqua, then in the Common wealth of Massachusetts.

The detachment thus ordered comprised eight companie and was placed under the command of Edward J. Long Esq., of Portsmouth, Brigade Inspector of the 1st Brigade and also one of the Governor's Staff.

Major Long took command of the detachment May 27 1814, and continued in command until the disbanding of th battalion July 26, 1814. The detachment was stationed mainly at Fort Washington, but portions of it were at Fort Sullivan and Constitution.

*Edward J. Long was of Portsmouth, and was born in 1771. For a time he was a merchant of that place. For many years he was Secretary of the Fire and Marine Inrance Company of Portsmouth. He was fond of military display, and took an active part in the military matters of that section of the State. He commanded the Portsmouth Artillery at an early period, and was appointed Inspector of the 1st Brigade N. H. Militia, in 1808, by Gen. Clement Storer, and continued to hold that position until 1813. In 1814 he was appointed an aid to Governor Gilman, and in September of that year, he was appointed Major of the artillery detached for the defense of Piscataqua Harbor, and was stationed at Fort Washington. October 5, 1814, he was appointed Major of the 2d Battalion of the 1st Regiment N. H. Militia; Lieutenant-Colonel, July 4, 1816, and Colonel Nov. 5, 1819. June 20, 1820, he was appointed Brigadier-General of the 1st Brigade, and continued in this office until his death, which took place a Portsmouth, February 27, 1824, at the age of 63 years. His death was caused by a fall upon the ice.

*Capt. Andrew Pierce, Jr., was of Dover, and was born in Gloucester, Mass., Feb 14, 1792. His early life was passed mostly at sea, but he retired from that arduou life about 1832, to that of a merchant, and thereafter until his death was extensively engaged in trade and shipping. Quiet and retiring in his manners, he was seldom in duced to accept public office, yet he was of the Board of Selectmen of Dover, was Sen ator from the Senatorial District No. 5, in 1843, and Elector of President and Vice President. He was Captain of a company of detached militia in 1814, as above, Majo in the 2d Regiment from 1814 to 1818, when he was appointed Colonel of the same regiment. This office he resigned June 22, 1819. A writer who knew him well says of the Hon. Andrew Pierce, in an obituary:

"He had however, been for many years a resident of this town; and has left the impress of his active business habits, and the uncommon energy of his character, en stamped on the social relations and prosperity of the place. Possessed of a quick amkeenly discerning mind, he was ever wont to pursue whatever he deemed was right with a firm and persevering step by which his aims were successfully accomplished and his example as a man of promptness, probity, and honor, will be regarded as a rich legacy to the community in which he lived, while the poor and the suffering eve found in him a ready sympathy and a liberal hand."

He died at Dover March 29, 1850, in the 59th year of his age.

The Legislature assembled Jan. 1, 1814, amid this excitement, and the Governor laid before them his doings in a special message. A special committee was appointed upon the subjects of the detached militia, and the maritime defense. This committee had before them the acts of the Governor and his correspondence as to the defense of Portsmouth. While having these matters under consideration, the Governor received a letter from the Secretary of War under date of June 9, 1814, as follows:

"WAR DEPARTMENT, June 9, 1814.

Sir:—Your Excellency's letter of May 20th has been received. Gen. Cushing has re-inforced the garrison of artillerists at Portsmouth with two companies of infantry. These, with two hundred seamen, under Commodore Hull, and the artillerists, will make a good defense against boats, the only mode of attack to be apprehended.

One company of sea-fencibles are also authorized to be raised for the further defense of the sea-coast of New-Hampshire.

I am, sir, very respectfully, Your most obedient servant,

J. ARMSTRONG.

His Excellency J. T. GILMAN.

Governor of New Hampshire."

This letter was placed in the hands of the committee by the Governor, and at once caused excitement among them. They found no fault with the contents of the letter, but with its non-contents, and one can hardly conceive at this day why it should have produced such results. The letter was received on the 17th of June, and on the 24th the special committee made a report upon the "subject of the detached militia and the maritime defense," in which they remark, "In this letter from the Secretary of War, your Committee perceive no acknowledgment of the propriety of His Excellency's measures of defense; no intimation of his opinion that justice would require the United States to indemnify New-Hampshire for the expenses incurred by the defensive measures adopted by His Excellency the Governor; but on the contrary, it is very manifest from this letter of the Secretary of War, that, in his opinion, any further measures of defense, upon this part of the State, or even the continuance of the services of the detached militia, would be useless."

"Your Committee therefore recommend, that His Excellency the Governor, be authorized and requested immediately to disband six companies of the militia detached May 20, 1814; and that His Excellency be requested to retain in service two companies of said detached militia for the term of twenty days from and after this date; and also to retain the company of militia which was detached April 15, 1814, to keep watch and guard at Little Harbor, Peirce's Island, and such other places as may be found necessary, for the protection and defense of the town and harbor of Portsmouth, and the adjacent country, for and during the term of thirty days from and after this date; and that His Excellency the Governor be requested to communicate immediately the substance of this resolution to the Secretary of the War Department." The report was accepted, and the Governor discharged six of the companies the first week in July, whilst the two companies commanded by Capt. Phineas Webster of the 7th Regiment, and Capt. Allen Goss of the 8th Regiment, were not discharged until the 16th of July, according to the recommendation of the committee. As recommended by them, the company from the 35th Regiment, commanded by Capt. William Marshall was continued in the service, and another company was detached from the 2d Brigade, by order of the Governor, commanded by Capt. James Hardy. These companies were under the command of Major Pierce P. Furber,* Brigade-Inspector of the 2d Brigade. They were discharged about the middle of November, 1814. The roll of Capt. Marshall's company was as follows:

^{*}Major Pierce P. Furber was the son of General Richard Furber, of Farmington where he was born August 20, 1788. He was a farmer, and resided on the old homestead. He was Brigade-Inspector of the 2d Brigade, commanded by his father at that time, with the rank of Major, and as such was appointed to command this detachment He resided in Farmington till 1827, when he moved to Dover, Me. He followed the business of farmer, surveyor, and land explorer, in Maine, until 1851, when he removed to St. Paul, Ma., where he now resides.

Meantime, while this matter of the Governor's correspondence was before the committee, the greatest excitement existed at Portsmouth. They had been for weeks in the expectation of an immediate attack upon the town, by the British, whose cruisers were continually hovering about our coast. Alarms had been frequent as to the landing of the British, and many of the inhabitants had their valuables packed ready for transportation into the country for safety, in hourly expectation of an attack. At length, on the 21st day of June, 1814, between the hours of ten and eleven at night, expresses came riding into the town with the alarming intelligence that the British were landing their forces at Rye, and were about to march upon the town of Portsmouth. This attack was from an unexpected quarter, and the greatest excitement seized upon the inhabitants. "Alarm bells were rung, and signal guns fired. All the military companies turned out with alacrity and prepared for the attack." Teams and people on foot, loaded with packages and bundles, filled the streets, making with all haste for the country. Old men, women and children, filled the sidewalks, shricking, exhorting, crying, and making the confusion babel-like, — drums were beating, and the loud clash of horses' feet upon the pavement were ever and anon heard, as officials rushed through the streets upon their pressing duties. "A martial spirit pervaded all ranks, and they glowed with ardor to be led to the place of danger." Shortly order prevailed to some extent, and scouts were sent out to discover, if possible, the situation and intentions of the enemy. They soon returned with the welcome intelligence that the report was unfounded. The guard at Rye had discovered off their harbor, some suspicious boats passing to and fro, and hence the false alarm.

All was shortly quiet in Portsmouth, but the alarm had spread into the interior, and great excitement existed throughout the State, not allayed till some days after, when the report was contradicted.

The company of "sea fencibles" enlisted under the authority of the War Department, named in the letter of the Secretary of War to Governor Gilman was commanded by Capt. John S. Davis, of Portsmouth. Its roll was as follows:

At length, the people becoming thoroughly aroused, Governor Gilman yielded to their demands, and on the 7th of September issued orders for detachments from twenty-three regiments of the militia, and on the 9th of September issued general orders to the militia of the State, ordering the entire body, including infantry, cavalry and artillery, "to hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's warning," ordering the detachments already made to march immediately for Portsmouth; the companies in the 1st and 35th Regiments to turn out for drill three times a week, and making a further draft from the militia of two companies from each of the 2d, 3d, 4th and 25th Regiments, and one from the 35th Regiment, to march immediately for Portsmouth, the farthest to be there on or before the 12th day of the month.

These orders were as follows:

STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

"Headquarters, Exeter, September 9th, 1814.

GENERAL ORDERS:-

"Whereas the recent depredations of the enemy upon the seaboard of the United States make it necessary for the country to be in complete readiness for defense, and that forces in addition to those already ordered in this State should be called forth immediately:

"The Commander-in-Chief orders: That the whole of the militia, including infantry, cavalry, and artillery, hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's warning, completely armed and equipped according to law, and as well provided as possible with blankets and ammunition. And whereas there are a large number of men able to bear arms, who are, by our militia laws, exempted from ordinary military duties, they are hereby invited and requested, in the present alarming state of the country, to assemble in their respective towns, organize themselves into companies, and prepare for defense in case it should become necessary.

"The detachment made from twenty-three regiments of the militia by General Orders of the 7th instant, will march to Portsmouth from their respective regiments immediately. The General and Field Officers in their respective districts, will see that this order is carried into immediate effect, and that the troops be as well provided as possible with blankets and ammunition.

"The First and Thirty-fifth Regiments, (being near the seaboard), and all the companies within the limits of said regiments, are directed to turn out by companies at least three times in each week (until further orders) for perfecting themselves in military discipline, excepting one company in the 35th Regiment, detached by these orders.

"The Commander-in-Chief further orders: That four entire companies of infantry from each of the following regiments, to wit; the Second, Third, Fourth and Twenty-fifth, and one entire company from Stratham, in the Thirty-fifth Regiment, be detached immediately, armed and equipped according to law, and provided, as far as possible, with blankets and ammunition, to march to Portsmouth immediately; (those companies at the greatest distance to be there on or before Monday, the 12th instant,) to serve for the term of fifteen days, from the time of their arrival at Portsmouth unless sooner discharged. The commanding officers of the several regiments are respectively charged with the execution of this order.

"The several officers of the militia will avail themselves of the powers with which they are invested by the laws of the State, for supplying any deficiency of arms and equipments.

"The Commander-in-Chief relies with confidence on the patriotism of the good citizens of this State, and on their exertions, for the protection and defense of the country.

J. T. GILMAN,

Governor, Capt.-General, and Commander-in-Chief."

These orders were sent by express throughout the State, and were obeyed with the greatest alacrity. So great was the enthusiasm among the people, that whole companies, paraded for the purpose of being drafted, volunteered, and a draft had to be made rather of those who should stay at home, than those who should go to defend our country.

The brigade, regimental and staff officers had been appointed, and when the troops arrived at Portsmouth they were organized as follows:

BRIGADE STAFF ROLL.

John Montgomery, Brigadier-General.
James I. Swan,* Brigade-Major.
Geo. H. Montgomery,† Aid-de-Camp.
E. Smith, Waiter.
Freeman Grow, Waiter.
Jason Bachus, "
H. Symes, "

FIELD AND STAFF OFFICERS OF THE FIRST REGIMENT OF DETACHED MILITIA.

Nat. Fisk,‡ Lt. Colonel Commandant.

James H. Pierpont, Surgeon.

Caleb Reynolds, Quartermaster Sergeant.

Aaron Coffin, Chief Musician.

^{*} Maj. Swan was a lawyer of Bath, of fine abilities, and among the most eminent in the State. He died about 1821.

[†] George H. Montgomery was a son of the General, and died shortly after the war.

[‡] Colonel Nat. Fisk was from Westmoreland. He was born in Framingham, Mass., in 1787. He came to Westmoreland in early life, and established himself in his trade, that of a clothier. After a time, having been successful in business, he opened a store, and became a successful merchant. He was Major of the 1st Battalion of the 20th Regiment N. H. Militia. In 1814 he was appointed Lieut. Colonel of the same battalion. In September of that year he was appointed to the command of the 1st Regiment of detached soldiers for the defense of the sea-board, and was stationed as above. Returning to Westmoreland at the expiration of the time for which his regiment was detached, he continued to reside there until about 1830, when he returned to Framingham and became a farmer upon his paternal homestead. In or about 1856, while upon a visit to Westmoreland, where a daughter resides, he died suddenly of heart disease, aged 69 years.

FIELD AND STAFF ROLL OF THE THIRD REGIMENT OF DE-TACHED MILITIA.

Edward Sise,* Lieut.-Colonel Commandant. Thomas Pickering, 1st Major.
Levi Jones, 2d Major.
Såmuel Sheldon, Adjutant.
William Dodge, Quartermaster.
Jonathan Wingate, Paymaster.
William Cutter, Surgeon.
Josiah Richards, Surgeon's Mate.
Moses Abbott, Sergeant-Major.
Isaac Allen, Quartermaster's Sergeant.
Thomas F. Edgerly, Chief Musician.

*Colonel Sise was from Dover. He was born in Castle Lyons, County Cork, Ireland, January 11, 1762. He received a good education in the schools of Cork, and, soon after arriving at his majority, he emigrated to the United States, taking up his residence in Portsmouth, in 1784. He resided in Portsmouth but a short time, soon deciding to make Dover his abiding-place. Here he resided until his death. He engaged in mercantile pursits, and made several voyages to the West Indies, as part owner and supercargo, and on his last voyage his vessel was captured by the French: the vessel and cargo were condemned, and proved an entire loss to the owners. Colonel Sise had received, in part, a military education in Ireland, and in this country took an active part in military affairs. His correspondence with General Sullivan, and other military men of that day, was extensive. He was commissioned Major of the 1st Battalion, 2d Regiment, of N. H. Militia in June, 1811, and Lieutenant-Colonel Commandaut of the same in June, 1814. In September following, Governor Gilman informed him in a private note that he had selected him to command one of the regiments to be formed from the detachments ordered from twenty-three regiments of the State Militia, for the defense of Portsmouth; and, in due time, his commission as Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of the 3d Regiment, thus organized, was forwarded to him. The orders of Governor Gilman, for the several detachments to march to Portsmouth forthwith, were received by express at Dover on Sunday. Colonel Sise was in church; the sexton walked up the aisle and delivered the letter, and the Colonel quietly left the church. The news of the letter soon circulated; all was excitement and bustle, as many of the various congregations were of the detached soldiery. There was no more preaching in Dover on that Sabbath. Expresses were sent out even "beyond Sandwich," as says a private note; and the 1st Battalion of the 2d Regiment was in Dover on Wednesday following, on its march for Portsmouth.

At Portsmouth, Colonel Sise proved a valuable and efficient officer. He died at Dover, July 26, 1842, in the 81st year of his age.

FIELD AND STAFF ROLL OF THE FOURTH REGIMENT OF DETACHED MILITIA.

Isaac Waldron,* Lieut.-Colonel Commandant.
John Dearborn, 1st Major.
Daniel Smith, 2d Major.
Ichabod Bartlett,† Quartermaster.
Robert Woodbury, Surgeon's Mate.
Jeremiah Kingman, Sergeant-Major.
Joseph Chesley, 3d, Quartermaster Sergeant.

* Colonel Isaac Waldron was born in Barrington in 1746. He was a man of great enterprise. He kept a store, tavern, and cultivated a farm for a great number of years, besides being engaged largely in public affairs. Aside from minor town offices, he represented his native town in the legislature for twenty years prior to 1815. He held office in the militia of his town before the Revolution and after. At the organization of the militia in 1796, under the present Constitution, he was Major of the 2d Battalion of the 25th Regiment, and continued as such till 1804, when he was appointed Lieut.-Colonel Commandant of the same, and held that commission till 1816. He died at Barrington, May 3, 1845, aged 95 years. The fact that he was at the head of a regiment at the age of 68 years as a volunteer, and in actual service, shows not only his great patriotism, but his great energy of character. He was the father of the Hon. Isaac Waldron, late of Portsmouth, an eminent merchant of that city.

† Lieut. Ichabod Bartlett was of Durham. He was the son of Dr. Joseph Bartlett, of Salisbury, born July 24, 1786, and graduated at Dartmouth in the class of 1808. He read law with Moses Eastman and Parker Noyes, Esqs., of Salisbury; was admitted to the bar in 1811, practised a short time in his native town, and then moved to Durham. In 1816 he removed to Portsmouth, where he became eminent in his profession, with such compeers as Mason, Sullivan, and Woodbury. He was Clerk of the Senate in 1817 and 1818, member of the House of Representatives from Portsmouth in 1820, and member and Speaker of the House in 1821. He was Judge-Advocate of the 3d Brigade in 1819, 1820, and 1821, and Aid to Governor Bell through his administration. He was Solicitor for the county of Rockingham for three years from 1819. In this office he displayed that tact, acumen, and ability as an advocate that, in after-years, left him no rival at the New-Hampshire bar as a criminal lawyer. In 1823 he was chosen a Representative to Congress, and was re-elected in 1825 and 1827, serving three terms. His reputation as an advocate had preceded him, and in the debates arising he sustained his reputation as a debater. His tact, ability, and eloquence attracted the attention of "the Orator of the West," Mr. Clay, and he deliberately made an attack upon "the young gentleman from New-Hampshire," as provoking as it was "uncalled for." But he found Mr. Bartlett "with lance at rest," ready for the attack. In "the measure of lances" that followed, "the young gentleman from New-Hampshire" did not come off second best. Mr. Clay had evidently reckoned upon an easy demolition of his opponent, but in this he was mistaken. He found there were blows to receive as well as to give. After the encounter, Mr. Bartlett's friends collected around him, and congratulated him upon his success. Mr. Randolph, of Virginia, though of very slight acquaintance, said to him: "I thank you personally for your speech. I congratulate you upon your success in this 'passage at arms' with the overbearing member from the West." But the matter did not rest here. Mr. Clay felt angry, and, as Congress was about to adjourn, he sent a friend to suggest to "the gentleman from New-Hampshire" that he had better wait a meeting for the adjustment of affairs. But here he found his equal. Col. Bartlett replied at once, "I'll wait." And he did. He and his friend, the late Judge Harvey, tarried in Washington three days, but, hearing nothing further of "the meeting," they returned to New-Hampshire. Upon leaving Congress, Col. Bartlett resumed the practice of the law, and at once placed himself at the head of the profession in New-Hampshire. He subsequently took very little part in political life, but was a member, from Portsmouth, of the House of Representatives in 1830, 1838, 1851, and 1852. He was also a member of the Convention, from Portsmouth, in 1850, to revise the Constitution, and took a distinguished part in the debates of that body. Col. Bartlett died at Portsmouth, Oct. 19, 1853, aged 67 years. The Court of Common Pleas being in session at Portsmouth, upon the opening of the same on the 19th instant, Col. Bartlett's death was announced, and the court adjourned for the day. Appropriate resolutions were passed by the bar, and remarks made laudatory of the deceased as a gentleman of noble impulses and high legal attainments.

On Thursday, the 20th of October, 1853, the Board of Aldermen of the City of Portsmouth passed the following preamble and resolution:-

"Whereas, learning the Hon. Ichabod Bartlett departed this life on Wednesday morning last, at the Rockingham House, and that the funeral services will be performed on Saturday afternoon next, at the Stone Church, at two o'clock,—
"Resolved, That, out of respect for the high legal attainments of the deceased, which have frequently been called into requisition by our town and city in its corporate capacity, also for his services as a public officer who has been entrusted with important business of the State and nation, and likewise for the devotion he has ever manifested in the discharge of the public duties entrusted to him, this Board deem is proper to attend in a body the funeral solemnities."

ade, and, July 2, 1825, Major-General of the First Division. June 7, 1831, he resigned the office of Major-General. In 1835 he was appointed Sheriff of Rockingham County, which office he held for the term of five years. He died Sept. 9, 1858, in the seventieth year of his age. In private and public life, Capt. Towle sustained the reputation of an upright, honest man; and it is not a little to his credit that, during the war of 1812, he should have been selected twice by Gov. Plumer, and once by Gov. Gilman, to command companies of detached troops for the defence of our "maritime frontier."

- * Capt. Peter Robertson commanded the company of artillery attached to the Eleventh Regiment of New-Hampshire Militia. He was originally from Amherst, and carried on the business of a baker. He was a man of energy, but not successful in business. He lived in a house on the northeast corner of the State-house yard, which was purchased by Col. William Kent and moved to Pleasant Street, where it is still standing. Capt. Robertson, for a time, was the popular landlord of what is now known as the Columbian Hotel, in Concord. He was appointed Brigade Quartermaster on Gen. Asa Robertson's staff, Aug. 19, 1816. Unsuccessful in business, he died at the almshouse in Concord.
- † Samuel Herbert was the son of Richard Herbert, of Concord, where he was born March 2, 1779. He and the other officers of this company were appointed and commissioned for this occasion, being sustainers of the war; and Col. Cochran of Pembroke, the commander of the Eleventh Regiment, was removed by address, at the next session of the Legislature, mainly for the reason that he recommended and secured these appointments. Capt. Herbert was a farmer, and was Deputy Sheriff of the County for a time. He was modest and retiring in his manners, and lived highly respected to a good old age. He died at Concord, Jan. 13, 1867.

His twin brother, Charles Herbert, was a member of the same company. He died at Concord, Aug. 25, 1829.

‡ Chandler Eastman was the eldest son of Jacob Eastman, of the East Village, in Concord, and was born Dec. 31, 1784. He kept a store for many years in his native village, and at the same time was engaged in farming and lumbering with his father. After middle age, he moved to Exeter, Me., where his father owned a tract of land, and where two younger brothers had taken up their residence. Here he cultivated a farm, was highly respected, and died in July, 1851, in the sixty-seventh year of his age.

Maj. Sias's regiment was stationed at what is known as "Portsmouth Plains," about a mile southwest of the Courthouse. The first four companies were from the Fourth Regiment, of which he was a major, and comprised the detachment ordered out from that regiment by the Governor's special order of Sept. 9, 1814. The fifth company was one of artillery, from the Third Brigade; and the sixth was one of artillery, from the Eleventh Regiment.

The battalion of artillery under Col. Long was stationed at Fort Washington.

These detached troops were very judiciously posted in case of an attack. The guard or companies stationed a Jaffrey's Point, at the battery commanding the entrance to Little Harbor, was a sufficient protection at that port; while Forts Constitution and McClary, with "Walbach's Tower,' filled with regulars and militia under the gallant Wal bach, were considered amply sufficient to prevent any armed vessels from entering the Piscatagua River. But, in case they should pass those forts, Forts Washington and Sullivan at "The Narrows," with a full complement of men, were thought sufficient to stay the further progress of the enemy. Then, if the enemy should pass the battery commanding Little Harbor and should succeed in approaching the south part of the town, the regiments of Colonels Waldron and Lovering, with sundry pieces of artillery, were posted at the "South Ropewalk" to meet them. Then Major Sias, with his regiment, comprising three companies of infantry and three companies of artillery, was posted at "The Plains," commanding the road from Greenland and Rye; so that, should the enemy have effected a landing at Hampton or Rve as was anticipated, their entrance into Portsmouth landward would have been stayed, whilst the thousands of troops from the river could have come to their assistance. Of this large detached force, Gov. Gilman took the command in person, and, with his staff, was watchful of every point, and most assiduous in his labors to prepare a vigorous reception for the enemy. His staff consisted of-

Edward J. Long,
Daniel Gookin,

^{*} Col. George Sullivan was the son of Gen. John Sullivan, and was born in Durham, Aug. 29, 1771. He graduated at Harvard University in 1790. "He studied law in the office of Judge Steele in Durham, and commenced practice at Exeter in 1793. In 1805 he was a member of the State Legislature. In 1811, while pursuing a very extensive and lucrative practice, he was elected to Congress, which office he held two years. In 1813 he was again elected a Representative to the State Legislature, and, in 1814 and 1815, was a member of the State Senate. In 1814 he was appointed an Aide-de-camp_by Gov. Gilman, which office he held until June, 1816. In December, 1805, he was appointed to the office of Attorney-General of the State; upon the resignation of the Hon. Jeremiah Mason, but resigned it in about two years. In 1816, [†] Col. Bradbury Cilley was of Nottingham, the son of Gen. Joseph Cilley, of that town. He was born Feb. 1, 1760. Col. Cilley was not much in public life, preferring the pursuits of a private citizen. He was elected a Representative to the United States House of Representatives in 1813, and served one term. In 1814 he was appointed as above by Gov. Gilman, upon his staff, and served in that capacity two years, being on active duty in the fall of 1814. He was a man of large wealth, and died at Nottingham, Dec. 17, 1831, in the seventy-second year of his age.

He himself was educated in the school of the Revolution; and, the 12th of September, after issuing the general order for detaching these troops, he appointed Capt. Daniel Gookin* who had had a long experience in that same school, one of his Aides. Capt. Gookin was an excellent disciplinarian as well as tactician, and he rendered most efficient aid in organizing the troops. Portsmouth and its harbor thus protected, the enemy thought it too hazardous to attempt an attack upon it, as they had intended.†

The danger being past, the British forces evidently extended their predatory warfare southward. The main part of the troops, detached for the protection of Portsmouth, were discharged about the 1st of October. A small detachment of troops still remained, however, until winter approached.

There were other officers detached and present at Portsmouth, but were without any commands; at least, if they had any, the rolls of their troops have not been found. I am inclined to the opinion that they were supernumeraries, detached for the purpose of looking after the troops in their regiments or brigades.

he was appointed to the same office, which he held until 1835, when he resigned it, in consequence of the law prohibiting the Attorney-General from engaging in civil suits in the courts. He early acquired a high position at the New-Hampshire bar, and, for more than forty years, was actively engaged in practice. As a professional lawyer, he had few equals in the country. His mind was of a high order, vigorous, discriminating, and philosophical. He did not rely, however, upon his strong native genius for eminence in his profession, but upon unremitted application to the study of the law as a science. Among the learned jurists who have at different periods adorned the New-Hampshire bar, he held perhaps the highest rank as an able and eloquent advocate. He died June 14, 1838, in the sixty-seventh year of his age." [J. C. AMORY, Esq., in "Genealogical Register."]

^{*} For notice of Capt. Gookin, see vol. ii., 1866, p. 361.

[†] The British had made every arrangement to destroy the Navy Yard and the town of Portsmouth. For this purpose their cruisers were off the bay of Piscataqua. A British officer told Col. Walbach, after the war, that he went up the Piscataqua and reconnoitred the town, disguised as a fisherman, and returned to the fleet and reported that the town was swarming with soldiers and well defended; and the British commander abandoned the project of attacking the town.

Such officers were —

The campaign of 1814, as carried on by the national forces, commenced with disaster. In early spring, Gen. Wilkinson, with a part of the Northern army, crossed into Canada, and was repulsed at a stone mill on the La Colle River, with considerable loss.

On the 1st of July, Gen. Brown, with an army 3,000 strong, crossed the Niagara and took possession of Fort Erie without opposition. A British army of about the same number, under Gen. Riall, was entrenched on the Chippewa River, only a few miles distant. The plains of Chippewa are situated upon a peninsula formed by the Chippewa and Niagara Rivers, and a sluggish stream called Street's Creek. The course of the Niagara east of the peninsula is north; whilst the Chippewa and Street's Creek empty into the Niagara from the west, nearly at right angles to it, and from four hundred to five hundred rods apart,—thus forming a peninsula, its eastern part lying upon the Niagara, being in the form somewhat of a parallelogram. Both the Chippewa and Street's Creek were bridged a short distance above their union with the Niagara.

^{*} The same mentioned on p. 391, vol. ii. 1866. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was repeatedly Representative from Chester, where he resided. He was Major of the First Battalion of the Seventeenth Regiment from 1806 to 1813, when he became Lieutenant-Colonel of the same; and was Quartermaster-General from 1817 to 1820. He died in Concord Jan. 28, 1847, aged seventy-eight years.

[†] Samuel M. Richardson was of Pelham, where he was a well-known farmer. He was Major of the Second Battalion of the Eighth Regiment in 1814 and 1815; Lieutenant-Colonel of the same in 1816 and 1817, and Colonel in 1818 and 1819. He was appointed Brigadier-General of the Third Brigade in 1819, and resigned in 1820. He was Senator from the Third Senatorial District in 1821, and represented his town in the Legislature in 1830, and again in 1835. He was a brother of Chief Justice William M. Richardson, deceased; was a man of integrity, and commanded the respect of all who knew him. He died at Pelham March 11, 1859, aged eighty-two years.

The brigade under Gen. Scott, consisting of the Ninth, Eleventh, and Twenty-fifth Regiments, and a detachment of the Twenty-second and a corps of artillery, was ordered by Maj.-Gen. Brown, on the morning of the 4th of July, 1814, to advance from Fort Erie to the Chippewa; while he should bring up the rear, after leaving the Fort protected by a proper force. The troops advanced with the greatest alacrity, anticipating a meeting with the enemy. The heat was oppressive, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the troops could be restrained from indulging in over-draughts of water. Yet they pressed on, crossed Street's Creek, the light troops of the enemy retiring before them, and, advancing upon the south bank of the Chippewa, through a piece of woods, discovered the enemy in force upon the opposite bank, protected by a temporary fortification. After some skirmishing with the light troops of the enemy, the day far spent, Gen. Scott recrossed Street's Creek and encamped for the night, to await the arrival of the rest of the troops; a part of which came into camp about eleven o'clock at night, under Gen. Brown, consisting of the Second Brigade, under Gen. Ripley, the field and battering train, and a corps of artillery under Maj. Winsman. These were followed in the morning by Gen. Porter with the New York and Pennsylvania militia and the warriors of the "Six Nations." the morning of the 5th, the enemy sent out their skirmishers, attacked our pickets, and kept up a desultory fire upon our advanced parties during the day, until about four o'clock in the afternoon. At this time Gen. Porter advanced with the militia and Indians, from the left and rear of the American lines, through the woods towards the Chippewa; Gen. Brown ordering the advance to retire slowly under the fire of the enemy's advance parties. This manœuvre was for the purpose of cutting off the enemy's skirmishers. Gen. Porter soon met the enemy's skirmishers in the woods, and, driving them before him, advanced near to the Chippewa, where he discovered the entire British force, drawn up in order of battle, in open ground upon the south side of the river. The enemy immediately advanced from behind the wood, and displayed his columns upon the open plains, at the same time keeping up a heavy fire upon Gen. Porter's force. At this time Gen. Brown ordered Scott to advance with his brigade and Towson's artillery, and meet the enemy. The order was promptly and gallantly executed. Towson's Battery, of three guns, crossed the bridge, advanced down the Niagara a short distance from the bridge, took position, and opened a brisk fire upon the enemy's line, in order to cover Gen. Scott's advance across the bridge. Maj. Leavenworth, at the head of the Ninth and Twenty-second, led the column; Col. Campbell, in command of the Eleventh, occupied the centre; and the Twentyfifth, under command of Maj. Jessup, brought up the rear of the column. Upon crossing, Maj. Leavenworth took position in front of the enemy's left by an advance down the river; Col. Campbell, with the Eleventh, advanced to form at his left and nearly opposite the enemy's centre; and Maj. Jessup, with the Twenty-fifth, advanced by an oblique movement through the wood, to form upon the left of the line, and attack the enemy's right. Soon after crossing the bridge, Col. Campbell, in command of the Eleventh, fell, and the command of the regiment devolved upon Maj. McNeil. McNeil took the head of his regiment with alacrity. The Ninth formed with precision, and, advancing, received and returned the fire of the enemy with spirit. The Eleventh formed on their left under the command of Maj. McNeil, and advanced at shouldered arms and with quick step, leaving the Ninth to the right and in rear, until it was within fifteen rods of the enemy's line, receiving a heavy fire from the enemy, during the entire advance, without wavering or breaking. The Eleventh then opened a most destructive fire upon the British line, and at the same time were supported by a deadly fire from the Twenty-fifth, under Mai. Jessup, who had obtained an advanced position. The enemy stood this fire but for a moment, when they rushed on to charge the Ninth, which was in their front, and not yet up to a line with the Eleventh Regiment. This movement of the enemy would have carried them directly past the Eleventh, but, as they were executing it, Maj. McNeil, seizing his advantage, gave the command, "Eleventh form line to the front on the right platoon." The order was executed immediately, and the regiment poured a deadly flank fire into the ranks of the charging enemy. Thus hotly pressed in flank and front, the British column wavered, broke, and fled, and the utmost efforts of their officers could not rally them. The rout became general; and the enemy did not stop in their precipitate flight until they had gained the protection of their fortifications, and their batteries had checked the ardent pursuit of the American troops. In this important battle there cannot be a doubt of the fact that the flank movement of the Eleventh Regiment, under the command of the gallant McNeil, turned the fortune of the day, and gave the victory to the American troops.

This decisive victory greatly revived the spirits of the American people; and another that soon followed convinced them that all our soldiers wanted was leaders, to make us as successful upon land as upon the ocean.

Soon after the battle of Chippewa, the British General abandoned his works, and returned with his army to Burlington Heights. There he was re-enforced by Lieut.-Gen. Drummond, who took command of the army and led it back towards the American camp.

In a hasty report of the battle of Chippewa made to the Secretary of War, the 6th of July, 1814, Gen. Brown said: "The wounded of the enemy and of our own army must be attended to; they will be removed to Buffalo, which, with my limited means of transportation, will require a day or two. This done, I shall advance, not doubting but that the gallant and accomplished troops I lead will break down all opposition between me and Lake Ontario, when, if the fleet meet us, all is well; and, if not, under the favor of Heaven, we will so behave as to avoid disgrace." But the fleet was not in a situation to act in an emergency, as, down to the 20th of July, it was in port, and the Commodore sick of a fever. Under such circumstances, Gen. Brown's position was anything but pleasant. However, he made the most of it; and, anticipating no co-operation on the part of the fleet, he determined to rely upon his own resources, and push his little army forward to Burlington Heights. To mask his purpose, and to draw a supply of provision from Schlosser, he fell back upon the Chippewa River. In this position, about noon of the 25th of July, Gen. Brown received intelligence that the enemy appeared in considerable force at Queenstown, and that four vessels of the British fleet had arrived the preceding night and were lying near Fort Niagara. Soon after, intelligence came that the enemy were landing at Lewistown, and that our stores at Schlosser were in dan-At this crisis, Gen. Brown determined at once to march his force towards Queenstown, as this movement would doubtless recall the enemy's troops to the west side of the Niagara, and thus divert them from any serious attempt upon Lewistown or Schlosser. Gen. Scott, with the First Brigade, Towson's Artillery, and all the dragoons and mounted men, was put in motion forthwith, to march on the road towards Queenstown, with orders to report if the enemy appeared, and to call for assistance if necessary. Gen. Scott pushed on his command with vigor, and, upon his arrival at the Falls, found the enemy, under Gen. Riall, directly in front, behind a narrow strip of wood, and in line of battle upon Lundy's Lane, - a ridge of land nearly at right angles with the Niagara, and about a mile below the Falls. Gen. Scott sent information to Gen. Brown, and at once commenced an impetuous attack upon the enemy. Maj. McNeil, at the head of the gallant Eleventh. had the honor of leading the brigade into action. The advance commenced skirmishing about half past 5, P.M., but the action did not commence in earnest until near 7, P.M. The British were in much larger force, and the were able to extend their lines much farther, and to make flank movements. To counteract this advantage, our troops fought in detachments and charged in column. After the first attack. the troops, under their intrepid leaders, seem to have fought pretty much upon their own responsibility, until Gen. Brown came up with the remainder of the forces. The enemy's left was upon a road parallel to the Niagara, with a wood some two hundred yards in width intervening betwixt it and Maj. Jessup took advantage of the enemy's position, and upon his own responsibility led his regimen through the wood, turned the enmey's left, took Gen. Rial and some of his principal officers prisoners, and, charging back, regained his position in gallant style. Meantime the enemy, outflanking our troops upon their left, sent a battal ion to attack them in the rear. This movement was noticed by Maj. McNeil, and he promptly met and repelled i with the Eleventh, driving the enemy with great slaugh Col. Brady with the Twenty-second, and Towson with his artillery, did good service upon the centre and kep the enemy in check. Thus the contest raged for an hour the British infantry driven at every point by turns, bu holding their position through a powerful battery of two twenty-fours, four sixes, and three howitzers, planted upon a rising ground commanding the field. This battery has kept up an incessant and destructive fire from the com mencement of the action. At this crisis the combatants enveloped in smoke and mad with excitement, were greeted with a tremendous cheer; and cheer followed cheer. I was Ripley's Brigade rushing to the fight. Scott's Brigade paused in their excitement, and, as the third cheer echoed across the Niagara, they returned them with three as hearty if not as loud, and then commenced again the work of death Ripley's Brigade had formed for evening parade, when the booming of cannon and the report of small-arms announced that Scott had found the enemy. Gen. Brown ordered them to move immediately, and followed himself with Por ter's Brigade. Ripley's Brigade marched at quick step; bu the quick step, such was the ardor of the troops, soon passed into a rush, and they actually ran the three mile betwixt the camp and the battle-field. It was with thi ardor and excitement that Ripley's Brigade raised the cheer upon seeing their friends at Niagara. Animated by this opportune arrival, both brigades rushed to the attack with the greatest impetuosity. But the battery upon the hil made tremendous havoc among our troops.

At this time Maj. McNeil's horse was killed under him by a cannon-ball, and himself wounded in the leg by a canster-shot, a six-ounce ball passing through his right knee, hattering the bone severely and nearly carrying away the entire limb. He, however, continued in the conflict. Gen. Porter's troops had now arrived, and Gen. Brown took command in person. He at once saw that the British battery must be carried to ensure success; and, turning to the callant Miller, who commanded the Twenty-first, he ordered Col. Miller to storm the battery. "I'll try, sir," was the laconic reply. Of the contest that followed, let he gallant Colonel himself give an account:—

FORT ERIE, July 28, 1814.

"On the evening of the 25th instant, at the falls of the Niagara, ve met the enemy, and had, I believe, one of the most desperately ought actions ever experienced in America; it continued for more han three hours, stubbornly contested on both sides, when, about en o'clock at night, we succeeded in driving them from their trong position. Our loss was very severe in killed and wounded. have lost from my regiment, in killed, wounded, and missing, ne hundred and twenty-six. The enemy had got their artillery osted on a height, in a very commanding position, where they ould rake our columns in any part of the plain, and prevented heir advancing. Maj. McRae, the chief engineer, told Gen. Brown he could do no good until that height was carried, and hose cannon taken, or driven from their position. It was then vening, but moonlight. Gen. Brown turned to me and said: Col. Miller, take your regiment and storm that work and take t.' I had short of three hundred men with me, as my regiment ad been much weakened by the numerous details made from it uring the day. I, however, immediately obeyed the order. We ould see all their slow-matches and port-fires burning and ready. did not know what side of the work was the most favorable of pproach, but happened to hit upon a very favorable place, notvithstanding we advanced upon the mouths of their pieces of annon. It happened there was an old rail-fence on the side where we approached, undiscovered by the enemy, with a small rowth of shrubbery by the fence, and within less than two rods f the cannon's mouth. I then very cautiously ordered my men o rest across the fence, take good aim, fire, and rush, which was one in style. Not one man at the cannons was left to put fire to hem. We got into the centre of their park before they had time to oppose us. A British line was formed, and lying in a stro. position to protect their artillery: the moment we got to t centre, they opened a most destructive flank fire on us, killed great many, and attempted to charge with their bayonets. V returned the fire so warmly they were compelled to stand. V fought hand to hand for some time, so close that the blaze of o guns crossed each other; but we compelled them to abandon the whole artillery, ammunition, wagons, and all, amounting to sev pieces of elegant brass cannon, one of which was a twenty-for pounder, with eight horses and harnesses, though some of t horses were killed. The British made two more attempts charge us at close quarters, both of which we repulsed before was re-enforced, after which the First and Twenty-third Rements came to my relief; and, even after that, the British charg with their whole line three several times, and, after getting with half pistol-shot of us, were compelled to give way. I took, wi my regiment, between thirty and forty prisoners, while taki and defending the artillery. Lieut. Aaron Bigelow of my rement was killed, Capt. Burbank and Lieut. Cilley* badly wounded a number of others slightly; Gen. Brown and his aide both da gerously wounded; Gen. Scott and his Brigade-Major, Lie Smith, both badly wounded; Gen. Ripley and his aide both sh through the hat; Maj. McFarland killed; Col. Brady bad wounded; Maj. McNeil badly wounded, so he must, it is sai ^{*} Lieut. Joseph Cilley was from Nottingham, the son of Greenleaf Cilley and Jer Neally Cilley. He was born Jan. 4, 1791. His first commission was that of I sign in the First Company of Infantry in the Eighteenth Regiment, from Gov. Jo Langdon, under date of Oct. 17, 1811. March 12, 1812, he was appointed an Ensign Infantry in the United States Army, and was ordered for duty in Capt. John McClar company, Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, then commanded by Col. Iss Clarke, of Vermont. He was afterwards promoted to Lieutenant, March 17, 18 transferred to the Twenty-first United States Infantry, commanded by Col. Miller, a was in the battle of Chippewa. He was soon after promoted to a captaincy for his gallan in that battle. He was in the battle of Chrystler's Fields on the St. Lawrence, a served through the war with distinction. He was retained in the army on the per establishment, but resigned his commission in July, 1816. On the 20th of June, 18 he was commissioned as Quartermaster of the First Division of New-Hampsh Militia, by Gov. Plumer, upon Maj.-Gen. Clement Storer's staff, and Division Inspec upon Gen. Storer's staff in 1821 by Gov. Samuel Boles. In 1827 he was appointed aide upon the staff of Gov. Benjamin Pierce. In 1846 he was elected by the Legis ture to the United States Senate, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. Levi Woodbury. Upon the close of his Senatorial term, Col. Cilley returned his farm in Nottingham. There he remains, in the quiet enjoyment of a competen with the reputation of a brave and gallant soldier, an upright and honorable man, a the respect of his fellow-men. Although in the seventy-eighth year of his age, (Cilley writes a fair, legible, business hand, and is of such bodily activity that, t past season, he acted as pioneer for a railroad committee on looking out a route for contemplated road through Nottingham, and pointed out to them the curiosity of Pa tuckaway Lake, that has two outlets, both discharging their waters into the Lampi River.

se his leg. It is unnecessary for me to enumerate a quarter our loss, but we have very few officers left for duty. I now mmand a brigade. Gen. Ripley is Commander-in-chief. I am e only full colonel, and we have but one lieutenant-colonel left all the regular troops here. We expect re-enforcements soon. at I forgot to tell you we were unfortunate about our artillery last. After Generals Brown, Scott, and others were wounded, were ordered to return back to our camp, about three miles, d preparations had not been made for taking off the cannon. was impossible for me to defend it and make preparations for at too; and it was all left upon the ground, except one beautiful ass six-pounder, which is made a present to my regiment in timony of their distinguished gallantry. . . . We wounded ij.-Gen. Drummond, took Maj.-Gen. Riall prisoner, with beeen twenty and thirty other officers; how many non-commisned officers and privates, I have not yet learned, as they were it hastily across the river, but a very considerable number." *

This was one of the most sanguinary battles of the war, d showed the decided superiority of the American troops; the enemy were upon their own ground, chose their posin, had a battery superior in number and weight of metal, d were greatly superior in numbers.

The gallant act of Col. Miller and the noble Twenty-first egiment, in storming the battery, was the admiration of ery one. The British officers taken as prisoners, and vetans in service, united in saying it was the most desperate air they ever witnessed. Gen. Brown well knew the sperate service he was about to send Miller upon, as, the st time he met him after the battle, he said, "My dear low, my heart ached for you when I gave you that order, tit was the only thing that could save us."

Generals Brown and Scott having been wounded, the mmand of the army devolved upon Gen. Ripley, who, finds his force much diminished, returned to Fort Erie. On a 4th of August, Gen. Drummond invested the Fort with 300 men. On the 2d of September, Gen. Brown threw mself into the Fort and assumed the command. He soon termined upon a sortie from the Fort, and carried his an into effect on the 17th of September. Generals Miller and Porter led divisions, while Gen. Ripley commands the reserve. Gen. Miller thus describes this sortic attack upon the enemy's works:—

"FORT ERIE, Sept. 19, 1814.

"I am thankful once more to say to you I am alive and we after another sore conflict with the enemy on Saturday last, the 16th inst. After suffering fifty days by the investment of the enemy, under a heavy cannonading from three batteries which enfiladed almost our whole camp, suffering the loss of a consider ble number every day, it was determined to take their batteri by assault or storm. To effect this, it was determined by Ge Brown to send the riflemen, under Col. Gibson; Maj. Brooke, the Twenty-third, and 400 men; Gen. Porter with the voluntee and militia, with a few Indians, round through the woods in the rear; and for me, with the Ninth, Eleventh, and Nineteenth Reg ments, to attack in front, to press through two of the batteri and form a junction with those in the rear, or attack the batteries as the case might require. Gen. Ripley was to remain in reserv My signal to move was the firing of those in the rear, as I have taken post about fifty rods in front of the enemy, in a ravine. The columns were opposed before they arrived at either of the batteries I was ordered to advance and get into the enemy's works befo the column in the rear had beaten the enemy sufficiently to me us at the batteries. We had no alternative but to fall on the beat and take them. This was a sore job for us. My comman consisted of the Ninth, Eleventh, and Nincteenth Regiments. Co Aspinwall commanded the Ninth and Nineteenth, and Col. Bed Col. Aspinwall lost his left arm; Maj. Trimble, the Nineteenth, was severely, Ibelieve mortally, wounded through the body; Capt. Hale, of the Eleventh, killed; Capt. Ingerso. of the Ninth, wounded in the head; and eight other office severely wounded, some of them mortally. Col. Bedel* was the only officer higher than a lieutenant, in my whole command, b

In the militia of this State, he was appointed Second Lieutenant of the First Comparin the Thirteenth Regiment, May 10, 1785; Lieutenant of same, Oct. 4, 1786; Captain the same, July 1, 1793; Major Second Battalion, Thirteenth Regiment, March 28, 178 Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of the regiment, June 25, 1801; Brigadier-Genel Sixth Brigade, June 10, 1806, which command he held until April 9, 1812.

In civil life he was active, energetic, and persevering; and the counties of Graft and Coös owe much to his energy and enterprise in the way of settlements, road bridges, and other public improvements. One undertaking will show his energy:

^{*} Lieut.-Col. Bedel was of Bath. He was the son of Gen. Timothy Bedel, of Revoltionary memory, and was born at Salem, N.H., May 12, 1764. The same or t following year, he moved with his father's family to Haverhill, subsequently to Bain May, 1770, and returned to Haverhill in 1777. At the age of twelve years, accompanied his father as waiter in his expedition into Canada, and was an enlist soldier in Capt. Ezekiel Ladd's company, Col. Bedel's regiment, from April 1, 1778, May, 1779, acting as Issuing Commissary from Jan. 1, 1778, to May, 1779.

what was killed or wounded. I escaped again unhurt. Our loss was betwixt 400 and 500 killed, wounded, and prisoners. We took 385 prisoners, besides what we killed and wounded. We took two twenty-four-pounders and a sixty-four-pound carronade, and a ten-and-a-half-inch mortar, drove them so hard that they spiked a twenty-four-pounder themselves, and so completely routed them they have retreated back to Chippewa in disgust. We now live in peace. Deserters from them, since, say that their loss was estimated at rising 1,000 in killed, wounded, and prisoners. . . . Since I came into Canada this time, every major save one, every lieutenant-colonel, every colonel that was here when I came and has remained here, has been killed or wounded, and I am now the only general officer out of seven that has escaped.

"JAMES MILLER."

1802, he obtained a charter for building a bridge across the Connecticut, opposite Haverhill Corner, got the charter extended for two years in 1804, completed it in 1806, and remained sole owner of it until carried off by a freshet. It was then, as now, known as "Bedel's Bridge." He was also a large landed proprietor, and one of the purchasers and settlers of the "Indian Stream Territory," which purchase was made of certain Indians of the St. Francis tribe, formerly resident in the north part of the State.

He was repeatedly a Selectman of Haverhill, Representative of the town in 1798 and 1817, and Justice of the Peace for nearly thirty years. In 1812 he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel in the United States Army, and commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel of the Eleventh Regiment of United States Infantry, ranking from July 6, 1812. May 8, 1812, he took command of "the District of New-Hampshire for Recruiting," rendezvous at Concord, with orders to recruit seven companies. By the 16th of September, in spite of many obstacles, he had recruited 397 men, and had marched them in person to Burlington. Sept. 26, 1812, Col. Clark, in command of the Eleventh, left Burlington; and Lieut.-Col. Bedel was in command of the regiment until Aug. 22, 1813. From this time, such was his great executive ability, until September, 1814, Lieut,-Col. Bedel was kept by his superior officers upon detached duty, requiring energy and perseverance, and had no opportunity to participate in those battles in which his regiment had gained, by its valor, the title of the "Bloody Eleventh." Of course, a soldier from boyhood, he chafed under this deprivation; and, when opportunity offered, he hastened to the front to take command of his regiment, which, by the battles of Chippewa and Lundy's Lane, was without a field-officer. He was in season to join Gen. Brown, when he assumed the command of Fort Erie, Sept. 2, 1814. At the memorable sortie of Sept. 17, Lieut.-Col. Bedel, with the Eleventh, at his particular solicitation, had the honor of leading Gen. Miller's column, and, being in the advance, disabled three guns, took twenty-four prisoners, and brought them from the field before the engagement became general, and otherwise so distinguished himself as to be honorably noticed by his superior officers. After this engagement, Lieut.-Col. Bedel was promoted to the Colonelcy of his regiment, -a promotion long before deserved, his commission bearing date Sept. 4, 1814. Upon the withdrawal of our forces from Canada. Gen. Brown's division, of which the Eleventh was a part, was ordered to Sackett's Harbor. There Col. Bedel remained with his regiment until the reduction of the army. Upon retiring from the army, he found his affairs in an embarrassed state. from which, with all his energy, he could not retrieve them; and from wealth, owing to the misconduct of others, he was reduced to poverty. A friend who knew him well thus writes of him: "At one time he owned more than half the township of Bath, and a considerable portion of Haverhill, besides his lordly Indian domain on paper; yet, at the day of his departure for another world, he owned not an inch of land in the world he gladly left behind. May his charity and benevolence here, meet its reward in the future!" Gen. Bedel died at Bath, Jan. 13, 1841, in the seventy-seventh year of his age.

Gen. Miller passed the enemy's intrenchments between batteries No. 2 and No. 3, according to Gen. Brown's orders, and in so doing met a most terrific fire. Gen. Ripley, seeing the severe conflict, sent Lieut.-Col. Upham, with a portion of the gallant Twenty-first, to his assistance; and, in thirty minutes from the commencement of the attack, "batteries No. 2 and No. 3, the enemy's intrenchments, and two block-houses were in our possession. Soon after, battery No. 1 was abandoned by the British. The guns in each were spiked by us, or otherwise destroyed, and the magazine of No. 3 blown up. Thus," says Gen. Brown, "one thousand regulars, and an equal number of militia, in one hour of close action, blasted the hopes of the enemy, destroyed the fruits of fifty days' labor, and diminished his effective force 1,000 men at least." And thus, too, had the gallant Eleventh and Twenty-first Regiments, made up largely of men of New-Hampshire, again an opportunity to add to their laurels those won upon one of the most noted and severe conflicts of the war of 1812.

Meantime, Plattsburg being left in a defenceless state from the withdrawal of troops, an attack was planned against that post by the British, and at the same time against the American fleet upon Lake Champlain, at anchor in the harbor of Plattsburg. The British army, under Gov. Provost, approached Plattsburg on the 6th of September, and commenced erecting batteries; while the militia from New York and Vermont were continually arming for the protection of Plattsburg. On the 11th day of September, Commander Downie, with the British fleet, appeared off Plattsburg; and soon the battle began, with the American fleet under Commander McDonough, for the mastery of the This was the signal for the attack of the land forces under Provost, who was met with promptness and spirit by Gen. Macomb. The conflict was severe, both on the land and the water; but, after two hours and a half of hard fighting, the shout ran down the American lines announcing McDonough's victory. The fire of the British became fainter and fainter; and at length they retired to their intrenchments, and in the night made a precipitate retreat. Our loss on land and water was less than 230 men; while the British loss in wounded, deserters, and killed was estimated at 2,500. Thus closed the campaign on the Northern frontier. But we were less fortunate at the South. Washington was taken, and most of the national edifices destroyed. But, in an attempt upon Baltimore, the British fleet was repulsed by our troops at Forts McHenry and Covington; and the commander of the British land forces retreated, and the following day re-embarked. The fleet soon after left Chesapeake Bay.

Our gallant navy still maintained its reputation upon the ocean and the lakes.

At Pensacola, when the British had landed a force, and arms and ammunition to distribute among the Indians of Florida, Gen. Jackson, in October, exhibited his usual decision and promptness. The Spanish Governor was remonstrated with in vain for affording protection to our enemies. Gen. Jackson at once marched his army into the city, stormed the fort, and drove the British out of Florida. Returning to Mebile, he then learned of the contemplated attack upon New Orleans. He immediately marched his troops for the protection of that city, in almost a defenceless state. He at once called for troops, and commenced fortifying the city. The fortifications progressed with energy under Jackson's controlling hand. Troops came down from Kentucky and Tennessee; and on the 8th of January, 1815, Gen. Jackson won the glorious victory of New Orleans that immortalized his name, and closed "the war of 1812."

A treaty of peace had been concluded at Ghent in December, and arrived, by special messenger, amid the rejoicings for this noted victory; and rejoicings long and loud for both events went upward through the length and breadth of our land. But nowhere were the people more grateful for the return of peace than in New-Hampshire.

The Legislature, in June, 1815, passed the following resolution unanimously, which was but the echo of public sentiment in this State:—

"Whereas, Since the last session of the Legislature, the war lately commenced by the government of the United States against Great Britain having come to a close, and all classes of citizens having been emulous of each other in expressions of joy and congratulation upon the removal of its calamities by the restoration of the invaluable relations of amity and commerce between the two countries: And whereas, many of the officers, seamen, and soldiers of the United States, during the progress of the war, having in a very distinguished manner supported the honor of the American name by having in many signal instances most gallantly and successfully defended the soil and the rights of their country, and thereby happily contributed to sustain and perpetuate that high character for military skill and prowess acquired during our Revolutionary contest; therefore—

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened, That this Legislature, in common with their fellow-citizens, duly appreciate the important services rendered to the country, upon the ocean, upon the lakes, and upon the land, by officers, seamen, and soldiers of the United States, in many brilliant achievements and decisive victories, which will go down to posterity as an indubitable memorial that the sons of those fathers who fought the battles of the Revolution have imbibed from the same fountain that exalted and unconquerable spirit which insures victory, while it stimulates to the exercise of humanity and courtesy to the vanquished; and, were it not invidious to particularize when so many appear justly entitled to distinction, this Legislature could not fail to recognize and designate, with sentiments of peculiar pride and pleasure, many of the hardy and independent citizens of New-Hampshire among those who enjoy the best claim to the grateful remembrance of their country."

In 1815, a new edition of "all the general and public statutes" then in force was published under the supervision of Hon. Jeremiah Smith. The Militia Law of 1808 remained in force, with such additions and alterations as had been made during the seven preceding years. These were few and of no essential importance. A single regiment had been added in 1809, and other minor changes had been made, noticed in the Report for 1866.

In June, 1813; an act was passed directing certificates to be obtained by soldiers unable to do military duty, from selectmen of towns and surgeons of regiments, certifying their inability, which should excuse them for one year; forbidding selectmen or surgeons taking pay for such certificates, and fixing fine for so doing; providing manner of collecting fines; repealing the section of the law of 1808 providing for certificates to persons unable to perform military duty; and explaining the section of the law of 1808 in relation to the rank of officers of cavalry.

Nov. 5, 1813, so much of the act of 1808 as required commissioned officers to be armed with a sword or hanger and a spontoon was repealed, and they required to be armed with sword or hanger only.

June 24, 1814, it was provided that, from and after the first Wednesday of June, 1815, the Adjutant-General should pay to the commander of each company in this State two dollars annually, to be appropriated by them for the purchase and repair of musical instruments for the use of said companies.

June 30, 1818, an act was passed by the Legislature that each commanding officer of a company make, or cause to be made, a return of his company to the commander of his regiment, before the first day of August annually, on forfeiture of ten dollars for neglect of such duty; that the commander of each regiment make a return of the same to the brigade-major of his brigade before the first day of September annually, on penalty of thirty dollars for neglect of such duty; and that each brigade-major make a return of his brigade to the Adjutant-General before the first day of October annually, on penalty of paying a fine of thirty dollars for neglect of such duty.

The fines for breach of the act were to be recovered by bill, plaint, or information in any court having jurisdiction; and such fines, when recovered from commanders of companies, were to be appropriated for music in the companies whose officers had been fined, and the fines recovered from commanders of regiments and brigade-majors to be paid over to the Adjutant-General.

This act also repealed so much of the act of 1808 as required officers to reside within the limits of their commands, in such towns as then or might afterwards contain one entire regiment.

July 1, 1819, a radical change was made in the militia laws of the State by the passage of a new act, repealing all preceding laws upon the subject, but providing that all officers then in commission should continue in commission, with same powers as before. It abolished the division of regiments into battalions, each under the command of a major; but, otherwise, the number and locality of each regiment, brigade, and division remained the same as under the former law.

It provided for the enrolment of all resident white male citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, with certain special and conditional exempts; and that the conditional exempts, engine-men excepted, including all enrolled between the ages of forty and forty-five years, should pay to the selectmen of the town or district in which such exempt resided two dollars annually on or before the first Tuesday of May. It prescribed the division, brigade, and regimental officers and their arms, - also, the arms of noncommissioned officers and privates; the number of companies of light infantry or grenadiers, artillery, and cavalry to a regiment, and their officers, arms, and equipments; how rifle companies might be formed, and how armed and officered, and how independent companies might be formed; provided music-money for the various companies, standards for cavalry, artillery, and infantry; that the commanding officer of each company should parade his company on the first Tuesday of May annually for inspection, and on two other days beside the first Tuesday of May and the regimental muster; directed the manner of warning; that the selectmen of towns and districts should furnish refreshments for the non-commissioned officers and privates in their several towns and districts, and stipulated fines for neglect of that duty; exempted uniforms, arms, and equipments from attachment, and officers or soldiers from arrest when going to or from military duty or court-martial: provided that no non-commissioned officer or private should discharge gun or pistol on muster day or evening in or near any public highway, place of parade, or house, without leave first obtained from a commissioned officer; for the building of gun-houses; the number and rank of the Governor's staff; provided that the Adjutant-General should attend all public reviews, where the Commander-in-chief should review, and prescribed his other duties; that such compensation should be made him from time to time as the Legislature should think just; provided that there should be an Adjutant and Inspector-General to each division, with the rank of Colonel, and prescribed his duties, -also, the duties of brigade-majors and inspectors, adjutants of regiments, orderly sergeants, sergeant-majors, quartermaster sergeants, and fife and drum majors; prescribed the manner and time of making company, regimental, brigade, and division returns; establishing the office of Quartermaster-General, and prescribing his duty; attaching penalty to neglect of making returns by all officers from whom returns were ordered, and directing manner of collecting the same; prescribing the system of tactics to be followed, the number of members of a regimental or drum-head court-martial, and how the expenses of courts-martial should be paid; prescribing the formation of regiments, and rank of companies, when on duty; giving power to commanders of regiments and companies to reduce non-commissioned officers to the ranks when deserving of punishment; empowering the fieldofficers of regiments to decide upon the color and fashion of the uniform of cavalry, artillery, light infantry, and grenadiers; ordering officers and privates to keep themselves equipped, selectmen to furnish poor privates with equipments, and stipulating fines for neglect of such duty; prescribing the manner of ordering and holding courts-martial, and in giving and stipulating their authority and powers; prescribing the duties of the Judge-Advocate; prescribing compensation of courts-martial and of inquiry, and witnesses of, and how paid; ordering how military watches, guards, or detachments of militia were to be made, how furnished with provisions, and prescribing penalty for neglect of such duty; authorizing the Captain-General to appoint signals of alarm; making provision for the heirs of those killed in service; directing manner of obtaining certificates of inability to perform military duty; exempting members of engine companies; fixing limits and bounds for parade; attaching penalty to persons refusing to give information to enrollingofficers; enacting seventeen articles including sundry regulations of minor importance; authorizing all fines or forfeitures for breach of the law to be recovered by action, bill, plaint, or information in any court having jurisdiction; providing for annual musters for inspection and service, limiting the times of holding the same, and directing how the orders for the same should be issued; prescribing the duty of the major-generals as to reviews; authorizing clerks of companies to collect fines and forfeitures, and describing the process of so doing; and appropriating to clerks of companies one-fourth of all fines and forfeitures collected by them, the balance to be appropriated for the company expenses, as a majority of the officers of the company should direct.

But this law of 1818 was not allowed a fair trial, as, Dec. 22, 1820, it was repealed and another law passed in its stead. This law added some new features. It provided, among other things, that the commanding officer of a company should call out his company by his own order once a year, and no more, aside from the annual inspection in May; abolished the office of Adjutant and Inspector General of Divisions, and substituted that of Inspector of Divisions; made it the duty of the adjutants of the regiments to inspect the same at their annual musters, specifying that returns should be made of companies to the adjutants of regiments, and by them directly to the Adjutant-General; provided that the Governor might order the Adjutant-General to perform the duties of the Quartermaster-General, if there should be a vacancy in that office, or if the Quartermaster-General should live at a distance from the seat of government; empowering the commissioned officers of companies, with the commanders of regiments, to reduce noncommissioned officers to the ranks for misdemeanors; providing that all officers should reside within the limits of their commands, - that the commanding officers of regiments should assemble the officers of their commands once each year at some convenient and central place within the limits of the regiments, for instruction by some person qualified therefor; that major-generals should review three regiments in their divisions each year, and the brigadiers such regiments in the brigades as were not reviewed by the major-generals; that, in time of peace, no greater body of militia than a regiment should be called together except by permission of the Commander-in-chief; that the places of review should be as central as convenience would permit; that, where regiments were so extensive as that part of the soldiers would be obliged to march more than fifteen miles, the field-officers of such regiments should have power to order the regiment out in two divisions on different days; and designating certain sections of the Militia Law to be read, or caused to be read, by the captain of each company, at its annual inspection in May.

Under this law, the organization of the militia of the State was as follows: -

June 27, 1821, an additional act was passed, authorizing the captain or commanding officer of a company having no non-commissioned officers to order privates in such company to warn the men belonging to such company to mee for any inspection, training, or muster; and providing, it case such soldier so ordered should refuse or neglect to notify and warn all such men, he should forfeit and pathe sum of two dollars for every man he should neglect to warn. The act also specified that the captains of companies should make their returns to the regimental quartermasters within ten days after the annual inspection in May; that the regimental quartermasters should make their return to the Quartermaster-General within twenty-four days after the annual training in May; and that, if any such office should neglect to make such returns within the times specified, he should forfeit and pay the sum of twenty dollars.

June 26, 1822, an act was passed dividing the Secon Regiment, and providing that the companies at Dove and Somersworth should constitute the Second Regimen and those at Rochester, Farmington, and Milton the Thirty-ninth Regiment, to be attached to the Secon Brigade.

July 2, 1822, an additional act was passed, directing i what manner the annual allowance of twelve dollars t each company of artillery should be expended; defining the authority of captains on days of inspection in May the duties of division and brigade inspectors in certain cases; providing books for quartermasters' records; specif ing the times when the captains should make their return to the adjutants and quartermasters, when the latter shoul make their returns to the Adjutant-General and Quarte master-General, and providing that such officers should pay for each neglect of such duty, the sum of twenty dollars empowering the Commander-in-chief to accept the resign tion of officers in certain cases; providing the grade an number of officers constituting courts-martial, and defining the powers of the same; directing the manner of forming regiments in line; exempting the students of Dartmout College from military duty; and repealing certain clause of the Militia Law of 1820.

June 12, 1824, an additional act was passed, enacting that all officers who held commissions in the militia prior to and on the 22d of December, 1820, and who had held commissions for four years and been discharged, and all officers who might thereafter hold commissions for four years and be discharged, should be absolutely exempted from military duty.

July 2, 1825, an act was passed, making it unlawful for any persons, excepting those belonging to companies of artillery, to remove cannon, or any of the apparatus pertaining thereto, from any gun-house or other place where kept, in order to use the same, without written permission from the commanding officer of the company to which said ordnance belonged, and attaching a penalty of not less than five dollars, nor more than twenty, for every such offence; and the party offending to pay double the amount of injury sustained by such ordnance or apparatus in consequence of such taking or removal; also, providing that, if any injury should be done to any cannon or its apparatus by persons not belonging to a company of artillery, and who should have permission from the proper officer, such persons should pay a sum equal to the injury sustained; also, providing that, if any person should injure or break open any gunhouse, he should pay a fine of not less than five dollars, nor more than twenty, for every such offence; and directing how the fines in the several cases might be collected, and how to be appropriated when collected.

There were no more additions to, or alterations of, the militia laws of the State until 1829; and the militia of the State attained a deservedly high reputation for efficiency. In 1829, Jan. 2 and March 9, a new militia law was passed, making material changes in the law of 1820. This law was formed and reported by a "committee on the revision of the laws," consisting of Chief Justice William M. Richardson,* Col. Samuel D. Bell, and John Porter, Esq. They ^{*} Hon. William Marchant Richardson was born at Pelham, Jan. 4,1774, and graduated at Harvard University in the class of 1797. After leaving the University, he devoted himself to teaching, and was the Preceptor of Lancaster Academy for a time, reported four bills, concerning the provisions relative to the militia, and comprising Chapters 3, 4, 5, and 6 of Title and subsequently Preceptor of the Academy in Groton, in which position he remained until his admission to the bar. He finished the study of his profession in the office of Samuel Dana, Esq., of Groton, Mass., with whom he formed a partnership in business. Upon the election of Gen. Varnum to the United States Senate in 1811, Mr. Richardson was elected as his successor in the House of Representatives from that district. He was re-elected, but resigned his seat in 1814, for the purpose of removing to Portsmouth, N.H., where he established himself in his profession. In 1816, he was appointed Chief Justice of the Superior Court of this State. In 1819, Chief Justice Richardson took up his residence in Chester, where he resided until his death. Judge Richardson was remarkable for his industrious habits. Aside from his judicial duties, he prepared for publication most of the first nine volumes of the New-Hampshire Reports. In addition, he published "The New-Hampshire Justice," "The Town Officer," and had also prepared for the press "A Treatise upon the Office and Duties of Sheriffs"; and during the same time was chairman of the committee raised by the Legislature, June, 1826, to "revise and collect together the provisions of different statutes upon the same subject, and of arranging and publishing a new edition of the laws," which duty he performed very acceptably to the public. His judicial labors were highly appreciated, and Dartmouth College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Judge Richardson, as a jurist, ranked among the eminent men of his time. One who knew him well, and knew what he had done, said of him, "It will not derogate from the merits of any individual to say, that no one in the State has done so much, in the department of the law, to entitle himself to be deemed a public benefactor." Judge Richardson died at Chester, March 23, 1838, in the sixty-fifth year of his age.

Col. Samuel Dana Bell is the son of the late Gov. Samuel Bell, and was born in Francestown, Oct. 9, 1798. He graduated at Harvard University in the class of 1816, and read law with the Hon. George Sullivan, of Exeter. He entered the bar of Rockingham, Feb. 20, 1820. He first established himself in the practice of his profession in 1820, at "Meredith Bridge." where he continued about six months, when he removed to Chester.

He was appointed Quartermaster of the Seventeenth Regiment, April 10, 1821; Notary Public, June 26, 1822; Solicitor of the County of Rockingham, June 14, 1823; Adjutant of the Seventeenth Regiment, Aug. 26, 1823; Justice of the Peace for the County of Rockingham, Nov. 10, 1823; Judge-Advocate of the Third Brigade, Dec. 10, 1824; elected a Representative from Chester in the Legislature for 1825 and '26; on the committee to revise the statutes of the State, June 30, 1826; Major of the Seventeenth Regiment, June 30, 1826; was elected Clerk of the House of Representatives June 6, 1827; appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Seventeenth Regiment, June 26, 1827; re-elected Clerk of the House of Representatives, June 4, 1828; re-appointed Solicitor of Rockingham, June 14, 1828, but did not accept; appointed Colonel of the Seventeenth Regiment, June 18, 1828; resigned as Clerk of the House, Nov. 21, 1828; resigned and discharged as Colonel of the Seventeenth Regiment, May 13, 1830; appointed Cashier of the Exeter Bank in 1830, and removed to Exeter. He held this position until 1836, when, in October of that year, he removed to Concord, and entered upon the practice of his profession. May 2, 1839, he removed to Manchester, where he has since resided. In 1840 he was appointed at the head of the commission to revise the statutes; and, upon the adoption of a city government by Manchester, he was appointed Justice of the Police Court, Sept. 28, 1846. He held this office until his appointment as Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, June 25, 1848. Aug. 31, 1849, he was appointed an Associate Justice of the Superior Court. In 1854 the degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon him by Dartmouth College. He held the office of Associate Justice until Aug. 31, 1859, when he was appointed Chief Justice of the Superior Court. This office he resigned, the resignation to take effect Aug. 1, 1864, and retired to private life, holding no public office except the one first conferred upon him, - that of Notary Public. After retiring from the bench, he has been the same diligent student as before.

XC. of the Revised Statutes of 1830. The committee furnished a brief of this Militia Law, explaining some of its essential provisions, and their difference from the preceding laws. They remark of the Militia Law thus: "The principal statute relating to the militia, from its length and the method of its arrangement, is of difficult reference. The committee have thought this inconvenience might be lessened by dividing the subject, and placing those parts of the law, which are most rarely used, in separate bills. With this view they report four bills on the subject."

Of Chapter 3, "An Act relating to the Powers and Duties of certain Officers of the Militia," they remark: "The provisions of this bill may be found in Sections 8, 9,

In addition to his ordinary labors, Judge Bell has found time to attend to literary pursuits, and few men among us are better posted in the sciences. It was the remark of a noted master-mechanic of the city, that, when Judge Bell came into the shop, he always "laid aside his tools to listen; for the Judge could tell him more about steam and steam-engines than he knew himself." And so of other scientific matters; he studied them, and what he studied he understood.

He assisted Judge Richardson in publishing "The New-Hampshire Justice," published "The Justice and Sheriff," edited a second edition of "The Town Officer," and was upon the commission of 1826, '27, and '28 for collecting and arranging the statutes; on that of 1840 and '41 for revising the statutes; and again upon the commission of 1865, '66, and '67 for revising and publishing "The General Statutes."

Few men in our State have had more of the confidence of their fellow-citizens. and few men have better deserved that confidence. In whatever position he has been placed, he has brought to it a knowledge and an untiring industry that has ever rendered him successful. Aside from his public duties, ever met and performed, he has had the inclination, and found the time, to engage in all matters of public improvement; and the city of Manchester owes many of the improvements that adorn it to his generous impulse and enlightened foresight. Its cemetery, its schools and school-houses, its public squares, and last, though not least, its public library, are mainly owing to his foresight and generous patronage; while the State at large is indebted to him for sweeping away many of the cobwebs of technicalities and red-tape that have long encumbered the courts of justice. Having the confidence of his fellow-citizens and the regards of a host of friends, Judge Bell, though somewhat afflicted by disease, is enjoying a quiet and philosophical repose; calmly awaiting the summons to appear before the Omniscient Judge, with the firm conviction that "the Judge of all the earth will assuredly do right."

John Porter, Esq., was of Derry. He was born in Bridgewater, Mass., Feb. 26, 1776, and graduated at Dartmouth College in the class of 1803. He read law in the office of A. Hutchinson, Esq., of Lebanon, N.H., and commenced the practice of his profession at Londonderry. He represented that town in the Legislature in 1817 and '27, and the town of Derry (a part of Londonderry incorporated as a town) in 1828, '30, '33, '35, '41, '42, '44, and '47. Mr. Porter was "a gentleman of the old school," modest and retiring in his manners, methodical in his habits; a well-read lawyer; an honest, upright man, and, as such, enjoyed the confidence of the community in a high degree. He died Dec. 4, 1857, aged eighty-two years.

15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 25, 28, 37, 38, 39, 41, 42, 43, and 44 of the Statutes 1820; 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 of Statutes 1822, Chapter 37; Sections 6 and 7 of Statutes 1821, Chapter 30; Section 2 of Statutes 1821, Chapter 1; and Statutes 1824, Chapter 48.

"Section 6 provides that the Adjutant-General shall inspect. The object of this provision is to introduce a more correct and uniform method of inspection than is supposed generally to prevail; and, at the same time, by bringing the several regiments under the personal observation of that officer, to enable him to provide appropriate remedies for such defects, in the mode of carrying into effect the militia laws, as properly come within his province.

"Section 13 makes it the duty of each colonel to muster his regiment annually; and makes his orders for that purpose imperative, whether they are agreeable to those of his superiors or not. The object of this is to supersede the necessity of proving the orders of the major and brigadier generals; the orders of the colonel by the existing being of no force, unless they are in accordance with those of his superiors, to procure which is attended with trouble and useless expense.

"Section 15 prescribes certain duties to regimental quartermasters, substantially those usually performed by them.

"Section 16 is designed to obviate what is believed to be now the greatest defect of the militia system,—that very many able-bodied men avoid the performance of military duty by improperly obtaining surgeon's certificates. Many disabilities exist which cannot be determined with certainty from a casual examination; and it is believed that many hundreds of robust and athletic men obtain certificates every year entirely upon the strength of representations made by them to the surgeons. Such representations are often proved to be false, and the deception practised upon the surgeon is made a matter of boasting. In many of these cases, as the law at present is, the surgeon, judging honestly upon the circumstances before him, cannot be blamed. It is supposed that this difficulty may be in some degree remedied by requiring all applicants for certificates to be under oath, and publicly made and decided upon. There is a class of cases where the disability is necessarily permanent; and in these instances no benefit can result from limiting the exemption to one or two years.

"Section 18 transfers the duty of making inspection returns to the captains of companies, who are now the officers properly responsible."

Of Chapter 4, "An Act relating to Courts-martial and Courts of Inquiry," they say: "This bill embraces the provisions of the present law, relating to military courts and the duties of judge-advocates, without material alteration. Those provisions may be found in Sections 30 to the 34th, inclusive, of the Statutes of 1820."

Of Chapter 5, "An Act relating to the Organization and Equipment of the Militia, and for other purposes," they say: "Section 11 provides for a case of not unfrequent occurrence,—that of companies becoming so much reduced in point of numbers as to defeat the object of their organization. The other provisions of this bill will be found in Sections 2, 3, 7, 11, 12, 13, 24, 25, 27, 35, 36, 43, 45, and 46 of Statutes 1820; Statutes 1824, Chapter 34; Sections 1 and 8 of Statutes 1822, Chapter 37; and Statutes 1822, Chapter 11."

Of Chapter 6, "An Act imposing Fines for neglect of Military Duty, and for other purposes," they say: "Section 3. By the existing law, the obligation to perform military duty is imposed on those only who are duly enrolled, —an unimportant circumstance being made essential. By this section the liability is imposed on all persons liable to be enrolled. By another bill it is proposed to make it the duty of captains to enroll; the neglect of which will of course be punishable, but will not serve to exonerate any from military duties.

"Section 6. A clause in this section provides that the insertion of any person's name in the company's orders shall be evidence of his enrolment.

"Section 8. The orders and return under oath of a sergeant that he has warned any private are made evidence of notice by the statute now in force, provided such orders and return are duly recorded in the orderly-book. This qualification is productive of inconvenience, and is therefore omitted. A clause is inserted making a copy of the record of such orders and return evidence.

"Section 9. The law now authorizes captains to warn their companies on parade verbally, but makes no provision relative to the proof of such warning. The method is convenient for the officers and soldiers, and this section is proposed to remedy that defect.

"Section 12 imposes a certain fine on soldiers guilty of disobedience, &c. The present law makes such soldiers liable to be tried by a drum-head court-martial, as it is called. Few officers have sufficient knowledge of the law to conduct such a trial properly; and various mistakes, which they might consider of trivial importance, would subject the officer, proceeding to collect a fine under their sentence, to a ruinous lawsuit.

"Section 14 requires a roll to be made of delinquencies, and makes such roll, or a copy of the record of it, admissible as evidence of the offences stated in it. The object is to avoid subjecting officers to any unnecessary expense in procuring evidence.

"Section 16 gives to the prosecuting officer an election to prosecute minors, or their parents or guardians; a suit against the parent (a pauper, perhaps) being sometimes wholly ineffectual, while, if the minor were personally liable, the duty would be performed, or the fine promptly recovered.

"Sections 18, 19, and 20 are proposed as substitutes for Sections 50 and 51 of the law of 1820.

"It is now the duty of the clerks of companies, to which they are bound by their oaths, to file an information against all offending soldiers who are not excused by the commanding officer of the company. No discretion is given to the clerk, nor has he any interest in the prosecution beyond the paltry share of the fines given him by the law; yet he is deemed a plaintiff in a civil action, and subjected to all the expense and hazard of a party pursuing his private rights for his individual benefit: and many cases have occurred where a conscientious officer, in the honest attempt to perform his duty in enforcing the law, has been subjected to the loss of his property, and little less than utter ruin. In consequence of this circumstance, in many parts of the State, suitable persons cannot be found who are willing to undertake the duties of this office, and no fines can be collected. The committee are satisfied that the militia system should by no means be abandoned, but that, on the contrary, it should be rendered as perfect as practicable; and no part of the law is so susceptible of improvement as that which relates to the collection of fines. Under this impression, the committee recommend that the present system of prosecution for fines should be abandoned; and that offences of this kind, like other public offences and violations of the law, should be prosecuted by a complaint under oath before a justice of the peace; and that the proceedings should be similar to those in prosecutions for breaches of the peace, except that a summons should be substituted for a warrant to arrest the offender. These sections are designed to carry into effect the change proposed.

"The remaining sections of this bill embrace substantially provisions found in Sections 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, 12, 36, 40, 48, 49 of Statutes 1820; Section 9 of Statutes 1822, Chapter 37; and Section 1 of Statutes 1821, Chapter 21.

"The first, fourth, and eighth clauses of Section 43, Statutes 1820, are omitted as unnecessary; and the ninth clause as conferring a privilege, and in no degree adding to the disgrace of crime. The first four sections of the Statutes of 1821, Chapter 30, are omitted, being obsolete; and the Statute of 1825, Chapter 66, seems not to require a revision."

The organization of the militia of the State under this law for 1830 was as follows:—

* Gov. Harvey was the son of Matthew Harvey of Sutton, and was born there June 21, 1781. He graduated at Dartmouth College in the class of 1806. Having completed the study of his profession in the office of Hon. John Harris, of Hopkinton, he commenced the practice of the law in that town in 1809. He represented the town of Hopkinton in the Legislature in 1814, '15, '16, '17, '18, '19, and '20, and was Speaker of the House of Representatives the last three years. He was elected Senator from Senatorial District No. 8 in 1825, '26, and '27, and was elected President of that body in each of those years. In 1821, he was elected a member of Congress, and was re-elected for a second term in 1823. In 1828, he was elected Councillor from the Hillsborough Councillor District, and again in 1829. He was elected Governor of the State in 1830, and, the same year, was appointed Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of New-Hampshire, which office he held until his death. In 1850, he removed to Concord, where he died. The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon him in 1855 by Dartmouth College. Gov. Harvey was a man of the most unexceptionable character in all the relations of life. In private life, in public office, as a man and a Christian gentleman, his example was ever for good. He died April 7, 1856, aged eighty-four years.

† Col. John H. Steele was a native of Salisbury, North Carolina. He was by trade a machinist. Following his vocation at Peterborough, he became an extensive manufacturer. He represented the town of Peterborough in 1829, and was elected Councillor from the Hillsborough District in 1840 and '41. He was elected Governor of New-Hampshire in 1844, and again in 1845. Col. Steele was a positive man, and one of industry and great energy of character. He was somewhat eccentric in manner and action, but ever bore the character of an upright and honorable man. He died at Peterborough, July 4, 1865.

Regiment, and the same year entered the bar, and commenced the practice of his profession at Gilmanton. In 1827 he was appointed Judge-Advocate as above, and held the office until 1831, when he removed to Exeter, where he soon gained an extensive practice, and a high reputation as an advocate. In 1846 he represented his adopted town in the Legislature. In 1848 he removed to Gilford, having been appointed Agent of "The Lake Company." In 1850 he was a Delegate from that town to the Convention for amending the Constitution of the State. In June, 1855, he was elected a Senator from this State, for the term of six years, in the United States Senate; but served but a part of his term, as he died at his residence, May 26, 1857, aged fifty-three years. Mr. Bell was a gentleman of quiet deportment and affable manner, a sound lawyer and eloquent advocate, and destined for higher positions in the State had his life been spared.

- * Gen. Solomon McNeil was the son of Lieut. John McNeil (see Adjutant-General's Report, vol. ii., for 1866, p. 118), and was born at Hillsborough, Jan. 15, 1782. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits a great part of his life, and was a pattern farmer, residing the latter part of his life upon the old homestead. He was appointed Major of the First Battalion of the Twenty-sixth Regiment in 1815, Lieutenant-Colonel of the same June, 1816, and Colonel, June, 1823. He was appointed Brigadier-General of the Fourth Brigade June, 1827, and Major-General of the Third Division in June, 1831, which office he resigned in 1833. Gen. McNeil, like his brother, Gen. John McNeil of the United States Army (see Adjutant-General's Report, vol. ii., for 1866, p. 118), was remarkable for his stature, being "six feet three in his stockings." He held his strength and activity in a remarkable degree in his old age, and at seventy-six years of age could perform feats of strength and agility hardly attainable by most men at forty. He was a man of somewhat eccentric habits, and fond of joke and repartee, those marked characteristics of the "Scotch-Irish." Gen. McNeil died Oct. 8, 1862, in the eighty-first year of his age.
- † John McNeil Wilson, of Bedford, was a son of James and Mary (McNeil) Wilson, of Francestown. After graduating and reading law, he relinquished literary for mercantile pursuits, and kept a store in Amherst. Not succeeding to his wishes, he resumed the practice of his profession at Bedford. Subsequently he practised his profession at Lowell, Mass., in company with John A. Knowles, Esq., of that city. After a residence in Lowell for some time, he removed to Chicago, Ill., where for some years he was an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of that State, and subsequently Chief Justice of the same.

the class of 1817, and from the Law School of Harvard College in 1820. He commenced the practice of his profession in his native town the same year. In 1821 he was appointed Adjutant of the Ninth Regiment. He was Assistant Clerk of the House of Representatives in 1829, and represented the town of Goffstown in the Legislature in 1830, '31, '32, '33, and '34; was appointed Judge-Advocate of the Fourth Brigade in 1822, and held the office until 1834; was appointed Solicitor for the County of Hills-borough in 1834, and held the office until 1837, when he was appointed Attorney-General of the State. In 1839 he removed to Nashua. He held the office of Attorney-General until 1842, when he was appointed to the bench of the Court of Common Pleas. He held this office until 1848, when impaired health demanded a less sedentary life; and he resigned his office of Judge to accept that of Superintendent of the Nashua and Lowell Railroad. Continued ill-health forced him to resign this office; and he died at Nashua Oct. 21, 1856, aged sixty-three years.

Judge Gove, in private and public life, sustained the character of an upright, honorable man. Ever of a slender constitution, yet his industry and energy led him to fill the various public offices with which he was honored with credit to himself and to the general acceptation of the public. He was equally firm in his friendship and in his enmity.

THE INDIAN STREAM WAR.

The Indian Stream Territory is that portion of the territory of New-Hampshire lying above the parallel of 45° north latitude, and between Hall's River and the Connecticut. In 1789, a committee was appointed by the Legislature of this State to establish the boundary lines between the District of Maine, the Province of Lower Canada, and New-Hampshire. This committee performed their duty, established the boundaries, and marked them by suitable monuments.

They made the head of Hall's River the northwest bound of our State, according to the true construction of the treaty of 1783. Hall's River is the northwest branch of the river Connecticut. This survey included all of the Indian Stream Territory. The next year, two families established themselves on Indian River, or "Indian Stream," as it is generally called, which rises in the highlands between Canada and New-Hampshire, and, running south through nearly the middle of the territory west of the Connecticut, empties into the same about six miles northeast of where that river receives the waters of its western tributary, Hall's River. "Indian Stream" gives the name to the territory through which it thus passes, embracing the lands on each side of Other families followed, led there by the fertility of the soil, or still more, perhaps, from the fact that it was distant from the pale of the law, as well as from that of civilization. In the course of a few years, it became the asylum of debtors avoiding importuning creditors, and criminals dreading or escaping from justice. As in most frontier settlements, the materials were often bad, and mostly crude and disjointed. As the population increased, however, the character of the people improved, but, as usual, the bad, crude, and disjointed materials showed themselves in the structure, and often to its great disparagement.

In 1812, the settlement became the asylum for smugglers; its distance from the other settlements of the State being so great, and the settlements in Canada so near, that detection was often impossible, and the "Indian Stream" became noted as a channel of illicit intercourse. A single man could readily "bring hundreds of dollars' worth of silks and satins into the settlement in his pack," and an "Indian sledge" would "bring thousands' worth of the same commodities through the woods in winter," and no one the wiser for pack or sledge load, except some accomplice in the settlement, ready to secrete smuggler and goods in case of necessity. To stop this trade, the government had to station a detachment of militia at Stewartstown during the summer and fall of 1812, and the spring, summer, and fall of 1813, as has already been named.

Meantime the settlement had been increased by a different element.

In 1798, Gen. Moody Bedel, of Haverhill, Nathaniel Wales, and one other, purchased of certain persons of the tribe or nation of the "St. Francis Indians" a tract of land commencing at the mouth of the Ammonoosuck River in Haverhill, thence straight eastwardly south of the White Mountains to Great Ossipee River, where it crosses the boundary line of New-Hampshire and Massachusetts (now Maine), thence on a straight line to the boundary line between the United States and Canada, as established by treaty, thence to Connecticut River, and thence down said river to the bound first mentioned.

This purchase was called "Philip's Grant" from the fact that it was alleged one Philip, an Indian and Sagamore of the Pigwocket tribe, but united with the St. Francis tribe, negotiated the purchase and signed the deed of the same. This Indian was known for a long time by the people in the northern and eastern part of the State as "King Philip." In 1804, Wales settled upon the purchase on the east bank of the Connecticut, near the "Indian Stream Settlement," and Bedel followed in 1811. They made an important acquisition to the settlements in that neighborhood, as they had means; made roads, built bridges, made other improvements, and made great efforts to induce emigrants to settle the territory. The war that soon followed took Gen. Bedel from the settlement, and the affairs of "Philip's Grant" went to ruin for want of a manager, at least for a time. "In 1820, Gen. Bedel again commenced a settlement in the territory at 'Bedel's Point,' nine miles in advance of any other settlers, and but about three miles from the outlet of Connecticut Lake." But, after a residence of five years, he gave up the enterprise, and contented himself with making surveys in the territory and attempting to get "Philip's Grant" confirmed by the Legislature. He was led to do this from the fact that, while engaged in prosecuting his settlement, the Legislature had been induced to ignore his Indian title by legislative action in 1820, and again in 1824; in the latter year quieting each settler in his "claim," if it did not exceed two hundred acres. Gen. Bedel had faced the cannon's mouth at "the sortie of Erie," but he could not successfully face the speculators and interested parties, however, about the Legislature. His petitions of 1828, '30, '34, and '35 for the confirmation of "Philip's Grant" were unheeded, and his title again ignored. The State claimed the lands, refused to part with its interest in them; and these lands, that might have made the old age of a brave soldier cheerful and comfortable, have been frittered away with but very little advantage to the State.

After the settlements on this territory had thus lingered along with but slow increase or progress for thirty years, a new element of discord was thrown among them. In 1819, the British and American commissioners attempted to establish the boundary line between New-Hampshire and the Province of Canada, but they could not agree upon the most western branch of Connecticut River. The American commissioners held that Hall's River was the one intended in the treaty, while the British commissioners pretended to be equally sure that it was not the one intended; and thus commenced the difficulty between the American and British governments as to our northwestern boundary line. British were evidently in the wrong, which was conceded by the Ashburton Treaty. In consequence of this disagreement, the local authorities of Canada claimed all the land west of Indian River, or between that river and Hall's River, being one half of the "Indian Stream Territory." This claim had its advocates and opposers among the inhabitants of the territory. The Provincial Government of Canada at one time located a township east of Hereford, on a portion of this territory, at least upon paper, by the name of Drayton; built a road from Hall's River to the Indian River; and in 1831 required the inhabitants to perform military duty. The inhabitants were mainly from Maine, New-Hampshire, and Vermont, though portions of them were from other States. As best suited their purposes, some of them claimed to belong at one time to Vermont, at another to Maine, then to the United States, then to Great Britain, and last to be a territory distinct from the United States or Great Britain; yet the government of New Hampshire exercised its control there, and its officers executed the processes of the courts there as occasion required. At length, increase of numbers and partisanship led certain of them to talk of resistance to the government of New-Hampshire. This portion of the community, however, were those and their abettors who had become amenable to the laws of this State by their crimes or misdemeanors. However, by establishing municipal regulations among themselves, sustained by the majority and a better public opinion, they succeeded in maintaining good order generally in the settlement. But, with such discordant materials and an increasing population, such a state of things could not long exist. The number of inhabitants was now between four hundred and five hundred; a number, in a well-regulated community, sufficient to insure unprincipled demagogues, men ambitious of rule, and men never so happy as when stirring up contention and strife.

It was understood between the two governments that, pending the settlement of the boundary question, neither should extend their jurisdiction farther over the disputed territory; but, in face of this understanding, the Canadian Government, through their local officers, compelled the inhabitants to perform military duty in 1831, and their civil magistrates attempted to exercise their functions there. These attempts at control, on the part of the Provincial Government of Canada, of course produced much excitement among the inhabitants from the States, and they applied to their friends in the States for assistance; but, receiving no great encouragement, they began to talk of forming an independent government for themselves. Meantime the indiscreet action, to call it by no harsher name, of two of the officials of New-Hampshire and Vermont, tended not a little to embarrass and excite the people of this settlement. They had ever carried their produce into Canada, and of course into the States, free of duty; but, in December, 1831, Gen. Lewis Loomis of New-Hampshire, and Theophilus Grant of Vermont, officers of the customs of the United States, exacted duties from the people of the Indian Stream Territory who brought their produce into New-Hampshire or Vermont, holding and proclaiming that these people were without the jurisdiction of the United States. manded duties to be paid, or required bonds for the payment of the same. Deeming these exactions illegal, several of the inhabitants took loads of produce into Vermont, and passed the Custom-house without stopping to pay duties; but their loads were seized and they forced to pay the duties, Mr. Grant refusing to take bonds for the same because they had passed his office. In fact, one man was obliged by Mr. Grant, it was alleged, to pay the money after he had entered his produce at the Collector's office. These proceedings, originating in cupidity and clearly illegal on the part of Loomis and Grant (as they were afterwards ordered by the Secretary of the Treasury to refund the money and give up the bonds), excited the people of the territory to a great degree, and afforded the malcontents and designing full scope for prosecuting their intentions. Some were for joining the Canadian province, others for seeking redress from the government of New-Hampshire, but the majority seemed decided upon an independent government for the territory until such time as the difficulty as to the boundary question should be settled.

Accordingly, on the 9th of July, 1832, the inhabitants of the territory, by notification, met, and, after discussion and deliberation, decided to establish an independent government, and adopted a constitution, which provided for an Assembly, consisting of all qualified voters of the territory; and a Council, to consist of five members to be chosen by the Assembly, and to constitute the executive department. This government was to exist until such time as the line should be established, and the people should know to what government they belonged. The officers were duly chosen under this constitution, and the government of "The United Inhabitants of Indian Stream Territory" put in operation.

A minority of the inhabitants were opposed of this procedure, and still adhered to the government of New-Hampshire; and these, of course, had no control in the new government. Much excitement ensued, as the new government determined to resist the serving of any process from the courts in New-Hampshire. Mr. Sheriff White,* of Lancaster, in the County of Coös, finding that he or his deputies were to be resisted in the performance of their duties, addressed a letter to the Secretary of the State of New-Hampshire, detailing the circumstances and asking for instructions. This communication was laid before the Governor and Council, and they determined to ask the opinion of the Attorney-General upon the subject. This was given, sustaining our right to the territory and to jurisdiction over the same. A copy of the opinion of the Attorney-General was sent to Mr. Sheriff White, together with a letter from His Excellency the Governor coinciding with the opinion of the Attorney-General, and expressing a determination to see the laws of the State executed. Copies of these papers were inclosed by Col. White to the malcontents of Indian Stream.

This was in December, 1834, and for a time the inhabitants seemed to submit. But they had bad advisers. One Alexander Rea, of Hereford, Lower Canada, a town adjacent to the Indian Stream Territory (a Justice of the Peace under the Provincial Government), and one Cumings, of Canaan, Vt., seem to have advised them to resistance. Rea was very active in the affairs of the territory, and seemed determined to make trouble, with a view of bringing the territory and its people under the Provincial Government. Thus advised, and the advice tallying with their own intentions, at a public meeting they voted to abide by their constitution, and to resist the laws of New-Hampshire.

^{*} Col. John H. White was the son of Moses White of Rutland, Mass., where he was born, April 19, 1792. Col. Moses White, the father, served through the war of the Revolution upon the staff of Gen. Moses Haren. Col. John H. White moved to Lancaster in 181-, and followed the vocation of a farmer. He was Adjutant of the Twenty-fourth Regiment in 1821, '22, and '23; Major of the same in 1824, and Colonel in 1825 and '26, when he resigned. In 1830, June 28, he was appointed Sheriff of the County of Coös, and resigned in 1838. He was elected Councillor for the Fifth Councillor District in 1840, and again in 1841. As Sheriff, during the "Indian Stream" difficulties, his duties were arduous and of great responsibility, but he performed them with great promptness, and at the same time judiciously. A man with less care and prudence might have greatly increased our border difficulties. Col. White was a man of the strictest integrity in all his acts, and died with the respect of the community at large, April 13, 1865, in the seventy-third year of his age.

Accordingly, on the 12th of March, 1835, William M. Smith, a deputy sheriff of Coös County, on attempting to arrest Clarke J. Haines and Reuben Sawyer, was resisted in his attempt by several men, and violently beaten and driven from the territory. On the next day, Milton Harvey, in attempting to attach property of a citizen of Indian Stream Territory, was violently opposed and his assistant beaten, and both forced to leave the territory. Such being the state of affairs, Mr. Sheriff White addressed a letter to the Secretary of the State of New-Hampshire detailing the facts, and asking a detachment of troops from the Twentyfourth Regiment of Militia, to assist him in the service of processes from the courts of Coös County. In his letter of March 30, 1835, Col. White says: "They are determined to resist the officers of the State to the utmost of their ability. They are now making preparations for repulsing any force which may be brought against them. I am credibly informed that they are building a block-building which they call a jail. Undoubtedly it is a place to intrench themselves in, should force be brought against them. Probably there is not another place in the United States, of its numbers, which contains more desperadoes; and it is believed that there are a number among them that would prefer death, rather than to come under our laws. They have completely intimidated those who prefer wholesome laws, and felt a desire to have the State take jurisdiction there. . . . I would mention the circumstance that these people have in their ranks twelve or fourteen Indians, who, I am told, have engaged to assist them in case of trouble."

After the resistance and ill-treatment of the officers of this State on the 12th and 13th of March, anticipating that the government of New-Hampshire would be notified of this state of affairs, the inhabitants of the territory held a public meeting, and chose John Haines as an agent to visit Mr. Sheriff White as to the affair. Mr. Haines was duly authorized by the "Council of Indian Stream," as follows:—

"At a special meeting of the inhabitants of Indian Stream held on the 20th instant, passed a resolve unanimously to abide by and support our own constitution and laws, agreeably to our oaths, until known to what government we properly belong, when our constitution is at an end. And, understanding that the High Sheriff of the County of Coös, in the State of New-Hampshire, by being misinformed or otherwise, has directed his deputies to serve precepts on persons and property in this place, therefore said inhabitants have chosen John Haines, of said Indian Stream, to converse with said sheriff for information upon this important subject.

"RICHARD I. BLANCHARD,

"WILLIAM WHITE,

"JEREMIAH TABOR,

"ABNER HYLAND,

"Burleigh Blood,

"ALANSON CUMINGS,

"E. C. SAWYER,

" Councillors of Indian Stream.

"Indian Stream, March 20, 1835."

Mr. Haines presented his credentials to Col. White, but could get no information from him save that he would place the situation of affairs before the Governor and Council of New-Hampshire, and they would probably take such action in the premises as would be just and proper. Col. White redeemed his promise by writing the letter of the 30th of March, from which the extract is given above.

On the 18th of April, the Assembly of Indian Stream met and passed an act making it perjury for violating the oath of allegiance to the Constitution of Indian Stream, and attaching as a penalty therefor disqualification as a witness in the courts of the territory, and confinement in the stocks not exceeding six hours. They also passed an act forbidding any sheriff, his deputy or other officer, residing in the territory of Indian Stream, or within the United States, and not appointed by the government of Indian Stream, performing the duties of such officer within the territory, upon penalty of paying a fine of one hundred dollars for each offence, and to be imprisoned until paid, at the discretion of the court.

Such a law as the last exposed the sinister motives of the malcontents. They legislated against the officers of the United States performing their duties within the territory, but had not a word of objection against those of the Province of Canada! They could come into the territory, make arrests, and force the inhabitants to perform military duty when they pleased! Their object was plain. Their so-called "Government of Indian Stream" was established under the auspices of the Provincial Government.

On the 18th of April, 1835, the minority of the people of the Indian Stream Territory sent a petition to the Governor of New-Hampshire, describing the government of the malcontents and some of their laws, exposing their hypocrisy, and asking to be protected.

Soon after, the majority sent a petition also, in which they attempted to palliate their conduct, acknowledged they had reported their affairs to the Provincial Government, abused their opponents, and asked the favorable consideration of His Excellency.

The Governor, His Excellency William Badger, laid the papers before the Legislature in June by special message. They were referred to a select committee, and that committee reported the following resolutions:—

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened, That the State of New-Hampshire should continue the possession of the Indian Stream Territory, and maintain the jurisdiction of the State over the same, until the question of boundaries, now in dispute between the United States and Great Britain, affecting the limits of said territory, shall be fully settled, and his Excellency the Governor be requested to render all necessary aid to the executive officers of the County of Coos in causing the laws of said State to be duly executed within the limits of said territory.

"Resolved, That it is inexpedient for the State, during the pendency of the controversy in relation to said boundaries, to make any disposition of the interest of the State in the lands of said Indian Stream Territory."

These resolutions were not only decisive as to the affairs of the Indian Stream Territory, but also as to the petition of Gen. Bedel to have his grant from King Philip confirmed. The State would control the Indian Stream Territory, and would not part with its interest in the same, during the pending question as to boundaries. The parties governed themselves accordingly. Gen. Bedel sold his claim, the malcontents at Indian Stream made preparations for resisting the laws of New-Hampshire, and the Executive of that State determined to maintain jurisdiction over the Indian Stream Territory at all hazards.

The action of the Legislature and the determination of the Executive were duly communicated to Col. White, and by him to the malcontents at Indian Stream. The immediate effect was to produce quiet for a time, but at length the Provincial Government began openly to show its hand. One McRea, a justice of the Province of Lower Canada, issued warrants in the name of the King, and they were duly served in the territory. Not content with this, he notified meetings of the inhabitants at two several times, and made inflammatory speeches to them, urging them to resist the laws of New-Hampshire, and promising them the assistance of the Provincial Government in such event.

The war of words continued warm, but harmless, until October, 1835, when it culminated in a collision. Of this affair the commissioners of New-Hampshire, sent to investigate the matter, thus report: "In October, 1835, William M. Smith, a Deputy Sheriff of Coös County, had a writ put into his hands for service against one John H. Tyler, an inhabitant of the disputed territory. Smith, not knowing Tyler, and also apprehending some resistance, procured one Richard I. Blanchard and John Milton Harvey to assist him, and then proceeded to Tyler's house for the purpose of making service of the writ. Not having found said Tyler at his house, they went in pursuit of him, agreeably to the directions which they had received, and soon met said Tyler. Smith then requested said Tyler to show him property, that it might be attached on the writ, which he refused to do. He was arrested by said Smith, who was proceeding with said Tyler in custody, when he was forcibly rescued from said Smith's possession by several of the inhabitants.

"Upon this, the individual before referred to, as the occasion of all the difficulties at this place, issued a warrant in the name of the King of Great Britain against said Smith, Blanchard, and Harvey for attempting to execute process there not issued by authority of the King of Great Britain, and sent it into the settlement for the purpose of having it served upon the individuals against whom it had issued. This was done with a full knowledge of the fact that this State had, by a resolution of the Legislature, determined to maintain its jurisdiction over the territory until the boundary line should be definitely and satisfactorily settled.

"By virtue of this pretended warrant, on the 22d day of October, A. D. 1835, said Blanchard was taken from his own dwelling-house by an armed body of men, with the express and avowed purpose of carrying him into Canada for trial, on the absurd charge of having assisted in serving a writ duly issued by the competent authority of the County of Coös.

"The news of this outrage was immediately spread through the adjacent towns, and excited very great indignation against its perpetrators. The inhabitants very generally, upon being notified of the fact, expressed a determination not to suffer their fellow-citizen thus to be taken from his home and carried out of the State, without an attempt at least, on their part, to rescue him. In pursuance of this determination, several citizens of the neighborhood went over the line dividing this State from the Province of Lower Canada, for the purpose of intercepting those who had said Blanchard in custody, and effecting his release. This was effected without any violence; and, so far from being done under the direction of any military officer, it was an entirely spontaneous assembly of citizens, aroused by what they deemed a gross outrage upon the rights of one of their fellow-citizens, subject to the direction of no military or civil officer of the State. How far this proceeding is to be palliated or justified, the wisdom of the Legislature may best The facts are here stated. After said Blanchdetermine. ard had been thus rescued, the individuals who had turned out for that purpose assembled at the store of Parmelee & Joy, in Canaan, Vermont. Among the number was William M. Smith, the deputy sheriff before spoken of who had previously arrested one John H. Tyler, who had been rescued from him in the manner before stated. offered a reward of five dollars to any one who would deliver said Tyler to him. A notion seemed very generally to prevail among those who were then present that said Tyler, having once been legally made a prisoner by the arrest of said Smith, might be retaken again wherever he could be This John H. Tyler was one of those who had had Blanchard in custody at the time he was rescued in the manner before stated. After Smith, the deputy sheriff, had offered this reward for the recapture of said Tyler, several of the individuals, who had left their homes for the avowed and express purpose of rescuing Blanchard, unadvisedly and improperly went over the line for the purpose of retaking Tyler, they having at that time the impression that they were justified in so doing. No sooner were these individuals over the line than they were set upon in a furious, boisterous, and outrageous manner by the individual before referred to as the cause of all the difficulty at the Indian Stream settlement, and the very individual who had issued the warrant by which Blanchard had been dragged from home as before stated.

"This individual came upon them while they were peaceably and quietly demeaning themselves, having offered or threatened violence to no one, and ordered them off the highway, and attempted to make prisoners of them, and called upon those who were with him to assist. The New-Hampshire citizens, not relishing the idea of thus being made prisoners, resisted, and, being assaulted with great violence by the inhabitants of Canada, their horses' bridles seized and stones thrown violently at them, defended themselves with such arms as they had with them, having taken them at the time they turned out for the rescue of Blanchard. We do not undertake to state with accuracy all the particulars of the skirmish which ensued upon this assault, but we are confident in the assertion that the first violence offered or threatened was that done to citizens of New-Hampshire by citizens of Canada. The result was, that the individual who commenced the brawl was violently seized and brought over the line into Vermont, and there detained some hours, and finally set at large."

Soon after this affair, a small guard was placed there, by order of the Governor, to afford protection to our citizens; but, the excitement still continuing, and the well-disposed citizens being in continual fear for their safety (which state of affairs was duly communicated to the Executive by an agent), Gov. Badger* issued the following order:—

"STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

"Nov. 7, 1835.

"To Joseph Low, Adjutant-General of said State.

"SIR,—It having been represented to me that a portion of the inhabitants of 'Indian Stream Territory,' so called, are now in a state of insurrection and rebellion against the government and laws of the State, and some military force being necessary (if the representations are true) to quell the insurrectionary movements, and restore order and regularity in the territory, and confidence in the laws of the State, I, therefore, wish you to repair to the spot with all reasonable expedition, ascertain the situation of the

^{*} His Excellency William Badger was the son of Gen. William Badger, of Gilmanton, where he was born in the year 1780. He was a farmer, as was his father. He represented the town of Gilmanton in the Legislature in 1810, '11, and '12. He was the Senator from District No. 6 in 1814, '15, and '16, and was President of that body in the latter year. He was appointed an Associate Justice of the Court of Common Pleas in 1816, and held the office until 1820. May 19, 1820, he was appointed Sheriff of the County of Strafford, and served in that capacity two terms, until 1830. Judge Badger was chosen Governor of the State for the years 1834 and '35. He held for many years the minor offices of his town, and was three times chosen to the Boards of Electors of President and Vice-President of the United States. Gov. Badger was a man of sound judgment and the strictest integrity, and, when determined upon a course of action, not to be swerved from it. His course upon the difficulties of "The Indian Stream Territory" received the hearty commendation of all parties, and, doubtless, saved us from a greater difficulty, —a war with Great Britain. He died Sept. 21, 1853, aged seventy-three years.

inhabitants as to their disobedience and rebellion against the State and its laws, and, if necessary, order out so much of the Twenty-fourth Regiment as will enable the executive officers of the county of Coos to execute the laws, and suppress and put down all insurrectionary movements, and restore order and submission to the laws of the State. And if, after advising with such friends as you can rely on, you should think the interests of the State and the safety of the inhabitants require a military guard to be stationed there, you will make the necessary arrangements. You will continue as long and make such regulations as you, in your discretion, may think necessary. You will, therefore, be governed in your procedure by the circumstances that may hereafter occur, which now cannot be foreseen.

"With much respect,

"Your obedient servant,

"WILLIAM BADGER."

In obedience to this order, Adjutant-General Low proceeded forthwith to the "Indian Stream Territory," and, finding things in a worse state even than had been represented, he immediately issued the following order to Col. Ira Young,* of the Twenty-fourth Regiment:—

"STATE OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

"Indian Stream Settlement, Nov. 13, 1835.

"GENERAL ORDERS.

"Ira Young, Esq., Colonel of the Twenty-fourth Regiment of the Militia of said State, will please to detach and order into service, and place at the disposal of John H. White, Esq., Sheriff of the County of Coos, one captain, one lieutenant, one ensign, four sergeants, two musicians, and forty-two privates, for three months, unless sooner discharged.

"By order of His Excellency the Commander-in-chief.

" Adjutant-General."

* Col. Ira Young was of Lancaster. He was born in Lisbon in 1794, and was the son of Col. Samuel Young, a very successful farmer and prominent man of that town.

The son read law in the office of James I. Swan, of Bath, and, when Mr. Swan died, about 1821, took his office and succeeded to his business; a sort of mutual arrangement, as Mr. Swan bequeathed him his extensive law-library. Mr. Young continued in the practice of the law in Lancaster till 1827, when his office, with his library and papers, was burned. He then moved to Colebrook and practised his profession, and at the same time took an active part in military affairs. He was appointed Captain of the company of cavalry in the Twenty-fourth Regiment, July 22, 1829; Major of the Regiment, July 21, 1832, and Colonel, June 25, 1833.

This order was obeyed with most commendable zeal by Col. Young, and, by three o'clock the following morning, enough of the detachment ordered out had arrived to warrant Sheriff White in attempting to make arrests in the territory. Of the proceedings that followed, the account of Gen. Low is given below:—

"Indian Stream Settlement, Nov. 14, 1835.

" To His Excellency Gov. Badger.

"SIR, — Upon my arrival in this territory I found the inhabitants impressed with a belief that the government of New-Hampshire was indifferent as to their jurisdiction over this territory, and that no further means would be taken to maintain it; consequently, those who had heretofore been friendly to the State were resolved at all hazards to resist the laws.

"I also learned that a party had combined, provided themselves with arms, and fortified themselves, with the avowed purpose of resisting the laws of the State of New-Hampshire, and claiming the protection of the Provincial Government of Lower Canada, and that a force was collecting in some of the border towns with the design of protecting the disaffected, and of driving from the settlement the small guard stationed there.

"Upon consultation with the High Sheriff, Col. Young, Gen. Loomis, Gideon Tirrell, Esq., Luther Parker, and others, who had accompanied me here, I had no doubt of the expediency of ordering the colonel of the Twenty-fourth Regiment to detach one captain, one lieutenant, one ensign, four sergeants, two musicians, and forty-two privates, and to place them at the disposal of the Sheriff of the County of Coos.

"This order was handed to the colonel of the Twenty-fourth Regiment last evening about six o'clock, and an express was immediately dispatched to the commanding officer of the Stewartstown company of infantry, with directions to collect a force as

In 1835, being in command of the Twenty-fourth Regiment, he was designated to lead the detachment ordered out by Gov. Badger to quell the insurrectionary movement at Indian Stream. He was appointed Brigadier-General of the Sixth Brigade, June 16, 1836, and Major-General of the Second Division, June 22, 1837. About 1838 he removed to Lancaster. About this time his health began to fail, and in 1845 he went to the Island of Cuba in hopes to restore it, where he died. The inscription upon his tombstone reads thus:—

"Gen. Ira Young, died at Havana, Island of Cuba, Nov. 17, A. D. 1845, aged 51 (fiftyone). This stone is erected to his memory as a token of respect, by his brethren of the bar, among whom he stood eminent, both for his courtesy and ability as a lawyer, and his high character for honor and integrity as a man." early as practicable, and to report to the rendezvous without delay. By three o'clock this morning, about twenty had arrived, some travelling nineteen miles on foot.

"Upon our arrival at the first settlement, an individual friendly to the malcontents was ascertained to be missing, and was supposed to have gone to give notice; but Capt. Mooney, who had taken the precaution of guarding all the avenues to the rendezvous of the insurgents, frustrated all attempts to apprise them of their danger by arresting a Canadian and one of our own citizens in the act of making their way towards the Applebee fortification.

"About three o'clock this morning, a guard, under command of Capt. Mooney, accompanied Mr. Blanchard, a deputy sheriff of the settlement, with directions to arrest a number against whom the sheriff had warrants for the violation of our laws, a part of whom were known to be at the residence of the Applebees, about seven miles up the Connecticut, and near the head of that river.

"Upon the approach of the guard, it was discovered that a plank of a bridge over the stream near the Applebees' had been removed, and that care had been taken to secure the dwelling against the penetration of musket-shot. As soon as the guard was discovered by the inmates, the two Applebees approached with their muskets, and warned the guard and sheriff not to approach them. The sheriff informed them that he was an officer, and had a warrant against them, and required them in the name of the State to lay down their arms and submit; upon which they levelled their guns, and declared that instant death awaited any one who should dare approach them.

"At this moment, the captain of the guard informed them of the consequences of resistance; that he came with instructions to take them alive, if possible, but at all hazards to take them; whereupon the elder Applebee ordered the guard and sheriff in the name of the King to leave his farm, and started a messenger to give notice to his associates of his condition; but, all communication being cut off by the position of the guard, the messenger was driven back into the house, and the design frustrated. At this moment Lewis Loomis, Esq., who was with the guard, advised the Applebees that their escape was impossible, and that it was most prudent for them to surrender and go with him to the proper officers, whom if they could satisfy of the rectitude of their intentions, they should be permitted to return. To this they consented, and the Applebees, their arms, ammunition, and implements of defence, are now in the hands of the guard.

"At the moment of their surrender, several of the insurgents came in sight; but, one only being armed, and the arms of the others being captured with the Applebees, they acted upon the principle that 'discretion is the better part of valor,' and suddenly disappeared.

"The guns captured from the Applebees were found to be heavily charged with powder, ball, and buck-shot, or rather pistol-bullets. One of the guns had seventeen of these bullets. The rifle had seven bullets, and the spare guns an ounce-ball each and from seven to twelve of the pistol-bullets, all of which are in the hands of the High Sheriff, and will in due time be exhibited to the Grand Jury of the County.

"I find upon inquiry that, such has been the doubt and uncertainty as to the disposition of the government of New-Hampshire to maintain jurisdiction over the territory, that, from this and other manifest causes, many people, well disposed, despairing of protection, had joined the disaffected, and sixty of the seventy-five legal voters had petitioned the Provincial Government to take them under the protection of the laws of the Crown.

"Since the arrival of the military force, and the arrest of the Applebees, and the knowledge of the measures your Excellency has adopted in relation to this troubled section of the State, many of those who signed the petition to Lord Gosford have come forward and given in their allegiance to our government, and express great satisfaction that they are to be delivered from the state of anarchy which has so long existed. Of this number, Dea. Perkins deserves especially to be named to your Excellency. The Applebees declare that they have acted under the directions of the British justice, Rea, and were told by him, if approached by the authorities or people of New-Hampshire, to order them in the name of the King to desist, but, if further pressed, to fire, and, in case they could not defend themselves, to retreat to Hereford, and they should be protected."...

The prisoners taken at "The Block-house" of the Applebees, with others of the insurgents captured, were subsequently taken to Lancaster and lodged in jail, except two young men by the name of Huggins, who, young and inexperienced, expressed great regret that they had joined the insurgents, and were released upon their own recognizance, before leaving the territory of "Indian Stream." Indictments were found against the prisoners, but their cases were continued from term to term, until, showing a repentant spirit, and the troubles being somewhat allayed in the disputed territory, the captured insurgents were discharged upon their own recognizance, or otherwise disposed of by the State's attorney and the court. They were not brought to trial. Meantime, the troubles at "Indian Stream" were not wholly allayed. The "fugitives from justice," the vicious and lawless among the inhabitants, under the auspices of Mr. Justice Rea of Hereford, still fomented strife. better portion of the community, however, sure of the protection of the government of New-Hampshire, eventually prevailed; not, however, without the greatest difficulty. The British party continued to make their threats, and individuals obnoxious to them went into the settlements for safety. Gov. Badger, however, continued to act with great promptness, and issued an order for calling out another detachment of troops, at the discretion of a "Committee of Correspondence," and Sheriff White. The knowledge of this order had the desired effect. The malcontents thought "discretion the better part of valor," and quietly submitted to the laws, or emigrated to Canada. Thus, by the prompt action of the Executive, this difficulty, that at one time was likely to have produced a rupture between the two governments, was allayed. The government of the United States assumed the responsibility of the embroglio by payment to the State of New-Hampshire of the expenses incurred; and the line was established, as claimed by our government, by the Webster-Ashburton Treaty.

THE FLORIDA WAR.

At the time our border difficulties were at their height, a cruel Indian war was raging at the South, known as "the Seminole War." The Seminoles were a fierce and warlike race of Indians, and occupied the best lands in Florida. 1821, Spain formally passed the Floridas to the government of the United States, and immigration immediately set into the territory. The lands of the Indians were coveted by the settlers and speculators; and soon animosities arose between them, encouraged by the whites, that in the end produced the most protracted and cruel war known in our history. There were continued collisions and massacres; and, to stop them and restore peace to the territory, our government adopted the policy of removal of the Sem-A treaty was accordingly made with a portion of their chiefs, that they should remove at the expense of the government to a reservation west of the Mississippi within three years. It is very doubtful, had our government carried out this treaty in good faith, whether the Seminoles as a people would have peaceably removed, as the treaty had been signed by only a few of their chiefs; but the government, through its agents, did not act up to the treaty, and the Seminoles became greatly infuriated, and, instead of removing, commenced a cruel and bloody war, costing the nation near thirty millions of money and thousands of valuable lives. It commenced in earnest in 1835, and did not end by proclamation until 1848.

During this long period of varied disaster and success, the impatience of our people demanded a succession of commanders for the Florida campaigns; and we find Gaines, Scott, Jessup, Call, Clinch, Taylor, Harney, and Pierce bush-fighting among the hummocks, swamps, and everglades of Florida. But military science and skill were of but little account against a foe upon their own soil, and that soil producing spontaneously for their subsistence; every bush a covert, every hummock a natural earth-work, and every everglade a natural fortification. In such a war, few laurels were to be found or won; yet its hardships, its labors, its risks and responsibilities, were far greater than those of legitimate wars of civilized life.

It is not proposed to write up the Florida War in detail, but only to notice those actions in which men of New-Hampshire took an active part.

MASSACRE OF MAJ. DADE'S COMMAND.

The campaign of 1835 was one of disaster,—the most noticeable incident being that of Dec. 28, when Maj. Dade and his command, consisting, all told, of one hundred and eighteen men, were attacked by a party of Indians led by Micanopy and the noted Osceola, and the entire party killed, with the exception of three privates, who escaped and got into Fort Brooke severely wounded. The stout resistance made by the Indians during this campaign convinced the government and the people of Florida that more efficient means were necessary, and a much larger force of national and State troops were ordered into the field. The effective forces of the various forts along the Atlantic seaboard, as well as troops stationed in the interior, were ordered for service to various forts in Florida.

THE BATTLE OF FORT DRANE.

Fort Drane, proving to be in an unhealthy locality, was abandoned by our troops, and soon after was taken possession of by the enemy, who built their huts in and around it, into which they moved their women and children. Maj. B. K. Pierce,* of the artillery, had been ordered from Fort

^{*} Maj. Benjamin Kendrick Pierce was the eldest son of Gov. Benjamin Pierce, and was born at Hillsborough, Aug. 29, 1790. He pursued his preparatory studies at Phillips's Exeter Academy, and entered Dartmouth College in the fall of 1807, and continued in that institution for three years, when he commenced the study of the law with David Starrett, Esq., of Hillsborough. He continued in Mr. Starrett's office until the commencement of the war with Great Britain, when he entered the regular army as a lieutenant of artillery. In August, 1813, he was promoted to a captaincy; in June

Mitchel to the command of Fort Micanopy, in the interior of Florida. Maj. Pierce arrived at the Fort on the 20th of August, 1836; and, having learned from Capt. Childs, in command, that a body of the enemy were lurking about Fort Drane, he determined to attack them forthwith. Accordingly, at two o'clock on the morning following (the 21st), he marched for Fort Drane with 110 mounted men and a piece of ordnance, — fifty men commanded by Capt. Childs of the Third Artillery, and Lieut. Spaulding of the Second Dragoons; and fifty men commanded by Lieutenants Irwin and Herbert, of the First Artillery. The command reached Fort Drane at sunrise. The Indians proved to be numerous, - about three hundred, under the command of their noted chief, Powell, better known as Osceola. Our troops moved upon the enemy in three divisions, under the direct lead of Maj. Pierce, and attacked them with the most determined spirit, and, after an hour's hard fighting, drove them from the field, and followed them three quarters of a mile into their recesses, where they could not be followed by our troops, exhausted by their march and hard fighting, and in number not more than one third of that of the enemy. The Indians on this occasion fought with the most obstinate bravery, leaving ten of their dead upon the battlefield (an unusual incident), and leaving unmistakable trails showing that many others, dead or severely wounded, were dragged by them from the field. Our loss was but one killed and sixteen wounded; among the latter, Lieut. Betts, adjutant of the command. "In this battle," says Lieut. Nauman, "it is evident Powell (Osceola) was either taken by surprise or outgeneralled, as he lost five men before a 1836, he was promoted to Major of the First Regiment of Artillery, and ordered to Florida. Oct. 15, 1836, he was made "Lieutenant-Colonel by brevet, for distinguished services in the affair of Fort Drane"; and, the same month, was appointed by Gov. Call, of Florida, Quartermaster-General, and Colonel of the regiment of Creeks atached to his army. In consequence of his arduous duties and the sickly climate, Col. Pierce's health became greatly impaired, and he was ordered North for duty. He was stationed at Plattsburg with his regiment, and subsequently at Houlton, and New York City. Subsequent to his return North in 1838, he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Eighth Regiment of Infantry, and his appointment confirmed by the Senate; but he declined the appointment, preferring the arm of service in which he had served so long. Change of climate, however, did not improve his health; and he died of disease of the brain, at New York, in 1849, aged fifty-nine years.

rifle was fired on his side." Maj. Pierce, taking the dead and wounded with him, returned to Micanopy. This splendid action gave courage to our troops in Florida, and was hailed with joy throughout the country. It proved that energy, skill, and bravery, as of old, would tell upon an enemy in Florida as elsewhere. Upon receiving a report of this fight, Gen. Call wrote Maj. Pierce the following complimentary letter: -

"TALLAHASSE, Sept. 6, 1836.

"SIR,—I have received through Col. Crane a copy of your official report of the battle of Fort Drane. Your conduct and that of the officers and men under your command, on that occasion, reflects on you and upon them the highest credit. To have beaten Powell (Osceola) with one third of his force was a proud achievement; and I take this occasion to tender my acknowledgments to you and to your command for this gallant service.

"I am, sir, very respectfully,

"Your obedient servant,

"R. K. CALL, " Commander-in-chief."

"Maj. B. K. PIERCE, United States Army."

This action was made the occasion of a general order of congratulation at the head-quarters of the army at Washington, couched in the following terms:—

"HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ARMY, ADJT.-GENERAL'S OFFICE, Washington, Sept. 16, 1836. "GENERAL ORDER No. 61.

"I. The Major-General Commanding-in-chief has received the official account of the attack made on the 21st of August, by Maj. Pierce, of the First Regiment of Artillery, on a large body of Indians collected on the site of old Fort Drane, in which, with a force of only 110 men, he completely surprised and routed about 300 warriors, and killed and wounded a considerable number of them.

"II. The conduct of officers and men engaged in this enterprise, like those who attacked a superior force at Micanopy under the gallant and much-lamented Lieut.-Col. Heileman, is deserving of the highest praise.

III. "It is with much satisfaction that the Major-General recurs to the conduct on all occasions of the troops of the regular army who have been serving in Florida against the Seminoles. Wherever they have had an opportunity of meeting the enemy, they have acted with a spirit of gallantry worthy of a nobler field; and the Major-General cannot, without deep sensibility, contemplate the sacrifices and sufferings which they have experienced in the arduous duties imposed on them; all which they have borne with a fortitude and submission to discipline which reflect honor on the character of the American army, and entitle them to the approbation and regard of their government and country.

"By order of

"MAJ.-GEN. MACOMB,

" Major-General Commanding-in-chief.

"S. COOPER, Acting Adjutant-General."

On the 28th of September, Gen. Call commenced an expedition into the Indian country from the Suwanee River, with 1,400 mounted men from Tennessee and Florida. He had appointed Maj. Pierce Quartermaster-General of his army, who had obtained supplies from Savannah and St. Augustine; but three steamboats containing them were detained in the river St. John's by sickness of their crews. From these circumstances, when the army arrived at Fort Drane they were short of provisions and forage. The horses were without forage for seven days, and were turned out to pasture at the risk of being stolen by the Indians. The army continued encamped at Fort Drane until the evening of the 6th of October, when Maj. Pierce arrived with provisions. He was at Black Creek on the night of the 4th of October, when an express arrived at ten o'clock, announcing that a force of Floridians were on their way to assist in escorting the provisions to Fort Drane. At midnight he started his command with his train of provisions from Black Creek, and on the evening of the next day (the 6th) arrived at Fort Drane, — a distance of sixty-five miles! The commissariat thus replenished, Gen. Call started with his command for the Withlacoochee on Monday, the 8th of October, in pursuit of the Indians. With a view of surprising the Indians, a new route was taken; and Maj. Pierce, at the head of a battalion of artillery of 200 men, took the advance, cut a road for fifty miles, and, though much fatigued, on the morning of the 12th of October surprised and routed a large party of Indians; the men escaping to the hummocks, and leaving twelve of their women as prisoners.

Finding no provisions upon the Withlacoochee, the army retraced its steps to Fort Drane and thence across the peninsula to Black Creek, to wait for supplies. Meantime Col. Pierce, who had been appointed to the command of the Creek regiment in place of the late Col. Lane by Gov. Call, had been despatched for wagons and provisions to Charleston, and in the short space of ten days returned thence; having succeeded in obtaining a full supply of provisions, a wagon train, and a supply of horses. As soon as the supplies arrived and the horses of the Tennesseeans were recruited, the army took up its line of march for the strongholds of the enemy.

THE BATTLES OF WAHOO SWAMP.

On the 13th of November, the army arrived upon the Withlacoochee, and encamped in the Cove. The Indian towns were all abandoned and the houses burned. Finding no enemy, it was determined to follow up the river on both banks in pursuit of him. Gen. Call was to cross the river with the Tennessee and Florida troops with some regulars; while Col. Pierce, with the regular troops and his regiment of friendly Indians, was to follow up the south bank of the river. On the 16th of November, the two divisions took up their line of march. On the 17th, about four or five miles above the Cove, Gen. Call's division fell in with a body of the enemy, engaged and routed them with much slaughter. Twenty-one of the enemy were found dead, and they were seen to carry off many of their dead and wounded. The whites pursued the enemy up the river, and encamped for the night within a few miles of Dade's battle-ground, and made arrangements to feel for the enemy the next day in the Wahoo Swamp.

On the morning of the 18th, Gen. Call marched at the head of five hundred Tennessee troops for the swamp. Entering upon open ground, they saw an Indian town in flames, and the savages making for the swamp. Upon entering the swamp, the Indians halted, and waited to receive our The force was ordered to advance, and, at a signal from an Indian, the enemy rose from the edge of the hummock and fired. Our troops immediately charged into the hummock, and the Indians were driven off. They made several attempts to outflank us, but failed. The whites lost in this conflict three killed and about twenty wounded. Their ammunition being nearly exhausted, our troops retired to their encampment. On the 20th, Col. Pierce formed a junction with Gen. Call, having met no enemy in force upon the south bank of the river. On the 21st of November, the combined forces marched for the Wahoo Swamp. The enemy met them at the edge of the swamp, and a severe conflict ensued, which lasted for four hours. Our troops charged into the swamp without firing a gun, and then fired upon the Indians at close shot. The fire was returned along the whole line. At length the Indians gave way and retreated, closely followed by our troops. The division under Col. Pierce and the one under Col. Truesdell were delayed for some time by the depth of mud and water; while Col. Brown, not thus impeded, overtook and fought the enemy. They stood their ground stoutly. At length Col. Pierce with the regulars and friendly Indians, and Col. Truesdell with the Tennesseeans, coming up, engaged in the conflict, and the Indians abandoned their position and retreated. Our troops then retired to the open ground, and, caring for the dead and wounded, returned to their camp. Our loss was three killed and sixteen wounded. The loss of the enemy was very large.

In this affair Gen. Call thus speaks in relation to the regulars and militia under Col. Pierce: "Where all behave so well, it is difficult to discriminate. I cannot, however, forbear to mention the names of Lieut.-Col. H. Brown, Maj. Morris, Capts. Ross, Maitland, Piercy, and Searle, and Lieut. Lee, of the artillery, who sustained the first unequal contest with the enemy at the disputed passage. These were followed and bravely sustained by Capt. Warren, Capt. Evans, and Lieut. Myrick, of the Florida militia; and by Maj. Gardner, Capts. Tompkins and Porter of the artillery, and the officers and men under their command. Indeed, no higher praise can be paid to Col. Pierce and the regular troops under his command, both officers and men, than to say that all behaved with their characteristic valor, and those who were foremost in the action were precisely those whom circumstances and the nature of the ground favored in their advance."

THE BATTLE OF LAKE MONROE.

On the 3d of February, 1837, Abraham, Jumper, and Alligator, three noted Seminole chiefs, with two other chiefs of less note, — one a nephew of Micanopy, — came in and had "a talk" with Gen. Jessup. They professed to want peace, and agreed to meet at Fort Drane on the 18th inst., with other chiefs, for a further talk as to peace.

It is highly probable, however, that this was a mere ruse to gain an advantage, as, only five days after, a large force of Indians made an attack upon Col. Fanning's camp, upon Lake Monroe.

The Indians, some three hundred strong, commenced the attack before daylight, on the morning of the 8th of February, by giving the dreaded war-whoop on all sides of the camp, and then discharging their rifles. The enemy's right rested on the lake above the camp, while his line extended round in front of the same, his left resting on the lake below. Our troops sprang to the breastworks with alacrity, and a sharp contest ensued. Being mostly recruits, in the excitement of a first engagement, they wasted their fire for a time. Soon, however, under the direction of their more practical officers, they made their fire tell. The steamer "Santee" was in the lake near by, and Second Lieut. Thomas was ordered on board her to serve a six-pounder, and direct its fire upon the enemy's right. This he did promptly and effectually, clearing that flank of the enemy in a short time.

Meantime, the fire from our breastworks became more effectual as the recruits became cool and collected; and, after three hours of sharp firing, the enemy were handsomely repulsed, taking off, however, their killed and wounded. Our loss was one (the brave Capt. Mellon) killed, and fifteen wounded. In his report of the battle of Lake Monroe, Col. Fanning, in speaking of the United States Dragoons, under Col. Harney, says: "With the officers of his battalion I have every reason to be well satisfied. My eye was upon every one, and I discovered nothing but firmness and confidence in all." Among the officers specified, and thus highly complimented, was Second Lieut. John W. S. McNeil, of the Second Regiment of United States Dragoons.*

THE CAPTURE OF PHILIP AND UCHEE BILLY.

About the 1st of September, an expedition was planned by Gen. Hernandez against some camps of Indians reported to be pitched at the south of Fort Peyton some forty or fifty miles. Accordingly, on Thursday, the 7th of September, a detachment of troops started out to break up their camps. The force, about one hundred and seventy men,— ^{*} Lieut. John W. S. McNeil was the son of Gen. John McNeil of Hillsborough, and was born on the Island of Mackinaw, Feb. 17, 1817. He was educated at West Point, and commenced the study of law at Hillsborough, in the office of his uncle, Hon. Franklin Pierce. June 8, 1836, he was appointed Second Lieutenant in the Second Regiment United States Dragoons. He was stationed at Corbondale, Penn., on recruiting service, through the summer, but was ordered in the winter to join his regiment in Florida. He was in several skirmishes during the summer of 1837, in command of his company. He died, Sept. 11, 1837, from the effects of a wound received the preceding day in a skirmish with a party of Indians under the noted Seminole chief, Uchee Billy. As McNeil advanced at the head of his division to charge the Indians, Uchee Billy levelled his rifle at him, and was discovered by McNeil, who quickly drew his pistol to fire at him; but the Indian had the advantage of time, and his bullet passed through McNeil's right hand and took effect in the abdomen. He remained upon the field during the battle, and was then removed to the camp upon a litter. The next day the command started for St. Augustine; but McNeil died upon the way, at 10 o'clock on Monday night. His body was taken to St. Augustine, and buried with the honors of war; after which, at a meeting of the officers of the post, resolutions were passed highly complimentary to his character as a soldier and a man.

comprising parts of Company F, Second Dragoons, under Lieut. McNeil; E and H, Second Dragoons, under Lieut. May; part of Capt. Hanson's company, under Lieuts. Pellicer and Ferreria; Lieut. Whitehurts's company of volunteer Florida horse; and Company D, Third Artillery, under Lieut. Frazer, - was under the immediate command of Lieut. Pevton, of the Second Regiment of Dragoons. Gen. Hernandez accompanied the detachment, and had the control of the expedition. On reaching Bulowville, the battalion encamped for the night; the baggage train, under Lieut. Frazer, occupying St. Joseph's. Whilst making preparations for the march the following morning, five runaway negroes came in, and, delivering themselves up, claimed protection against the Indians, who, they reported, had no intention of emigrating, and that parties of them were then preparing coonti* south of the Tomoka, and east of the St. John's River. A negro, belonging to the Indian chief, Philip, acting as guide, the battalion marched from Bulowville on Friday morning, and crossed the Tomoka near its head. Continuing the march through the day, in the evening they saw the fires of the enemy's camp at Dunlawton. The force proceeded cautiously, and about midnight the volunteers under Lieut. Whitehurst formed an ambuscade on two sides of the camp. At daylight, the dragoons, under Lieut. Peyton, advanced to the attack. Lieut. May's company charged, and captured the chief, Philip, with another Indian, and a number of women and children; one only, the voungest son of Philip, escaping. This capture was made without loss of blood to either party.

The Indian taken with Philip was known as "Tomoka John." He offered to guide them to the camp of Uchee Billy, some ten miles away, and his offer was accepted. The battalion started forthwith, and, after much fatigue, taking a circuitous route, they came up with their fires early in the evening, and halted, while midnight, within about a mile of their camp. Soon after midnight, they carefully advanced, and completely surrounded them. The Indians were aroused by the barking of their dogs, and put out their fires, fearing danger at hand. At the dawn of day, on Sunday, the 10th, a charge was ordered by the whole force, in two divisions, one led by Lieut. Peyton, and the other by Lieut. McNeil. The Indians were waiting the attack, and made one discharge of their rifles, by which Lieut. McNeil was mortally wounded. He was the only man injured of our party; but, of the Indians, two were killed and three wounded.

The whole party, consisting of Uchee Billy, his brother Jack, three warriors of less note, and a number of women and children, were taken,—not an Indian escaping, save one, who got through our line in the night, but not in season to give the alarm to the Indians in the neighborhood.

This was a successful and important expedition, as Uchee Billy was one of the leading spirits among the Seminole warriors. On the 12th of September, the battalion marched into St. Augustine with thirty-five captive Indians, all told, amid the congratulations of the people. The St. Augustine "Herald," of date Sept. 13, adds: "The gallant Lieut. McNeil lingered until ten o'clock on Monday night, when he expired. He was a promising young officer, and his loss is universally regretted. His body was brought in, and buried with military honors, at six o'clock yesterday afternoon."

THE MILITIA LAW OF THE REVISED STATUTES.

In June, 1840, the Legislature authorized the revision of the statutes of the State, by resolving "that three suitable persons be appointed by His Excellency, with advice of Council, to revise, codify, and amend the statute laws of New-Hampshire." Under this resolve, Hon. Joel Parker,* Samuel D. Bell, Esq., and Charles J. Fox, Esq.,† were appointed the commissioners of revision in November following. A draft of the Revised Statutes was presented, with the report of the commissioners, to the Legislature on the first day of its session in 1842, and at the adjourned session of the Legislature, commencing on the first Wednes-

* Hon. Joel Parker was born at Jaffrey, Jan. 25, 1795. He graduated at Dartmouth College in the class of 1811. He read law at Amherst, in the office of his brother, Judge Edmund Parker, and commenced the practice of his profession at Keene, in the fall of 1815. He represented the town of Keene in the Legislature in 1824, '25, and 26. Jan. 8, 1833, he was appointed an Associate Justice of the Superior Court of New-Hampshire by Gov. Samuel Dinsmore; and Chief Justice of the same, June 25, 1838, by Gov. Isaac Hill. In 1840, he was a commissioner, as above, to revise the laws of New-Hampshire. In 1847, Judge Parker was appointed the Professor of Medical Jurisprudence of Dartmouth College, and officiated in that capacity for ten years. In the same year, he was appointed Royall Professor of Law at Harvard College, which office he resigned the past year. Judge Parker has been a close student through life, and has found time, aside from his judicial duties, always learnedly performed, to favor the public with the results of his studies through the periodical press, and in occasional publications; while his Law Reports are monuments of his industry and his legal lore. Learned in his profession, genial in his manners, and dignified in his deportment, Judge Parker was an ornament to the bench of New-Hampshire, as well as to the professor's chair in Harvard University.

† Charles James Fox was of Nashua, but was born in Hancock, Oct. 11, 1812. He graduated at Dartmouth College, in the class of 1831. He read his course of legal studies in the office of Hon. Titus Brown, of Francestown, at the Law School at New Haven, Ct., and with Hon. Daniel Abbott, of Nashua. Upon the completion of his legal studies, he entered the bar of Hillsborough County in 1834, and commenced the practice of the law as a partner of his last instructor in that science, the Hon. Daniel Abbott, at Nashua. He represented his adopted town in the Legislature in 1837; was appointed Solicitor for Hillsborough County in 1837; and was appointed one of the commissioners to revise the statutes of New-Hampshire, as above, in 1841. His arduous labors upon this commission broke a slender constitution; and, to seek relief from the insidious disease, the scourge of our New-England climate, consumption, he made a voyage up the Mediterranean in 1843, and in 1844 visited the West Indies for the like purpose, but with no avail: he continued to decline, and died at Nashua, Feb. 17, 1846, aged thirty-four years.

Mr. Fox was a ripe scholar. He wrote good prose, fine poetry, and was learned in the law. He compiled, with Rev. Samuel Osgood, "The New-Hampshire Book"; wrote "The History of the Old Town of Dunstable," and the "Town Officer," besides articles for the periodical press, and a series of letters during his visits to Africa and the West Indies.

day of November following. After a protracted session of fifty-two days, on the 23d of December, 1842, the Revised Statutes of New-Hampshire were adopted.

Col. Bell had been of the commission of 1829, and had prepared the militia law incorporated in the volume of statutes published by the State in 1830. Such being the case, and those laws being prepared with great care, no great alterations were deemed necessary; and such only were made as to condense and simplify existing statutes, meet supposed or real defects, and changes of circumstances.

By the Revised Statutes, there were placed among the conditional exempts the members of the Council, persons having conscientious scruples of bearing arms, and persons between the ages of forty and forty-five; and the latter class were not required to do military duty, except in cases of invasion and insurrection, instead of having their arms and equipments, and carrying or sending them to the captains of their companies for inspection, on the first Tuesday of May in each year, as required by the law of 1830. They provided that residence in town, for the purpose of obtaining an education at any literary institution, should not subject the person so residing to do military duty in that town; that every soldier, doing his duty according to law, should receive in the month of October annually, from the selectmen of the town in which he resided, one dollar; that each soldier, whether officer, non-commissioned officer, private, or musician, should receive from the selectmen of the town in which he resided fifty cents on each muster-day, to be paid on the parade-ground; that every company should regularly consist of sixty-four; that the captains of the several artillery companies should build gun-houses when needed, at a cost of not over fifty dollars, and should be responsible for guns. harnesses, and other apparatus attached thereto; that every company required to be armed with muskets or rifles, and having thirty-two rank and file, should receive from the State arsenals muskets or rifles enough to arm said company, not exceeding sixty-four; that every company of artillery having sixty-four rank and file, enlisted and uniformed, should receive thirty-two muskets, the muskets or rifles to be delivered alone upon the certificate of the Adjutant-General, and upon the furnishing proper bonds; that, in cases of actual or threatened invasion, insurrection, or other public danger, the Commander-in-chief might order detachments to be made, and that commanders of divisions, brigades, and regiments might do the same, and appoint military watches or guards upon emergencies, until orders could be received from the Commander-in-chief, and that all such detachments for actual service should be subject to the rules and articles provided by the laws of the United States for the government of the militia in the service of the United States; specifying more particularly the duties of the Adjutant-General, and ordering him to give bonds for the faithful discharge of his duties in a sum of not less than two thousand dollars, nor more than ten thousand dollars; and authorizing any company of cavalry, artillery, grenadiers, light infantry, or riflemen duly organized according to law, under certain specified conditions, to become a body politic and corporate.

The limits of the several regiments, brigades, and divisions were thus constituted:—

SECT. 52. The Second and Seventh Brigades constituted the Second Division;

Sect. 53. The Fourth and Fifth Brigades constituted the Third Division;

Thus it will be seen that one regiment (the Thirty-fifth) had been merged in another, and three new ones had been formed since 1830. The Thirty-fifth, comprising the companies in Newcastle, Rye, Greenland, Newington, and Stratham, had been united with the First; and a new regiment, to take its number, had been formed, from the companies in Wentworth, of the Thirteenth, Groton of the Thirty-fourth, and Dorchester of the Thirty-seventh. Two additional regiments had been formed, the Forty-first and Forty-second,—the Forty-first from companies in Shelburne, Gorham, Berlin, Milan, Pinkham's Grant, and from Randolph of the Twenty-fourth Regiment; and the Forty-second from the companies in Lancaster, Jefferson, Dalton, Northumberland, Whitefield, Stark (then Piercy), Carroll (then Bretton Woods), and Nash and Sawyer's Location, of the Twenty-Fourth Regiment; leaving Stratford, Columbia, Colebrook, and Stewartstown to the Twenty-Fourth, and adding thereto the new towns of Errol, Clarksburg, and Pittsburg to make up its loss.

The organization of the militia of the State in 1843, under the Revised Statutes, was as follows:—

Franklin Pierce, which continued until 1845. He was Clerk of the Senate of New-Hampshire in 1835, '36, '37, '38, '39, and '40; and represented his adopted town in the Legislature in 1845, '47, and '48. It was hoped by the friends of the militia that the Militia Law of the Revised Statutes, prepared, as it had been, by competent commissioners, and matured from the experience of a half century, would remain the law of the State for some length of time. But in this they were mistaken. Innovation and change became the order of the day upon eighth Regiment, Sept. 4, 1833; Captain, Aug. 11, 1834; Major of the Thirty-eighth Regiment, July 3, 1837; Lieutenant-Colonel, June 29, 1838; and Colonel, June 27, 1839. He represented the town of Northfield in the Legislature in 1839 and '40; and was elected Senator for Senatorial District No. 4 in 1844 and '45, and President of that body the last year. Col. Cate is a sound lawyer, of retiring habits, and extensive influence.

^{*} Col. John S. Wells was of Lancaster, and a lawyer by profession, having read law in Vermont. He moved to Lancaster in 1837, and commenced the practice of his profession. He represented his adopted town in the Legislature in 1839, '40, '41, and '42, being Speaker of the House of Representatives the latter year. He removed to Exeter in 1847, and was appointed Attorney-General, Jan. 17, 1848, but resigned shortly after. He was Senator from Senatorial District No. 2 in 1851 and '52, and President of that body both years. In January, 1855, he was appointed United States Senator, to fill out the unexpired term of Hon. Moses Norris, deceased. Col. Wells was a persevering, energetic man. He started in life as a cabinet-maker, and, ambitious of a profession, he labored at his trade until he acquired the means of obtaining a profession. He was a good lawyer, and an eloquent advocate. He died at Exeter, Aug. 1, 1861, aged fifty-six years.

the subject of the militia. While a large portion of the people favored the law, there were others opposed to it. Some opposed it on the score of its expense; others declaimed against it for the alleged immoral tendency of military parades; and still others because, as they said, war and all its accompaniments was an evil. The favorers of the militia were the most numerous, but the opposers of it were the most active and clamorous. At length, the question took a political turn; and in 1846 the Legislature virtually abolished the militia system of the State by repealing the leading features of the old law,— those requiring musters and trainings, except only the annual training in May for inspection, and the annual enrolment of all persons liable to perform military duty.

It is hardly necessary to particularize the provisions of the law of 1846, as it was condemned by the people, and, in June, 1847, was repealed, and the old law re-established in its stead, with some amendments.

The law of 1847 enacted that no certificate of surgeon or surgeon's mate should be valid unless approved and signed by the selectmen or mayor of the town or city in which the applicant resided; provided that all persons between the ages of thirty-five and forty-five, liable to perform military duty, should be enrolled as conditional exempts; provided for an annual encampment of all the officers of each regiment, except chaplain, surgeon, and surgeon's mate, at some central place within the limits of the brigade, between the first and fifteenth days of September, for instruction in the school of the soldier, and other martial exercises, said encampment to continue for not less than three and no more than five successive days, - the brigadier-general of the brigade to appoint a drill-master for the school in his brigade, to be commissioned as major by the Governor, and to be present and inspect and review the same, the drillmaster to receive, as a compensation for his services, five dollars per day from the State; stipulated the arms of the officers at the schools of instruction; provided for the payment of officers attending the schools of instruction;

providing that no parade or school of instruction should be ordered on the day of general election; stipulating fines for non-attendance of officers duly notified to attend the school of instruction; providing for the appointment of musters between the 15th of September and the 15th of October annually; authorizing the Governor to sell or exchange unserviceable military property belonging to the State; making provision for moneys paid soldiers under the law of 1846; and repealing certain sections of that law, and all laws conflicting with the provisions of the present law.

THE MEXICAN WAR.

GEN. TAYLOR'S CAMPAIGN.

The difficulties long existing between the American and Mexican governments culminated in open war in the spring of 1846, when a reconnoitring party, from Gen. Taylor's "Army of Occupation," encamped on the east bank of the Rio Grande, under Capt. Thornton, was attacked by a superior force under Gen. Torrejon, and the entire party killed or taken prisoners. The battles of "Palo Alto," "Resaca de la Palma," and the brave defence of Fort Brown that soon followed, should have given the vaunting Mexicans a prestige of the unequal contest to follow; but it required the lessons of "Monterey" and "Buena Vista" to lower their vanity, and convince them that treble numbers and military display were not equal to a contest with cool courage and determined bravery.

Gen. Ampudia had retreated before Gen. Taylor's gallant and conquering army, but determined to make a stand at Monterey, a strongly fortified town lying within a fold of the arroyo San Juan.* Monterey had been founded more than two centuries. Originally having strong defences, these had been strengthened and extended during the

Gen. Taylor encamped his army within three miles of the town, on the 19th of September, 1846, at a grove of walnut-trees, and springs of pure water, known as "Walnut Springs," and determined to carry the town by assault. A reconnoissance of the enemy, on the 19th, revealed the facts that a large work had been constructed, commanding all the northern approaches to the town; and that the Bishop's Palace and the heights in the vicinity, near the Saltillo road, had been fortified and occupied by troops and artillery; and that it was practicable to turn all the works in that direction, and thus cut the enemy's line of communication. Accordingly, Gen. Taylor ordered Brig.-Gen. Worth, commander of the Second Division, to march with his command on the 20th to turn the hill of the Bishop's Palace, to occupy a position on the Saltillo road, and to carry the enemy's detached works in that quarter when practicable. At two o'clock, P.M., on the 20th, the Second Division took up its march. It was soon seen that Gen. Worth's movement had been discovered by the enemy, and that troops were being thrown towards the Bishop's Palace and the heights that commanded it. This fact was communicated to Gen. Worth; and, to direct the attention of the enemy, Gens. Twiggs and Butler were ordered with their divisions to make a display in front of the town, as if for attack. Gen. Worth encamped for the fight in a defensive position in the direction of the Saltillo road. On the morning of the 21st, Gen. Taylor commenced a spirited attack upon the city to divert the enemy's attention while Gen. Worth gained a position upon the Saltillo road, and thus cut off the enemy's line of communication. This was not done without hard fighting; the enemy opposing in force, and being repulsed with heavy loss. Gen. Worth then succeeded in carrying the heights south of the Saltillo road, the guns taken in one of the forts being turned upon the Bishop's Palace.*

^{*} Gen. Taylor's official report.

But we will let one who was engaged in these actions give the particulars:—

"Monterey, Mexico, Oct. 6, 1846.

"Between one and two o'clock, P.M., on the 20th, the Second Division took up the line of march, taking only two days' provisions, and leaving all the baggage. We also carried plenty of intrenching tools. We marched along in front of the town, keeping out of the range of their guns, and cutting a road all the way through the fields and chaparrals, until we arrived at the foot of the mountain on the north of the town. We then turned to the left, keeping along the base of the hills, until we came up nearly within range of their guns; we then halted until dark. The light troops in advance had been skirmishing all the evening, but there was no damage done. After dark, we moved on about one mile and a half, and bivouacked for the night. Early on the morning of the 21st, we commenced moving around the town. The Mexicans had ascertained our intentions, and strengthened the guards at the north and west of the town. The enemy commenced throwing shot and shell at us as soon as they could see, but most of them went over us. Our object was to gain the Saltillo road. When the head of the column had arrived near the road, the Texan Rangers, who were in front as light troops, were charged upon by a body of lancers, supposed to number about seven hundred. These were supported by an equal number who did not come into action. The charge was soon checked, the colonel who led it having been killed at the first fire. A few shells thrown among them sent them off as fast as they came. These lancers behaved better in this charge than we had ever seen them before. We had four men wounded, and the Mexicans left about twenty killed. We then formed a line of battle across the Saltillo road, and waited for their attack; but they did not care about coming to close quarters. We remained here for some two hours, exposed to a severe fire from a ninepounder stationed on a hill back of the town. Capt. McKasket of the Eighth Infantry was killed, and a private of the Fifth Infantry had his leg shot off, while in this position. We then retired out of the range of their guns, still occupying the Saltillo road. About twelve o'clock, M., Capt. Smith, of the artillery, was ordered to take four hundred men, and storm the hill from which they had been firing during the morning. Soon after, the Seventh Infantry was ordered up to support Capt. Smith. The Seventh marched out by file through some cornfields, keeping near the river until they arrived opposite the hill, then turned to the right and crossed the river, and got under the shelter of a ledge at the foot of the hills. For a quarter of a mile before getting under the ledge, the regiment was exposed to a sharp fire of grape and musketry. The bank of the river was some fifteen or twenty feet high, and each man had to lower himself down into the water by the aid of the bushes growing on the bank. The river was some three feet deep and very rapid, so that the men were necessarily a long time in fording it. I mention this fact to show you the length of time we were exposed to this fire; and, what is the most remarkable, not a man was hit during the exposure. I could hardly believe it at the time. When we arrived at the hill, we saw nothing of Capt. Smith's party, and concluded that he had gone up some other way. As we were only to support Capt. Smith, we had to remain here until his arrival. In the mean time, a party was sent part way up the hill to divert the enemy's attention. The enemy came down part way to meet us, but we drove them to the summit in a few moments. In this affair we had two men wounded. About one hundred Texans then came up, and took the hill without opposition, as but few guns were fired. We took a nine-pounder and some ammunition on this hill. Capt. Smith's command was composed in part of Texans; and, to do them justice, I must say that the best soldiers never behaved better. The Fifth Infantry was then ordered over, and we were directed to take Fort Soldado, about three fourths of a mile further down on the same hill. We stormed the fort in 'good style,' advancing under a smart fire of grape and musketry. The height was defended by about seven hundred men. The enemy retreated as soon as our men gained the work. Our loss was four or five killed, and probably ten or fifteen wounded. The following corps of troops were engaged in this affair: The Fifth and Seventh Infantry, a company of Louisiana volunteers, a part of the First Regiment of Texans, all under command of Gen. Smith. We took in this fort a nine-pounder, a large quantity of ammunition, tents, camp equipage, &c. As soon as the hill was taken, we commenced firing on the Bishop's Palace with their own guns. As soon as the hill was in our possession, they commenced throwing shells at this fort. Knowing the position of the ammunition, they hoped to blow up the fort; however, they did no damage. The Seventh Infantry garrisoned the hill during the night. The next morning at daylight (22d) the height back of the Bishop's Palace was carried by the artillery battalion, the Eighth Infantry, and a few Texans. During the forenoon, a howitzer was taken on to the height, and commenced playing on the Bishop's Palace. Every shot told. The enemy, finding this place too hot to be pleasant, made a sortie to get possession of the howitzer, but our troops formed and soon sent them scampering back. The greater part of our troops stationed on this height had kept out of sight and under shelter after taking it. As the enemy's infantry retired, a large body of lancers charged us, to cover their retreat, but a discharge of musketry and a shell from the howitzer made them show remarkably light heels. Our troops pursued, and entered the Bishop's Palace with them, drove them out (that is, those who attempted to stop), down the hill, into the town. We had thus gained all the enemy's works on this side of the town. We took four guns on this hill, and a large quantity of ammunition and other military The greater part of the Second Division had been ordered up by the time these works were taken. Before this, the troops under Gen. Taylor had effected a lodgment in the town, and continued driving the enemy from house to house, inch by inch. On the morning of the 23d, Gen. Worth sent out a detachment to take possession of a gorge near Santo Catorina, designing to enter the town the following night; but, hearing the heavy firing on the opposite side of the town, he ordered his force to commence an immediate attack upon the city in two divisions, and to press on to the main Plaza. The enemy fought with desperation, and disputed every foot of the ground. Our men had to cut through the walls of the houses and yards, thus passing from one house to another, driving everything before them. The houses are built of stone, and the walls are at least eighteen inches in thickness, and are connected by thick walls of the same material. Loopholes had been cut in the houses and walls, the flat roofs were defended with sandbags, and the streets were all barricaded. Our troops, finding that they could not advance up the streets without great loss, entered the houses and yards, and commenced cutting their way through. The enemy had not counted on this mode of advancing. Our troops continued at this work until the morning of the 24th, night and day. At this time we had driven them all up to the principal Plaza, nearly two miles beyond the point from which we started; at seven o'clock, A.M., we were within short rifle-shot of them on all sides, and perfectly sheltered. We had a twelve-pound howitzer mounted in the second story of a house, and a six-pound gun on the top of one of the houses; the howitzer bearing on the door of the cathedral, where all the ammunition was, and within short range. The ten-inch mortar was planted the evening before, and had thrown several shells into the Plaza during the night, one of which struck the cathedral. Thus stood affairs on the north and west of the Plaza on the morning of the 24th. On the other side, the First and Third Divisions had driven them all up to the principal Plaza, and had taken all their outworks except the large forton the other side of the town, and in an hour more we could have killed hundreds of them without much loss on our part. The Mexicans, seeing that things were not going as well as they could wish, sent in a flag of truce. The truce lasted until night, when they came to terms. Gen. Taylor allowed them to march out with the honors of war, under arms, and to take with them six pieces of artillery, they to give up all other arms and military stores. With what we had taken, we have thirty-five pieces of ordnance, an immense quantity of small-arms, ammunition enough for the conquest of Mexico, and a great many stores of all kinds. Thus ended the taking of Monterey; but it has cost us some of our best officers and men. We have about five hundred killed and wounded. Of this number there are only sixty-eight in the Second Division. We had eleven officers killed and ten wounded, belonging to the regular army, in that division; the number of volunteer officers I have not been able to ascertain. The Mexicans probably lost many more than we did; but they were fighting under cover of good fortifications, and were never exposed to our fire, except when we were driving them from one position to another. Our troops had some of the hardest kind of fighting. charged under a cross-fire from three or four points. Whole platoons were cut down at a discharge, and still others came up to fill their places, and were in turn cut down. But, notwithstanding all this, our brave troops did the duty assigned to them, and did it nobly. Mexicans cannot stand before such soldiers. Our little army is sadly cut up. In saying this, I refer to the regular troops. The regiments were small enough before, but now some of them do not contain two companies. The volunteers behaved well, especially those from Mississippi, Tennessee, and Texas; they behaved like men and Americans. I would write more, but I do not feel able. I cannot as yet sit up in bed: I write a few moments at a time, as I lay.

"Yours, J. H. P." *

In January, 1847, a large part of Gen. Taylor's army had been turned over to Gen. Scott, who was making preparations to operate against the Mexicans upon the Gulf coast. On the last of January, rumors were rife at Monterey that Gen. Santa Anna was advancing against Monterey from San Luis Potosi with an overwhelming force. Leaving fifteen hundred men to guard Monterey, early in February Gen. Taylor hastened forward with his forces to join Gen. Worth at Saltillo, where a strong redoubt had been constructed, commanding the town and plain. Leaving Capt. Webster to occupy the redoubt, and Maj. Warren with four companies of Illinois volunteers to guard the town, on the 8th of February Gen. Taylor, with the remainder of his troops, about five thousand, moved forward to Agua Nueva; a position having a large plain for drilling his troops, and at the same time affording observation of the road from San Luis Potosi. In case of an attack by the enemy in force, he determined to fall back in front of the hacienda of Buena Vista, about seven miles south of Saltillo.

He was not long in doubt as to the intentions of the Mexican General, for repeated reconnoissances established the fact that Santa Anna was concentrating a large force in his front for the purpose of an immediate attack. Accordingly, on the morning of the 22d of February, Gen. Taylor fell back upon Buena Vista to await the approach of the enemy. He had not to wait long; for Santa Anna, sure of victory, knowing that a large part of Taylor's force had been withdrawn from him, by nine o'clock came rushing over the distant hills twenty thousand strong, with colors flying, drums beating, trumpets sounding, horses neighing, men shouting, and wheels rumbling, as if to crush the feeble band of Americans before him amid the din and noise of his serried hosts. But those stout hearts before him cared little for the vast numbers, gay uniforms, flaunting penons, or glittering pikes and bayonets of the wily Mexicans. They nobly stood their ground, nobly sustained the reputation of the American soldier, and, after a day of hard fighting and unparalleled struggling for the mastery, the darkness of the night that followed veiled the retreat of the discomfited Mexicans; and a glorious morning revealed to this band of sturdy Americans the fact that they were victorious upon the battle-field of Buena Vista.

Gen. Taylor gave the following short and modest report of this splendid battle and great victory to the War Department at Washington:—

"Buena Vista, Mexico, Feb. 24, 1847.

[&]quot;SIR,—I have the honor to report, that, having become assured on the 20th inst. that the enemy had assembled in very heavy force at Encarnacion, thirty miles in front of Agua Nueva, with the evident design of attacking my position, I broke up my camp at the latter place on the 21st, and took up a strong line in front of Buena Vista, seven miles south of Saltillo. A cavalry force, left at Agua Nueva for the purpose of covering the removal of supplies, was driven in during the night, and, on the morning of the 22d, the Mexican army appeared immediately in front of our position. At eleven o'clock, A.M., a flag was sent, bearing from Gen. Santa Anna a summons of unconditional surrender; to which I immediately returned a negative reply. The summons and my reply are herewith enclosed. The action was commenced late in the afternoon between the light troops on the left flank, but was not seriously engaged until the morning of the 23d, when the enemy made an effort to force the left flank of our position. obstinate and sanguinary conflict was maintained with short intervals throughout the day, the result being that the enemy was completely repulsed from our lines. An attack of cavalry upon the rancho of Buena Vista, and a demontration upon the city of Saltillo itself, were likewise handsomely repelled. Early in the night, the enemy withdrew from his camp and fell back upon Agua Nueva, a distance of twelve miles.

"Our own forces engaged at all points in this action fell somewhat short of five thousand four hundred men; while that of the enemy, from the statement of Gen. Santa Anna, may be estimated at twenty thousand. Our success against such odds is a sufficient encomium on the good conduct of our troops. In a more detailed official report, I shall have the satisfaction of bringing to the notice of the government the conspicuous gallantry of particular officers and corps. I may be permitted here, however, to acknowledge my great obligations to Brig.-Gen. Wool, the second in command, to whom I feel particularly indebted for his valuable services on this occasion.

"Our loss has been very severe, and will not probably fall short of nine hundred men. The Mexican loss has been immense. I shall take the earliest opportunity of forwarding a correct list of the casualties of the day.

"I am, sir, very respectfully,

"Your obedient servant,

"Z. TAYLOR,

"Major-General U. S. A. Commanding.

[&]quot;The Adjutant-General of the Army, Washington, D. C."

General Taylor gave due credit to the gallant officers of his command in the battle of Beuna Vista; and, among the number, conspicuous for his arduous duties and cool courage, was Maj.W.W. S. Bliss,* of New-Hampshire, the Adjutant-General of his army.

GEN. SCOTT'S CAMPAIGN IN MEXICO.

It had been determined to send Gen. Scott to attack Vera Cruz and the Castle of San Juan de Uloa, and, in case of his success, to march upon the capital of Mexico, "the city of the Montezumas." Accordingly, in November, 1846, Gen. Scott was ordered to the Rio Grande to set on foot that expedition. He was to take a large part of the troops under Gen. Taylor, leaving him only such a force as was thought necessary to hold a defensive position on the line of the Sierra Madre. On the 25th of November, 1846, Gen. Scott left Washington with orders to repair "to Mexico, to take command of the forces there assembled, and particularly to organize and set on foot an expedition on the Gulf coast," if he should think it practicable. He arrived on the Rio Grande the 1st of January, 1847. The troops from Gen. Taylor's command were turned over to him, as before named; and he soon left for the Island of Lobos, the place of general rendezvous of the fleet and the various detach-

* Maj. Wm. Wallace Smith Bliss was from Lebanon. His father, John Bliss, was appointed Ensign in the Second Infantry, and Second Lieutenant March 1, 1811; First Lieutenant in January, 1813; and was Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General in April following, with rank of Captain. He was discharged in June, 1815. Subsequently he was a sutler at Mobile Point, and was employed in the engineer department, in the construction of the fort at Mobile Point, from 1818 to 1822, and died at Blakely, Alabama, in 1822.

His son, W. W. S. Bliss, entered the Military Academy at West Point in 1829; was brevetted Second Lieutenant Fourth Infantry, July 1, 1833; Acting Assistant Professor of Mathematics at West Point Military Academy, from October, 1834, to 1837; Assistant Professor in 1840; appointed First Lieutenant of the Topographical Engineers, but declined; Assistant Adjutant-General, with rank of Captain, in October, 1839; brevetted Major for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, May 9, 1846, in May, 1848; Assistant Adjutant-General, with rank of Major, July 7, 1846; and was brevetted Lieutenant-Colonel in May, 1848, for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Buena Vista, Feb. 23, 1847. Major Bliss married a daughter of General Taylor. He was a fine officer and gallant soldier, as well as a man of literary attainments and tastes. The orders, reports, and letters of General Taylor, noted for their modesty, pith, and sententious brevity, have been attributed to his gallant and talented Adjutant-General.

ments. Gen. Patterson marched with his division from Victoria to Tampico, and there embarked; Gens. Scott and Worth sailed from the Brazos; and the remainder of the troops were to proceed directly from the United States to Lobos: Congress had authorized the raising of ten new regiments to serve during the war. These were to be raised and organized. During the month of February, the various detachments arrived that had been ordered to rendezvous at Lobos; and, although many of the supplies had not arrived, Gen. Scott determined to lose no time by delay, and on the 6th of March the whole fleet hove in sight of Vera Cruz. The debarkation of the troops was fixed for the 9th of March, and was effected on that day with the most perfect order and regularity. The beaching was a splendid sight. Gen. Patterson was the ranking officer, being a full Major-General, and took command of the forces when landed, and they had serious work to do. The Arsenal and the Malebran were defended; and the following day these were both taken, the sand-hills cleared of the foe that crowned them, and the Mexican forces driven within the walls of Vera Cruz; so that, upon the landing of Gen. Scott on the evening of the second day, he had no enemy to obstruct his operations save from the walls of the city and the castle.* A succession of severe northers succeeded, and prevented the landing of the mortars and guns, so that it was not until the 22d of March that Gen. Scott demanded the surrender of the city. The demand was refused, and then a tremendous fire was opened upon the city, both seaward as well as landward; Com. Tatnall having been ordered to commence a simultaneous fire upon the town from the flotilla under his command. At length, battery after battery being added to the line of investment, and horrors upon horrors added to the suffering inhabitants the livelong night of the 25th, nothing being heard but the booming of cannon, the explosion of bombs, the crash of falling houses, the shrieks of the wounded, and the groans of the dying, on the morning of the 26th of March, 1847, the batteries ceased playing. Articles of capitulation were signed on the 27th, and on the 29th of March the Mexican forces marched out of the town, laid down their arms, and went their way into the interior. Thus fell the boasted impregnable fortress of the Mexicans, leaving Gen. Scott an open way to the interior, whither he marched with most commendable dispatch on his way to the capital. At the heights of Cerro Gordo he met the combined Mexican force under Santa Anna, and on the 17th of April, 1847, gained the memorable "battle of Cerro Gordo," hurling Santa Anna from his supposed impregnable position, and driving his demoralized troops in hot haste towards the capital. Jalapa, Perote, and Puebla offered little resistance to his conquering army; and at the latter town Gen. Scott reposed his army, and awaited his expected re-enforcements. These consisted of the Ninth United States Infantry, under Col. Trueman B. Ransom, and other detachments, amounting in all to two thousand five hundred men, under the command of Brig.-Gen. Franklin Pierce, of New-Hampshire. The Ninth Regiment of United States Infantry had been recruited in New-England, under the auspices of Col. Franklin Pierce, of New-Hampshire, as its Colonel; Abner B. Thompson, of Maine, as its Lieutenant-Colonel; and Gen. Trueman B. Ransom, of Vermont, as its Major, - their commissions severally bearing date Feb. 16, 1847. On the 3d of March, Col. Pierce was appointed a Brigadier-General by President Polk, and assigned to take command of the detachment of troops about to be sent to re-enforce Gen. Scott; and, on the 16th of March, Maj. Ransom was promoted Colonel of the regiment in his place, and Thomas H. Seymour, of Connecticut, was appointed a Major in the regiment, - Folliot T. Lally, of Maine, having been appointed a Major in the same on the 3d of the month.

The rendezvous of the regiment was at Fort Adams, near Newport, where it was organized; and the roster of its field, staff, and company officers was as follows:—

* Dr. John Dinsmore Walker was from Goffstown, the son of Dr. Walker of that town. He resigned before leaving Vera Cruz, unable to proceed in consequence of a rupture. He was an excellent physician, of literary tastes. After leaving the army he practised his profession in Manchester, and died suddenly, at Bedford, of an affection of the heart.

The attainments and social qualities of Dr. Walker were highly appreciated by those who best knew him, and he numbered a large circle of friends.

Capt. Rowe was put in command of a company of riflemen, consisting of the shortest men in the regiment.

Capt. Bodish was placed in command of a company of grenadiers, made up from the tallest men in the regiment.

Lieut. Jesse A. Gove was of Concord. He was born in Weare, in 1824. He was educated at Norwich University, and read law with Messrs. Pierce & Fowler. While a member of the Norwich University, he was appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Ninth Regiment United States Army, raised from New England for the war with Mexico. He accompanied his regiment to Puebla, in Mexico, at which place he was left in the hospital, and did not participate in the battles in the valley of Mexico.

In 1849, he was appointed by Gen. Barker, of the Third Division, Division-Inspector upon his staff. In 1849 and '50, Col. Gove was Drill-master for the Fourth Brigade; in 1850, 51, '52, '53, and '54, he was Deputy Secretary of the State of New-Hampshire; in 1855, he was appointed by President Pierce a Captain in the United States Dragoons, and was stationed for a time at Utah.

October 30, 1861, he was commissioned Colonel of the Twenty-second Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, raised by Senator Wilson. He fell at the head of his regiment at the battle of Gaines's Mills, June 27, 1862.

Col. Gove was an excellent officer and gallant soldier, and fell greatly lamented by a large circle of friends.

He was appointed Adjutant of the Thirteenth Regiment, Aug. 13, 1833, and Captain of the Sixth Company of Infantry, March 27, 1839. He represented the town of Coventry in the Legislature in 1833, '34, '35, '36, '37, '38, and '39. Subsequently he moved to Haverhill, and was Representative from that town in 1845. March 6, 1847, he was appointed a Captain in the Ninth (or New-England) Regiment United States Infantry, and was detailed for the recruiting service. He resigned March, 1848. Capt. He was appointed Ensign in the Second Company of Light Infantry in the Fifth Regiment, Aug. 18, 1839; and Captain of the same, Sept. 1, 1840. He was appointed First Lieutenant of the Ninth United States Infantry, March 11, 1847. He commanded his company from the time of leaving Newport (Capt. Batchelder being detailed at Fort Adams in the recruiting service), and distinguished himself in the valley of Mexico. He was brevetted Captain for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battles of Contreras and Churubusco. He distinguished himself in the battle of Chepultepec. His company being in the advance, saddened but undismayed by the fall of their gallant Colonel, and no scaling-ladders being at hand, Capt. Bowers placed his broad shoulders against the wall of Chepultepec, and cried out: "Now, up, boys, and at them!" the boys using his hands and shoulders as so many rounds of a ladder, and each getting a toss upward from the stalwart captain as he rushed up the wall. He was appointed Captain of the Ninth United States Infantry in December, 1847, and discharged in August, 1848. He was appointed Postmaster of Nashua by President Pierce and re-appointed by President Buchanan. In the war of the rebellion he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Thirteenth Regiment of New-Hampshire Volunteers, Aug. 22, 1862, and resigned May 30, 1863. Col. Bowers is a gentleman of modest demeanor and approved courage. He now resides at Nashua, and is engaged in mercantile pursuits.

Sergt. John Bedel is of Bath, the son of Gen. Moody Bedel. He was born at "Indian Stream Territory" (now Pittsburg), July 8, 1822. He was educated at Newbury Seminary, Vermont, and read law with Hon. Harry Hibbard, of Bath. He was admitted to the bar of Grafton County in 1850. He enlisted as a private in the Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, March 25, 1847; joined Company H, and promoted First Sergeant, July 10, 1847; discharged on account of physical disability, at Vera Cruz, Aug. 8, 1847; appointed Second Lieutenant in the Ninth United States Infantry, Dec. 30, 1847, and discharged in August, 1848. He was a clerk in one of the departments at Washington for some years subsequent to the Mexican war. In 1861, Aug. 6, he was appointed Major of the Third Regiment of New-Hampshire Volunteer Infantry; Lieutenant-Colonel of the same, June 27, 1862; and Colonel, April 6, 1864. Col. Bedel served with distinction in the war; was taken prisoner, immured for months in a rebel prison, and left the army at the close of the war a Brevet Brigadier-General for gallant and meritorious conduct on the battle-field. He now resides at Bath, with the respect of a large circle of friends,—the citizens of Bath having elected him to represent them in the Legislature the present year.

* Lieut. John H. Jackson went out in command of his company. He is the son of John A. H. Jackson, of Portsmouth, and was born at Portsmouth, Oct. 20, 1814. He was appointed Lieutenant of the First Company of Light Infantry, First Regiment New-Hampshire Militia, April 22, 1841; Captain in the same, Sept. 19, 1848; and as Colonel of the First Regiment, Dec. 27, 1848.

He was appointed First Lieutenant of the Ninth Regiment, United States Army, April 9, 1847, and accompanied his regiment on its march to the City of Mexico. He was in all of the battles in the Valley of Mexico, and was brevetted for gallant services on the 19th and 30th of August, 1847, at the battles of Contreras and Churubusco, and commissioned Captain Feb. 17, 1848. He was mustered out of service at Newport, R.I., in August, 1848.

After the fall of Chepultepec, the Ninth Regiment pressed forward to the Aqueduct under a shower of shot and shells. An escopet-ball struck Lieut. Jackson in the breast and glanced off, whizzing upon the ground. It struck a Bible he carried in his breast-pocket, the gift of a sister as he left his mother's house. The Bible was found deeply but obliquely indented by the ball, where it was obstructed and sent from its deadly course. To this incident the Lieutenant owed his life.

In July, 1853, he was appointed, by Collector Peaslee, Inspector in the Custom-house in Boston, and was removed by Collector Goodrich in 1861. On the 6th of August, the same year, he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Third Regiment of New-Hampshire Volunteer Infantry; and Colonel of the same, June 27, 1862; and was honorably discharged, Feb. 24, 1864. Jan. 1st, 1867, Colonel Jackson was appointed by Collector Goodrich an Inspector in the Boston Custom-house, which office he now holds.

Lieut. Charles F. Low is the son of General Joseph Low of Concord, and was born Jan. 14, 1819. He graduated at Dartmouth in the class of 1842, and entered upon the study of theology at the Union Theological Seminary, New-York City, where he continued one year; and subsequently was of the class, for a year and a half, that graduated in 1845. He then read law in the office of Arthur Fletcher, Esq., of Concord, for two years; and subsequently finished his legal studies in New York, with Messrs. Sillman and Dustin, of that city. He was appointed Second Lieutenant of the Ninth United States Infantry, March 11, 1847; and sailed from New York for Vera Cruz on the 17th of September, 1847, with eighty-seven recruits for that regiment. He was discharged in 1848. 'After leaving the army, he travelled for a time in California, but subsequently returned to New-Hampshire, and is now residing at Concord.

Gen. Pierce, with Col. Ransom and other officers, and three companies of the Ninth Regiment, - "B," Capt. Rowe's * company of riflemen; "D," Capt. Kimball's company from Vermont; and "K," Capt. Bodfish's grenadiers,—sailed from Newport on Thursday, May 27, 1847, in the bark "Kepler." The passages of both vessels were long and weary, the "North Bend" landing her passengers on the 21st, and the "Kepler" on the 27th of June, - a month from the time of embarkation. It was the sickly season, and the vomito raged in the city. Maj. Lally formed his camp at Virgara, two miles from the city, upon a sand-beach upon the Gulf. The "Kepler" landed her passengers, and they immediately marched to Virgara and encamped on the same beach with Maj. Lally's force. Gen. Pierce soon after pitched his tent on the same beach. Great disappointment possessed all minds. The detachment could have left in three days, had proper arrangements been made for its march; but, as it was, almost as many weeks were consumed in preparation. Two thousand wild mules had been collected to be broken to harness, but of these nearly fifteen hundred went off in a stampede the day after the landing from the "Kepler," and others had to be caught to supply their places. To add to the difficulties of the position, Adj. Whipple † had been captured by the guerillas, and Maj. Lally, Capt. Duff, and others of the command were prostrated with the dreaded vomito; the Mexicans asserting continually, and undoubtedly believing, born in that town, Jan. 30, 1816. He received a military education at the University

^{*} Capt. Theodore F. Rowe was born in Portsmouth, Aug. 14, 1810. He was appointed Captain of the "Portsmouth Artillery," of the First Regiment, Aug. 20, 1838; Major of the First Regiment, June 22, 1842; and Lieutenant-Colonel of the same, June 20, 1844. April 9, 1847, he was appointed a Captain in the Ninth (or New England) Regiment United States Infantry, under command of Col. Franklin Pierce, and accompanied that officer's command to Puebla, on its way to the City of Mexico. He was left at Puebla with some forty or fifty other officers and privates, having been reported by the medical examiners as unfit for active duty. Col. Childs, of the First Regiment of United States Artillery, was in command as Military Governor. The city was besieged by a Mexican army on the 13th of September, under Gen. Rea, and the siege continued until the 13th of October. During this time Capt. Rowe had command of the church and convent, San Juan Deon, used as a hospital for our sick and wounded soldiers; and Col. Childs, in his report, gives him credit for gallant and efficient service during that siege. He was brevetted Major for this service. For some time Maj. Rowe has been laboring under great debility from paralysis. He resides at Salisbury Point, Mass. † Thomas J. Whipple is the son of Dr. Thomas Whipple, of Wentworth, and was that the greater part of the detachment must perish by that malady before it could possibly leave for the interior. At length, after labor and fatigue continued and harassing for nearly three weeks, on the morning of the 14th of July Col. Ransom of the Ninth Regiment, and two companies of the Twelfth Regiment under Capt. Wood, left for San Juan, on the road to Jalapa. On the next day, a second detachment of six companies of infantry (four of the Fourteenth and two of the Third Regiment, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Hebert) started for San Juan; and, on the 16th of July, Gen. Pierce left the camp at five o'clock, P.M., with the Fourth Artillery, Lieut.-Col. Watson's Marine Corps, a detachment of the Third Dragoons, and about forty wagons.

The enemy offered no obstruction to the advance of the detachments until the first branch of the San Juan was at Norwich, Vt., under the instruction of the lamented Col. Ransom. He read law with Hon. Josiah Quincy, of Rumney, and settled at Meredith (now Laconia) in the practice of his profession. He was appointed First Lieutenant of the Ninth United States Infantry, April 9, 1847, and Adjutant of the same in May following. He accompanied the regiment to Vera Cruz, but soon after his arrival, indulging his curiosity in examining a Catholic cemetery in the neighborhood, he was unfortunately taken prisoner. He was in company with private R. H. A. Barnes. When they came to the gate of the cemetery, they were met by three Mexicans (who had dismounted from their horses) with their escopets pointed at them. Lieut. Whipple was armed with a sword, and placed himself at once against the wall, and prepared to defend himself. Barnes, unarmed, made the best of his way through the cemetery to the camp. The Mexicans drew their swords and made at Whipple, who stoutly defended himself; "but, three upon one," one of them hit him a blow upon the head, stunning him, but not injuring him, as the blade, meeting a parry, struck flatwise upon the Lieutenant's head. Recovering himself, he set vigorously at work, when the Mexicans retreated a few paces and brought their escopets to bear upon him, making unmistakable signs, which a Yankee could understand, that "it is surrender, or we fire." Whipple, thinking that in this case "discretion was the better part of valor," gave up, and was led away upon a mustang, while his own horse was appropriated by his captors. Barnes gave the alarm, and a detachment was sent out in search of him, but the guerillas had escaped with their captive. Whipple was well treated by them, and was subsequently exchanged, and distinguished himself in the battle of Atlixco, where he was volunteer Aide-decamp to Brig.-Gen. Lane. Adj. Whipple resigned Feb. 23, 1848. He resumed his practice at Meredith (now Laconia) after the war. He was appointed Adjutant of the Twenty-ninth Regiment, Aug. 3, 1848. He was Assistant Clerk of the House of Representatives in June, 1848; Clerk in 1849, '50, '51, and '52; and Solicitor for the County of Belknap in 1849, '50, '51, and '52. Upon the commencement of the war of the rebellion, Capt. Whipple was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the First Regiment New-Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, April 29, 1861, and was mustered out Aug. 9, 1861. Ang. 20, 1861, Lieut.-Col. Whipple was appointed Colonel of the Fourth Regiment New-Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and resigned March 18, 1862. He is now in successful practice at Laconia, and withal a pattern farmer. Col. Whipple is an able advocate, of sociable manner and infinite jest and humor.

reached. The guerillas were attempting the destruction of the bridge over this stream; but Col. Ransom's advance was upon them before they had accomplished their design, and the damage was quickly repaired.

Mexican guerillas were seen along the road at a safe distance after leaving San Juan, and several escopets were discharged at the troops in advance; but the brigade first came under the fire of the enemy on the road beyond Telema Nueva, on the 20th of July. Mexicans had been discerned along the road at distant points, evidently reconnoitring. As a train under Col. McIntosh had been attacked near this place and suffered much damage, Gen. Pierce made arrangements for any such contingency. In a private journal kept at the time he says:—

"I detached Capt. Larkin Smith of the Eighth Infantry, with three companies of infantry and a party of dragoons, by a path on the left of the main road that debouched from an old Spanish fort, whence an attack was anticipated. A detachment of dragoons under Lieut. Deven, Col. Ransom with the Ninth Regiment, and Capt. Ridgely with three pieces of his battery, marched on the main road. Captain Smith, having traversed the route upon which he was directed, again intersected the main road near the fort above referred to, a little ahead of the advance of our column. In this position, as soon as Capt. Smith's detachment had well extended upon the road, the enemy opened a brisk fire. They were concealed and strongly posted in the chaparral, on both sides of the road. the greater number on the right. The fire was promptly returned and sustained on both sides for some minutes. when Capt. Ridgely unlimbered one of his pieces and threw a few canister-shot among them. This immediately silenced the enemy's fire, which had been nearly done by Capt. Smith before the artillery came up. Capt. Bodfish, with three companies of the Ninth Infantry, was sent to attack the enemy in flank; but his flight was too precipitous for this detachment to come up with his main body. I could not ascertain the enemy's loss. The Mexican paper at Jalapa stated it at forty, which I think was an exaggeration. Our own loss was six wounded, and seven horses shot. I witnessed with pleasure the conduct of that part of my command immediately engaged on this occasion. The first fire of the enemy indicated a pretty formidable force, the precise strength of which could not be ascertained, as they were completely covered by the chaparral. It was the first time on the march that any portion of my command had fairly been under fire. I was at the head of the column on the road, and witnessed the whole scene; saw nothing but coolness and courage on the part of both officers and men."

The brigade continued its march on the afternoon of the 20th, and encamped for the night at Paso de Orejas, starting on the following morning, at four o'clock, for Puente Nacionale (National Bridge). Says Gen. Pierce in his journal:—

"Puente Nacionale, July 21, . . . Anticipating, from rumors which had reached us upon the road, an attack at this place, and having no map of its defences, natural or artificial, I halted the entire command on the top of the long hill which descends to the fork of the Antigua River. With a detail of two companies of the Twelfth Infantry, commanded by Capts. Wood and Danvers, I proceeded in person two or three hundred yards to an elevation on the right of the road, from which with my glass I could command a view of the bridge, the village, and the enemy's positions. There were a few lancers in the village, riding rapidly from one position to another, flourishing a red flag, and occasionally, as if in defiance, coming up to the barricade which they had thrown across the bridge. body of the enemy, however, was posted behind a temporary breastwork on a bluff, a hundred and fifty feet high, commanding the whole bridge, and overhanging, as it were, the eastern arch. Their position could not be turned, as the heights continue precipitous from the water's edge for a long distance below. The tongue of land, dividing the fork referred to above from the main stream of the Rio del Antigua, rises to an immense height on the left; and on this eminence is a fortification, which, from the road, has the appearance of great strength. After crossing the bridge, the road turns suddenly to the left. Having satisfied myself that this fort on the left was not occupied, I sent forward Capt. Dobbins with his company, together with Company G, Fourth Infantry, and Company I, Voltigeurs, under Capt. Archer, along the brow of the hill to the bank of the Antigua opposite the village, with instructions, if possible, to cross the river above. The passage above, like that below, being found impracticable, I rode forward with my Aide-de-camp, Lieut. Thom,* to reconnoitre the enemy's works more closely, and to find on the left, if possible, a position for artillery. In this I was to a certain extent successful, and immediately ordered forward three pieces, two under the command of Capt. Ridgely, and one under Lieut. Getty, of the Fourth Artillery. These were stationed on a piece of table-land, perhaps an acre in extent, four or five rods from the west end of the main bridge, and thirty feet above it. The pieces swept the bridge, and dispersed the lancers from the village. Shots were also thrown at the heights, but, in consequence of the great elevation of the bluff where the enemy's main body was posted, without any other effect than to distract his fire from the advance, under Col. Bonham, then awaiting my orders to cross. This portion of Col. Bonham's command consisted of Company B, Twelfth Infantry, under Captain Holden; a detachment of the same regiment under Lieut. Giles; two companies of Pennsylvania volunteers under Capts. Caldwell and Taylor; Company C, Voltigeurs, Lieut. Forsyth; and Company F, Eleventh Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant Hedges. Under the discharge of the artillery of the enemy's works, the command was given to Col. Bonham to advance. It was admirably executed. Capt. Holden's company, leading, rushed over the bridge with a shout; the captain, some paces in advance, leaped the barricade of brush and timber, his men following with great enthusiasm.

"Having crossed the bridge, he threw his company under the cover of buildings immediately beneath the bluff, and, taking a narrow steep path to the right, was in a few moments upon the summit, when the whole brigade greeted him with hearty cheers. The remainder of the command followed rapidly, and in good order. In the mean time, with a view to cut off the retreat of the foe, Capt. Dupreau, of the Third Dragoons, had leaped the barricade, dashed through the village, and, almost simultaneously with Capt. Holden, planted the colors of his company upon the breast-work from which the plunging fire had so recently ceased. The guerillas and lancers could hardly have waited, after the first shout of Holden's company, to see the effect of their own fire; for, before our first detachment reached their works, they were in full flight, beyond pursuit, in the dense chaparral of the mountains in their rear.

"Col. Bonham's horse was shot near me, and I received an escopet-ball through the brim of my hat, but without other damage than leaving my head, for a short time, without protection from the sun. The balls pattered like hailstones around us at the moment the column advanced: and it seems truly wonderful that so few took effect. A large portion of them passed over our heads, and struck between the rear of Col. Bonham's command and the main body of the brigade, two or three hundred yards behind with the train, thus verifying what has so often been said by our gallant fellows within the last forty days, that 'the nearer you get to these people in fight, the safer.' The encampment was made in the village for the night, thirty miles from Vera Cruz. Here Gen. Santa Anna has a spacious and magnificent hacienda, in which I established my headquarters.

"July 22.—I left the princely hacienda of Santa Anna, at the Natural Bridge, this morning at four o'clock. moment our picket-guards were withdrawn, the enemy appeared on all the surrounding heights, but at distances too respectful to provoke any particular notice. I proceeded on the march without molestation, until we commenced the descent of the Plan del Rio, where Capt. Dupreau's company of cavalry, a few hundred yards in front of the column, was fired upon from the chaparral, and three horses wounded. Lieut.-Col. Hebert, being next to the dragoons, threw out a company of skirmishers on either side, and, with the remainder, continued the march on the main road. Nothing more, however, was seen or heard of the enemy. An old Spanish fort stands on a high eminence at the right of the road, commanding it in all directions, and overlooking the bridge. A bridge about four hundred yards west of the main stream had been barricaded, evidently with the intention of defending it. But neither the fort nor the position beyond the barricade was occupied; the enemy, as we soon learned, having hit upon another expedient for checking our advance, which they evidently believed must cause several weeks' detention, and probably drive the command back upon the coast.

"Removing the barricade at the small bridge, and proceeding about four hundred yards, we came to the Plan del Rio, over which there had been a bridge similar to Puente Nacionale. It was a magnificent structure of art, combining great strength and beauty, a work of the old Spaniards, so many of which are found upon this great avenue from the coast, fitted to awaken the admiration and wonder of the traveller. The fact that the main arch, a span of about sixty feet, had been blown up, first burst upon me as I stood upon the brink of the chasm, with a perpendicular descent of nearly a hundred feet to the bed of a rapid stream, much swollen by the recent rains. As far as the eye could reach, above and below, the banks on the west side, of vast height, descended precipitously almost in a perpendicular line to the water's edge.

"This sudden and unexpected barrier, I need not say, was somewhat withering to the confidence with which I had been animated. The news having extended back along the line, my officers soon crowded around me; and the deep silence that ensued was more significant than anything which could have been spoken. After a few moments' pause, this silence was broken by many short epigrammatical remarks, and more questions.

""We have it before us now!' said Lieut.-Col. Hebert. 'The destruction of this magnificent and expensive work of a past generation could not have been ordered but upon deliberate and firm purpose of stern resistance.' 'This people have destroyed,' said another, 'what they never will rebuild.' 'What is to be done with this train?' 'What do you propose now, General?' 'To have it closed up,' I replied, 'as compactly as possible, to-night, and to cross tomorrow with every wagon.' But I confess there was no very distinct idea in my own mind how the thing was to be accomplished.

"I ought to have mentioned that the Ninth Infantry, under the gallant Col. Ransom, which was that day in advance, on discovering that the bridge had been blown up, and supposing the enemy to be in force on the other side, immediately descended the steep banks, by the aid of trees and other supports, and forded the river. They then took possession of a church on the other side.

"A long hill descends from the west towards this river; the road is narrow, and there is no ground for an encampment, or the packing of wagons. The wagons, therefore, having been closed up, were of necessity left in the wood, making a line of more than a mile and a half in length. Thus disposed, every precaution was taken for the protection of the train, and the brigade was left to bivouac.

"The growth for miles around was low and scrubby, affording no timber to reconstruct the arch; and it was perfectly apparent that no passage could be effected at the north. Lieut. Thom, and two or three scientific officers with him, had been occupied from the time of our arrival in making a careful reconnoissance down the banks of the river for two or three miles below. At dark they reported that the difficulties in that direction did not diminish, but that a road might probably be constructed down the bank, some hundred yards south of the bridge. Weary and not in the most buoyant spirits, we all sunk to repose.

"Early the next morning I sent for Capt. Bodfish, of the Ninth Infantry, an officer of high intelligence and force of character. He had been engaged for many years in the lumber business, and accustomed to the construction of roads in the wild and mountainous districts of Maine, and was withal a man not likely to be checked by slight obstacles in the accomplishment of an enterprise. It occurred to me, therefore, that he was the very man whose services should, on this occasion, be put in requisition.

"Being informed of the object for which he had been called, he retired, and, returning in half an hour, said that he had examined the ground, and that the construction of a road, over which the train might safely pass, was practi-'What length of time,' he was asked, 'will necessarily be occupied in the completion of the work?' 'That,' said he, 'will depend upon the number of men employed. If you will give me five hundred men, I will furnish you a road over which the train can pass safely in four hours.' The detail was immediately furnished, and, at the end of three hours, the energetic and most deserving officer reported to me that the road was ready for the wagons. Fortune favored us in more respects than one. The water in the river, which in the rainy season is a rapid and unfordable stream, fell one and a half feet from the time of our arrival to the hour of the completion of the work. 'Bodfish's road' (unless this nation shall be regenerated) will be the road, at that place, for Mexican diligences for half a century side of Plan del Rio, where there are barracks and many ranches, we are comfortably quartered for the night. The troops are in the highest spirits, and jokes innumerable are passing among our Southern brethren upon the absurdity of Mexicans attempting to play such a trick on Yankees. The heat had been so excessive that I intended to remain one day at this place for the refreshment of men and animals; but all are anxious to proceed, and we move in the morning. Thus the destruction of this very expensive work, instead of retarding my progress for a single hour, has added fresh confidence and enthusiasm to the command."

The guerillas had been so punished by Pierce's command, and their attacks, barricades of bridges, and destruction of the National Bridge had caused his brigade so little delay, that they left him to pursue his way unmolested; and in the march by Cerro Gordo, and through Jalapa and Perote to Puebla, the enemy made no show of resistance. On the 7th of August, Gen. Pierce entered Puebla with his brigade in fine spirits, not having lost a single wagon upon the route, and in such good condition that Gen. Scott determined upon an immediate onward movement; and the next morning, Gen. Twiggs, with the ordnance, commenced his march upon the City of Mexico. Gen. Scott left the same day, and joined Gen. Twiggs upon the road. On the third day of its march, the American army passed Rio Frio, the noted pass of the highest point of land on the national road between Mexico and Vera Cruz, and ten thousand feet above the level of the ocean.

Gen. Scott had determined to approach the city by the national road, though careful reconnoissances had shown it strongly defended, and the plan of approach had been made,—the order of march to be reversed, Gen. Worth's division in the advance, and that of Twiggs in the rear; and Worth's division had actually advanced some distance upon the road, when Noah E. Smith, an American long resident in Mexico, and who had fled from that city and joined the army, informed Gen. Worth that a road south of Lake Chalco was practicable. He knew the ground, as he had passed over it in his hunting excursions. This information was immediately communicated to Gen. Scott, a reconnoissance ordered, and the ground found as Mr. Smith had represented. Gen. Worth's division was set in motion from Chalco on the 15th of August south of the lake, and, following the trail pointed out by Mr. Smith, made it passable for artillery and wagon train, and arrived at San Augustine on the 17th of August; thus avoiding the strongly fortified works at El Penon, the Causeway, and Mexicalcingo,* and preventing a great sacrifice of human life, and very possibly securing our victories in the Valley of Mexico: and all this was owing to the praiseworthy efforts of a patriotic son of New-Hampshire! †

As soon as Santa Anna discovered that Gen. Scott was cutting a way for himself south of Lake Chalco, to reach the Acapulco road leading from the south into the city, he moved the larger part of his forces to San Antonio and its neighborhood, and made the best disposition of them in his power to stay the approach of Gen. Scott to the city. Gen.

* There were twenty batteries at El Penon, mounting fifty-one guns, and, in addition, fifteen breastworks for infantry; and at Mexicalcingo there were eight batteries, and one breastwork for infantry. In addition, some four hundred rods from El Penon, toward the city, there were two strong batteries commanding the Causeway.

† Noah E. Smith, Esq., is a native of Gilmanton, in this State. He had resided in Mexico for nearly twenty years, and had amassed a fortune. Upon the commercement of serious difficulties between our government and Mexico, Mr. Smith prepared for the result, and arranged his affairs accordingly. He had been twice driven from Mexico, suspected by the Mexicans of an undue regard for his countrymen, — the last time on account of his assistance afforded to Cols. Gaines and Borland, and the soldiers of their commands, taken at Encarnacion, and then confined in a dungeon in the City of Mexico. Bribing a guerilla chief, withsix of his desperadoes, to assist him, he escaped over the mountains, and joined Gen. Scott at Puebla two days before the arrival of the reenforcements under Gen. Pierce. He accompanied the army back to Mexico, and gave important information as to the route. When the army arrived at Chalco, he informed Gen. Worth of the trail south of Lake Chalco, and, acting upon his information, the strong positions upon the national road were turned.

Mr. Smith left Mexico with our army, and returned to his native State. He is a patriotic and noble man. Maj. Gaines, of Kentucky (who had been captured with Maj. Borland and some seventy cavalry from Kentucky and Arkansas, at Encarnacion, just before the battle of Buena Vista, and had been for a long time immured in a Mexican prison), in a speech made in Boston in 1848, thus photographed, with the hand of an artist, the character of Mr. Smith: "I have been," said Maj. Gaines, "to New-Hampshire. I went there on a pilgrimage. I went there to pay my respects and pour out my gratitude to a New-Hampshire man, whom I met in Mexico, or rather who met me; who visited me in my dungeon, who found me there 'naked and he clothed me, sick and in prison, and he ministered unto me.' I went there to render him my gratitude for kindnesses done me in a far-distant land." Mr. Smith still resides in Gilmanton, enjoying, as he deserves, the respect of the community in the highest degree.

Valencia occupied the heights of Contreras, intrenched himself, and planted his batteries. On the 19th of August commenced the series of battles for the mastery in the Valley of Mexico,—with that of Contreras. Let a participator in all of them tell of the triumph of the American arms:—

"We remained in Puebla until the 10th, when the Third Division, of which the Ninth is a part, commenced its march toward the Aztec city; the other commands having already gone, Gen. Twiggs leaving the day after our arrival. The whole effective force under Gen. Scott, on leaving Puebla, was seventy-five hundred men; and this mere handful was to be thrown into the very heart of the enemy's country, hallowed by all those associations which always cling around the capital of a nation. At Chalco, the army halted for several days. This place is eighteen miles from the City of Mexico. Here Gen. Scott determined to take a circuitous route, thus avoiding some strong fortifications, which to attempt to reduce might endanger the whole army. Many points on the road over which we passed might have been fortified to advantage; but Santa Anna, considering the road impracticable, had neglected it. We passed through several villages, the inhabitants of which had fled with all their movable effects to the mountains. On the 17th of August we arrived at San Augustine. We had passed nearly round the city to find the most available point to attack, but we could pause no longer; it must now be victory or death. Our provisions were exhausted; the army was without money and without credit. To remedy this, the city must be within our power. Accordingly, on the 19th of August, we were ordered to dislodge the enemy from the position they occupied on the heights of Contreras, where they had a force of sixteen thousand men, and twentythree heavy pieces of artillery, besides four large mortars. The Ninth and four companies of the Twelfth passed to the left of the enemy's batteries over the pedrogal (rough volcanic grounds, so full of fissures and chasms that the enemy considered it impassable), scrambling along as best we could; the shells and grape of twenty cannon, besides the balls of thousands of muskets, showering down among And I would here mention the gallantry of Gen. Pierce, who rode boldly forward, urging us on, not only in word, but by example. Unfortunately his horse stumbled on the rough ground, throwing his rider, who was injured severely. Though scarcely able to stand, he again took the field in the morning, leading us on to Churubusco; but so severe was the injury he had received, that he became exhausted and fell from his horse. As an officer, New England may well be proud of her Pierce, and the old Granite State can behold with delight the deeds of her favorite son. At last we found shelter from the enemy's fire in a deep ravine, where we remained till night. In the mean time, two spies were taken, one of whom, in attempting to escape, was run through the body by Capt. Wood of the Twelfth. Towards night a cold, drizzling rain came on, and, without a mouthful of food since morning, we rolled ourselves up for the night. Just after dark, the danger of our position becoming known to the commander, we were ordered to retire to a position more secure. The troops in our rear had been drawn off, leaving about three hundred of us within musket-shot of the enemy's works, and in such a situation that the enemy could easily have taken us by surprise; and, had they known our exact position, we should either have been cut down defending our lives, or fell into their hands as prisoners. The rain poured down in torrents as we silently commenced our retreat, feeling our way along in the darkness, as best we could, over a path which the enemy considered impassable even by daylight. Finally we halted, covered with mud, our clothes wet to the skin, and our blankets no better. In this situation you can imagine how we passed the night better than I can describe The enemy thought, because he retained possession of his position, that we were defeated, and during the night Valencia sent off couriers in various directions to announce his victory over the Yankees; but his enjoyment of success was brief, for with the morning came the charge, and, after a short but bloody fight, the enemy fled in all directions, a large number of whom were subsequently cut off and made prisoners. Twenty-three splendid brass pieces, two of which had been captured at Buena Vista, and four large mortars, fell into our hands, besides an immense amount of ammunition and arms. Our loss in killed and wounded, I regret to say, was large, but the enemy suffered much more severely. At some places on the field, the sight was truly horrible. In one place, containing about three hundred and sixty square feet, the dead and dying lay piled together to the number of fifty-seven men, and here amidst this scene of carnage was also the dead body of a woman!

"This morning (the 20th), in the absence of the senior officer (caused by sickness), I had the pleasure of leading the New-Hampshire boys (the largest company present in They behaved gallantly, the regiment) on to the charge. doing great credit to themselves for their coolness and intrepidity, so much so as to gain the applause of the gallant Ransom. Those of the enemy that escaped the general carnage of Contreras fled to Churubusco, where they had a large force strongly posted in a convent. To this place we pursued them, and, on the same day that brought the battle of Contreras to a close with such a glorious result (the 20th of August), we also achieved the glorious victory of Churubusco. Our force engaged here was not over six thousand; that of the enemy, about thirty thousand. For three hours was heard the deafening roar of artillery and musketry, mingled with the groans of the wounded and dying. Our troops were cut to pieces in all directions, but, nothing daunted, they pressed bravely forward, carrying the enemy's batteries at the point of the bayonet.

"We captured all their cannon, consisting of twenty or thirty fine pieces, also a large number of prisoners, among whom were eighty deserters from our army. In this battle, Sergt. Lewis B. West, of Manchester, was mortally wounded. He fell by my side, crying out to me as he threw down his gun, 'Poor West is shot,' and in about twenty minutes he expired. Sergt. West was a good soldier, and fought bravely at Contreras; he was beloved both by officers and men; and, while his friends will mourn his loss, they will have the satisfaction to know that he fell in his country's service while bravely doing his duty to her as a citizen and soldier.* The victories of Contreras and Churubusco opened ^{*} Aside from West, there were other brave soldiers in the ranks, from New-Hampshire, who fell in the Valley of Mexico. There were three brave soldiers from Concord, worthy of particular notice, —Henry F. Carswell, John C. Stowell, and Ezra T. Pike. The three were printers in the office of the "New-Hampshire Patriot." Of these, Stowell had been Captain, and Carswell Lieutenaut, of the noted "Columbian Artillery," attached to the Eleventh Regiment. Carswell was from Portsmouth; Stowell was a native of Ashburnham, Mass.; and Pike was a native of Haverhill. Of these brave men, Gen. Pierce thus spoke in a public speech in Concord, soon after his return from Mexico: "There was private Henry F. Carswell, whose gallantry was marked, and who entered Mexico in perfect health, never having been touched or harmed in a single battle, but died suddenly of fever. Sergt. Stowell, another printer, was shot plumb through the chest. I thought," said the General, "that he could not live an hour; but when I found him at the convent, the next day, he was blessed with a clear mind and unflinching fortitude. He said, 'General, it is all over with me; will you write home?' but added a thought, the first and last with the army, 'Did the boys speak of me? Did they say whether I behaved well?' And this was the spirit, the unparalleled the way to the city, but Gen. Scott paused to offer the enemy one more chance to accept an honorable peace before he planted the stars and stripes on the National Palace. An armistice was agreed upon; commissioners on the part of the two countries met to negotiate terms of peace. But the ink was scarcely dry on the paper before the armistice was broken. Santa Anna, in direct violation of the agreement he had entered into, at once commenced collecting his scattered troops, putting the city in a state of defence, &c. So open had the violation become, that, on the 7th of September, Gen. Scott informed Gen. Santa Anna that the armistice was terminated. Gen. Scott had received information that the enemy were casting cannon out of the bells of the city at a foundry near by, known as 'Molino del Rey,' and he determined to destroy it. The foundry was strongly fortified; defended not only by its own guns, but by those of the Castle of Chepultepec. A large body of troops was also stationed within the walls, which could be increased by fifteen thousand, either from the castle or city. On the 8th of September the attack was made, and word came that Gen. Worth's division was hard pushed. Gen. Scott rode up to General Pierce, who was at the right of the Ninth, and ordered him to relieve Gen. Worth at once. This order was obeyed, and the Ninth and Second Infantry moved up, under Gen. Pierce, by a happy manœuvre, in the face of fifteen thousand of the enemy, and under a most destructive fire. The enemy's works were carried at the point of the bayonet, but it was a bloody and dearbought victory, costing the life of many a gallant soldier. Among those severely wounded was Lieut. Foster, of Nashua, whom I have just paid a visit, and find fast recover-spirit, which secured to us victory, and gave us possession of the city. And there was Sergt. Pike, who, having behaved with distinguished gallantry in all the preceding engagements, fell pressing up on the Causeway to the gate Belen. He was in one of the arches of the Aqueduct, when a bomb from the castle exploded, and killed every man in it except Pike, and his leg was literally torn off by the shell, but worse by the pretended amputations that followed. The bone of his thigh was found protruding two inches two or three days after. There was a second amputation. Some defect made a third necessary. When I called, "said the General, "upon the Sergeant and said, 'I fear you are not able to endure another amputation now,' Pike replied, 'I can, sir. I have made my mind up to it. I want it taken off to-day, and, when they cut it off again, I hope they will cut it so that it will stay cut!" Such was the indomitable spirit of our soldiers in a foreign land that gave them victory.

thousand brave soldiers; and the enemy still retained possession of the city and the heights of Chepultepec. On the 12th commenced the bombardment of the latter place, which continued through the day, but with little effect. Gen. Pierce, during this bombardment, at the head of the First and Third Brigades of the division, gallantly held in check a large body of lancers on our left.* In the afternoon Gen. Pillow rode up to where our regiment lay, and, calling the boys around him, he raised his arm, and, pointing toward the heights of Chepultepec, exclaimed: 'Tomorrow, if you say it, the star-spangled banner floats up yonder. If New England would place her name on the bright page of history, now is her time. You of the Ninth, if you will, shall lead in the charge. None need volunteer who will not swear to enter that castle yonder, or die.' We waited no longer, but, almost to a man, desired to see the inside of Chepultepec, rending the air with shouts for Pillow and victory. As the General was about to retire, he extended his hand to Col. Ransom, who grasped it warmly, saying, 'I pledge my word to lead my regiment into that castle, or die.'

"The morning of the 12th of September, about eight o'clock, the charge commenced, and in half an hour we occupied the heights, the stars and stripes waving over us. The two New-Hampshire companies, who behaved with their usual gallantry, were commanded respectively by ^{*} Gen. Franklin Pierce is the son of Ex-Gov. Benjamin Pierce, of Hillsborough, where he was born Nov. 23, 1804. He was educated at Bowdoin College, and graduated with the class of 1824. He read law in the offices of Hon. Edmund Parker of Amherst, Hon. Levi Woodbury of Portsmouth, and at the Law School at North Hampton, Mass. He was admitted to the bar of the county of Hillsborough in 1827, and commenced the practice of his profession in his native village, where he at once gained an extensive practice. He was elected a member of the Legislature in 1829, '30, '31, and '32, and the last two years Speaker of the House of Representatives. In 1833 he was elected a Representative to Congress, and again in 1835. In 1837 he was elected a member of the United States Senate, but resigned his seat in February, 1842. In June, 1838, he took up his residence in Concord. Upon resigning his seat in the Senate, Mr. Pierce resumed the practice of his profession. In 1845, he was appointed by Gov. Steele to the United States Senate, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. Levi Woodbury, but declined the appointment. The same year he was appointed, by President Polk, District Attorney for New-Hampshire. In 1846 he was tendered the office of Attorney-General of the United States, with a seat in the Cabinet, but declined the offer. In 1847, Feb. 16, he was appointed Colonel of the Ninth United States Infantry; and, when the ten new regiments were raised, he was appointed a Brigadier-General, March 3, 1847, and resigned March 20, 1848. In November, 1852, he was elected President of the United States, from the 4th of March, 1853. Upon retiring from the office of President, he spent a year in Europe, and has since made his residence in Concord.

Lieutenants Bowers and Jackson, who, on this as other occasions, proved themselves worthy sons of the old Granite State.

"Gen. Bravo, who commanded the castle, surrendered it to Capt. Kimball,* of Vermont, whose heroic deeds in this and former engagements make him a fit representative of the land of Ethan Allen. Our loss in killed and wounded was less than we anticipated, being about one hundred in all. Among the wounded was Gen. Pillow, though not badly. We had won a brilliant victory; but, while our success caused us to exult, there was cause for grief. The brave Ransom, who stood in the front at Contreras, who was first at Churubusco, whose voice was heard at Chepultepec above the thunder of battle, and whose gallant and manly bearing, whether it be in the more accomplished graces or in the dark hour of danger, would do honor to a Marshal Nev or a Murat, was no more. He fell about half way up the heights, shot dead through the head with a musket-ball. I would be glad to do justice to his memory, to paint in truthful colors some of the glowing deeds of Vermont's departed hero, but I leave the task to an abler pen than mine.

^{*} Capt. E. A. Kimball was from Vermont, and proprietor and editor of a paper in Woodstock, we believe. He was born in Pembroke, N.H. He was appointed Captain in the Ninth. March 8, 1847. He was a brave soldier, and was the first man to scale the walls of Chepultepec, and to seize the halliards of the Mexican flag; and he and the brave Col. Seymour had the honor of lowering the same from its towering staff. In August, 1848, he was brevetted Major for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battles of Contreras and Churubusco, Aug. 20, 1847. He was discharged Aug. 26, 1848. He was afterwards connected with the "New-York Herald." Upon the breaking out of the rebellion he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment of Zouaves of New York, commanded by Col. Hawkins. In this position he served with distinction. In April, 1863, he was shot dead in cold blood by Col. Michael Corcoran, the commander of a rival regiment of Zouaves from New York. Col. Kimball, enveloped in his overcoat, in the gray of the morning, just arrived in camp, stepped up to Col. Corcoran, who was on horseback, and inquired for the General's quarters. Without answering, Col. Corcoran drew a pistol and shot him upon the spot, thinking, or pretending to think, that he was an assassin about to attempt his life. Kimball's friends think it was a deliberate act, as Corcoran knew'Kimball perfectly well, and there was bad blood between them. Corcoran subsequently fell from his horse and broke his

[†] Col. Trueman B. Ransom was from Norwich, Vt., and was born in South Woodstock, Vt., in 1803. He was a pupil of the noted Capt. Alden Partridge, founder of the Military Academy and University at Norwich. He had aforetime held the highest military offices in Vermont, and in 1843 was chosen President of the Norwich University, in which position he was deservedly popular. Upon the raising of the new regiments for the Mexican war, President Ransom was appointed Major of the Ninth United States Regiment, Feb. 16, 1847; and, upon the promotion of Col. Franklin Pierce, Maj. Ranson was appointed, in his place, Colonel of the Ninth United States Infantry, March 16, 1847. He had led his regiment in the battles of Contreras and Churubusco,

"As soon as the castle surrendered, we pushed on to the garita (city gate). The enemy maintained a most obstinate resistance at the first battery, but at last were obliged to give way, retiring a short distance to a second battery, which they also shortly abandoned, falling back to the garita, from which they were also obliged to retire.

situation night came on and the firing ceased.

"During the night a deputation from the City Council waited on Gen. Scott, informing him that Santa Anna, with his remnant of an army, had left the city; and, on the morning of the 14th of September, the stars and stripes floated in triumph over the National Palace. Thus ended five of the bloodiest battles ever fought in Mexico, in which the Ninth lost one hundred and twenty as brave fellows as ever shouldered a musket in their country's service. . . . "T. P. and won the praise of all as a brave, skilful, and accomplished officer. Leading his regiment and waving on his soldiers at the storming of Chepultepec, dressed in a superb uniform as for a gala or review day, he was too conspicuous a mark for the Mexican sharp-shooters, and fell, as a soldier would delight to fall, his face to the enemy, and cheering on his brave followers to victory. His death was deeply lamented throughout the country, and his position has never been filled in the institution over which he presided.

* Manuscript letter of Lieut. Thomas P. Pierce.

Lieut. Thomas P. Pierce is of Manchester. He is a native of Chelsea, Mass., where he was born, Aug. 30, 1820. He is by trade an ornamental painter. He was appointed a Second Lieutenaut in the Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, raised in New England, in the war with Mexico, April 9, 1847, and was attached to Company "H" of that regiment. He was brevetted First Lieutenant, Aug. 20, 1847, for gallant and distinguished conduct in the battle of Contreras and Churubusco. Lieut. Pierce led his company at Contreras. Capt. Kimball's company, from Vermont, was immediately in front, and, bringing his company to a halt, he exclaimed, "Steady, men; remember that you are 'Green Mountain Boys,' take good aim, and do such execution upon the Mexicans as shall do credit to old Vermont. Ready, aim, fire!" The company fired and did good execution upon the enemy, and filed off. Company C came next in turn, marching steadily up. "Halt," said Lieut. Pierce. "Now, boys, take steady aim, and give the Mexicans such a fire as will make old Vermont ashamed of When such was the coolness and rivalry of our soldiers, one ceases to wonder why six thousand Americans should have whipped thirty thousand Mexicans upon their own soil. He was appointed Second Lieutenant of the Stark Guards in the Ninth Regiment, June 5, 1846; promoted First Lieutenant, Sept. 13, 1848; and appointed Captain of the same, Jan. 9, 1850. In 1849, '50, and 1851, he was Aide-de-camp upon Gov. Dinsmore's staff, with rank of Colonel. Upon returning from Mexico, he resumed his occupation; but, upon the election of Gen. Pierce as President, he was appointed Postmaster of Manchester, March 28, 1853, and was re-appointed by President Buchanan, March 31, 1857. Upon the breaking out of the rebellion in 1861, he was appointed Colonel of the Second Regiment of New-Hampshire Volunteers, by Gov. Goodwin; and, when that regiment was transferred under the second call of President Lincoln for troops for longer service, he resigned, and engaged in mercantile pursuits in Manchester. Col. Pierce is an enterprising, energetic man of much business capacity.

And after this wise was it that the American army gained possession of the "Venice of Mexico," and dictated terms of peace in the "halls of the Montezumas."

FURTHER AMENDMENTS OF THE MILITIA LAW.

January 3, 1849, the Militia Law of 1847 was amended, the principal amendments being those stipulating that the various schools of instruction should be held between the first day of August and the fifteenth day of September annually; that they should be held for two successive days only, and that officers attending them, and producing certificates of such attendance duly signed by the proper officers, should receive one dollar and fifty cents for each day's attendance, and six cents a mile for travel to and from the school of instruction.

July 12, 1850, the Militia Law was further amended by providing that all male white persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years should be enrolled; that the captains and clerks of companies should receive one dollar per day for making the enrolments; that the selectmen or common council of a town or city should appoint officers to companies of militia having no persons suitable to command within their limits willing to accept commissions; abolishing all parade duty, inspections, and reviews of companies not raised by volunteer enlistments; providing that uniform companies might remain organized, or become organized, by the enlistment of persons eighteen years of age and upwards, in any town or city, or by the union of two or more towns, under certain specified conditions; that the Adjutant-General distribute the arms belonging to the State to the selectmen or common councilmen of the various towns, for the use of the ununiformed militia companies in their respective limits, and under certain restrictions; continuing the schools of instruction; that, instead of regimental inspections and reviews of the volunteers, as then by law required, the several brigadiers, subject to orders of the division generals, might order out their brigades, or any portion of them, for inspection and review; and that soldiers rendering service, duly certified, should receive from their towns and cities three dollars per man for each year.

In 1851, July 12, the Legislature enacted, "That the militia of this State shall be subject to no active duty, except in case of war, invasion, insurrection, riot, inability of the civil officers to enforce the execution of the laws, or other public danger or emergency." The act also required that, in case of any such emergency, the volunteer companies in the town or city where it should occur should first be called out; that the officers of companies, selectmen of towns, and city councils of cities, should perform the same duties as to enrolment, record, and returns of persons liable to do military, duty, as was required by the previous law; that Friends should not be liable to be enrolled if they produced certain certificates; that the captains and clerks of companies should receive from their several towns and cities one dollar each per day for the making out the enrolments; that soldiers called out upon any such emergency should receive each two dollars per day for service rendered and properly certified; that certain specified Acts of 1849 and '50 be repealed; and that each officer and soldier, who performed his specified duties in the May previous, receive one dollar for full compensation for military service the present year; and that each field and staff officer, not already paid, receive three dollars in full for his services duly performed the previous year.

By these alterations and amendments, the militia of the State became a mere skeleton upon paper, and soon possessed very little of vitality.

The organization of the State militia at this time was as follows:—

The law of 1851 had nearly forced all vitality from the militia system of the State, but yet there were occasionally some signs of life.

In July, 1854, the following preamble and resolution passed the House and Senate: — '

"Whereas, the dignity of the State and the public good require the maintenance of a well-organized militia, which is the proper, natural, and sure defence of the State in the times of peace and the first emergencies of war, and it is with regret that the active duty and organization of the militia is abolished; therefore,

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened, That the Adjutant-General be directed to present to the Legislature, at their next session, a bill for the organization and active duty of the militia of this State."

This was a movement in the right direction. The spirit embodied in this preamble and resolution had become so ingrained in the public mind, that voluntary associations were proposed in various sections of the State for military purposes. In the fall of this year, the battalion of militia known as "The Amoskeag Veterans" was organized. Its officers were as follows:—

REGIMENTAL OFFICERS.

Wm. P. Riddle, Colonel.
William Patten, First Lieutenant-Colonel.
Samuel Andrews, Second Lieutenant-Colonel.
Hiram Brown, First Major.
E. F. Stevens, Second Major.
John S. Elliot, Surgeon.
Wm. W. Brown, Surgeon's Mate.
B. M. Tillotson, Chaplain.
B. P. Cilley, Clerk.
James Hersey, Treasurer.

COMPANY OFFICERS.

- S. W. Parsons, Captain. James Wallace, Lieutenant.
- 2. J. G. Cilley, Captain. Phineas Adams, Lieutenant.
- Stephen M. Dow, Captain.
 E. J. Guilford, Lieutenant.
- 4. R. D. Mooers, Captain.
 Thomas Rundlet, Lieutenant.

In 1856 the military spirit was still further awakened in the State by the visit of the battalion of Amoskeag Veterans, then commanded by Col. Chandler E. Potter, to Washington and Mount Vernon. Their receptions at Worcester, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, on their route to and from Mount Vernon, made the affair a continual ovation.

In June, 1857, the old system of 1851 was abolished and a new one was adopted, having especially in view volunteer active duty.

In its details the new law was similar to that which had been in operation for a quarter of a century prior to 1851. Some of its prominent features were,—the annual enrolment of the men of New-Hampshire liable to do military duty, in the month of April, by the selectmen or assessors of each town or city, an abstract of the same to be made to the Adjutant-General's office before the 20th of May following; the active duty, or "training," to be performed only by the volunteers; the captain of each volunteer company, after the annual inspection of his company on the third Tuesday of May, to make correct return of the same to the adjutant of his regiment; every captain, by his own order, to call out his company one day in the year for drill and inspection, aside from the day of annual inspection and that for general muster; the annual regimental muster to be held on a day between the 1st of September and the 15th of October; the fashion and color of infantry uniforms to be determined by the Commander-in-chief; regiments to be formed from volunteer companies by the Commander-inchief, with the advice of the Adjutant-General and that of the general officers of the division and brigade to which the companies belonged; - the State to be divided into three divisions, the first division to comprise the counties of Rockingham, Strafford, Belknap, and Carroll; the second to comprise the counties of Hillsborough and Merrimack; the third to comprise the counties of Cheshire, Sullivan, Grafton, and Coös: each division to contain two brigades, the first brigade to consist of the county of Rockingham; the second to consist of the counties of Strafford, Belknap, and Carroll; the third, of Hillsborough; the fourth, of Merrimack; the fifth, of Cheshire and Sullivan; and the sixth, of Grafton and Coös;—companies of cavalry, artillery, grenadiers, or riflemen, organized properly under the law, to assume a corporate name, and hold real and personal estate not exceeding two thousand dollars; and each soldier and musician, performing all duty required of him by the law, to receive one dollar per day, for his services so performed, from the selectmen or mayor and aldermen of the town or city in which he resides.

This act went into operation Sept. 15, 1857. The organization of the militia under this law, however, was not as spirited as its friends anticipated.

The only regiment formed in 1858 was the First, in the Third Brigade. Its field and staff officers were as follows:—

John H. Gage, Colonel.

John B. Perkins, Lieutenant-Colonel.
Gilbert Wadleigh, Major.
Charles E. Sprague, Adjutant.
Wm. P. Ainsworth, Quartermaster.
Wm. W. Wallace, Paymaster.
Joshua F. Whittle, Surgeon.
Henry Boynton, Surgeon's Mate.
Martin W. Willis, Chaplain.

In the same year, there were only eight companies in the State the officers of which were in commission. These were four companies of the battalion of Amoskeag Veterans, Manchester; the Wilson Rifles, Keene; the Gilmanton Artillery; the Lyndeborough Artillery; and the Newcastle Light Guards.

In 1859, the military spirit received an impetus from the organization of a battalion of volunteer cavalry known as "The Governor's Horse Guards." The charter for the corps was obtained at the June session of the Legislature in 1859; but the battalion was not organized until Jan. 11, 1860. Its organization was the military event of the year, and did much to foster the military spirit in the State.

The officers, once elected and qualified, hold until others are qualified for their places. The organization of the corps is now intact, subject to the order of the Commander-inchief.

The following resclution, unanimously adopted at the annual parade, June, 1865, explains the present position of the corps:—

Whereas, the corps has for six successive years performed escort duty for the Chief Magistrate of the State on inauguration day, furnished carriages and dinners for State officials and their guests, defraying the expenses thus incurred, by private contribution of its members, who have never received pay for their services, or aid from the State, although the Legislature has been respectfully requested to consider the condition of the corps, and the expense incurred by its members in behalf of the State; therefore,

Resolved, That the active duties of the Governor's Horse Guards be so far suspended that no further parades be made, except by special orders from the Commander-in-chief, and no further levees be held until such time as suitable measures shall be taken guaranteeing payment for military service rendered and actual expense incurred by gentlemen in their associated capacity in conducting the annual public ceremonies attendant upon the inaugural of the Governor of New-Hampshire.

Attest,

CALVIN C. WEBSTER,
Captain of Co. A. and Clerk of Governor's Horse Guards.

The annual muster at Nashua in the fall of 1860, having among its notable attractions the Amoskeag Veterans and the Governor's Horse Guards, will long be remembered as a bright page in the history of the New-Hampshire volunteer militia.

The organization of the militia of New-Hampshire in 1860 was as follows:—

Clement March, Portsmouth.

Albert L. Jones, Portsmouth.

* Ex-Gov. Ichabod Goodwin was born in October, 1796, in Brunswick, Me., in that part of the ancient town now known as North Berwick. At the early age of fourteen years he entered, as clerk, the counting-room of Samuel Lord, Esq., a merchant of Portsmouth. In 1817, he commenced a seafaring life, as supercargo of a ship, and in the employment of Messrs. John P. & Samuel Lord. Soon after, he sailed in their employment as master and supercargo of one of their ships. In 1832, he left the sea, and engaged extensively in mercantile business, in connection with Samuel E. Coues, Esq. For some years prior to his quitting the sea, Capt. Goodwin had held an interest in the ships he commanded. He was Representative from Portsmouth in 1838, '43, '44, '50, '54, and '56. He was a member, in 1850, of the Constitutional Convention. He was the first President of the Eastern Railroad Company, in New-Hampshire, and held the office for twenty years. In 1847, he was elected the President of the Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth Railroad Company, which office he still holds. In 1859, Captain Goodwin was elected Governor of the State, and was re-elected again in 1860, -his term of office extending to June 5, 1861, and covering the raising and putting into the field the first two regiments of volunteer infantry from New-Hampshire, in the War of the Rebellion. It was fortunate for the State that such a man as Captain Goodwin was in the gubernatorial chair, as he had the confidence of the public as a merchant of integrity and a financier of ability. There were no funds in the treasury aside from those to meet the ordinary expenses of the State, and the crisis demanded "the sinews of war" in abundance, and that there should be no delay in raising our quota. In this dilemma, Gov. Goodwin appealed to the banking institutions and private individuals of the State, and they nobly came forward and placed at his disposal six hundred and eighty thousand dollars. With a portion of these funds (about fifteen per cent. of the sum volunteered), the two regiments were put in the field, without the expense or delay of calling an extra session of the Legislature, which, at its next session, approved the action of the Governor, by unanimously passing "the Enabling Act," and relieving him of his heavy responsibilities. Gov. Goodwin left the gubernatorial chair with the respect of all parties. In the community where he resides, no man has a larger share of the public confidence, as a man of enterprise, liberality, and integrity.

In the year 1810, the militia of this State consisted of three divisions, six brigades, and thirty-seven regiments; in 1820, it consisted of three divisions, six brigades, and thirty-eight regiments; in 1830, of three divisions, six brigades, and forty regiments; in 1840, of three divisions, six brigades, and forty-one regiments; in 1850, of four divisions, eight brigades, and forty-two regiments; and in 1860, it consisted of three divisions, six brigades, and one regiment, the First, and twelve independent companies.

This last was certainly rather a peculiar organization,—consisting, as it did, of one regiment of volunteers, and one of independent companies, to three divisions and six brigades.

In fact, at that time, when, more than at any other time during our existence as a nation, we needed a well-organized militia, we had little more than an organization upon paper, the lamentable results of which are apparent to every one.

From 1810 to 1851, the active militia of this State numbered annually upwards of thirty thousand well organized and disciplined soldiers; and, had we had such an organization at the commencement of the late rebellion, the State would have been hundreds of thousands of dollars better off to-day than it now is; and it is hoped that never again will this State be found in such a state of lethargy, or so utterly indifferent to its best interests and safety.

It will be seen from the preceding pages that the militia of the State, so efficient during the war of 1812-15 and for twenty years subsequent, through mistaken philanthropy and meddling officiousness, had dwindled in 1851 to a mere skeleton upon paper, laid away in the cabinet of the Adjutant-General's office, its only use being for that official annually in June to report of its preservation to the Governor, that he might rattle its lifeless bones in the ear of the Legislature. The militia of the State was literally dead. Its constitutional use — "the proper, natural, and sure defence of a State"—had been ignored and forgotten. How legislators could have answered their oaths and their consciences, in calling the militia authorized by the law of 1851 "a well-regulated militia," seems now, after the experience of the few years last past, an anomaly, to say the least. An apology for a nucleus of a volunteer militia existed in the organization of some few volunteer companies in the southern sections of the State, from 1851 to 1857; but these existed through the spirited exertions of a few individuals, and not by the nurture of State influence or State patronage. In 1857, a better tone of public sentiment prevailed, and the Legislature of that year attempted to renew the life and energy of the militia; but the attempt was almost in vain. Its signs of life were still local, and not general in the system. Its complete restoration required close care and attention, and a radical change of treatment; and this was a work of time.

Our militia thus prostrate and inactive, the rebellion of 1861 came upon us, and it could not be resuscitated for the emergency; and other means were had in requisition, and most happily answered the purpose.

Ex-Governor Goodwin thus speaks of the situation, of which, as good fortune would have it, he became master:—

"When the war broke out, there was no military organization in the State, except some few independent companies forming a regiment. Indeed, there was very little military interest. In the fall of 1860, there was an encampment of that regiment at Nashua, which somewhat aroused a military spirit. But the towns had generally neglected to keep an enrolment of the militia; rendering it impossible to make a draft when the first requisition upon this State was made by the President. There was no course for us but volunteer enlistments. In this we were very successful, and readily raised the two regiments called for. The only remaining difficulty arose from want of funds, which could not be legally procured without calling an extra session of the Legislature at great delay and expense. As soon as this position of affairs became known, the moneyed institutions of the State, and private individuals, at once came forward and placed at my disposal about six hundred and eighty thousand dollars, on which I made an assessment of about fifteen per cent; and the regiments were fitted out and sent to the field. I was gratified by the approval of my course in accepting this timely aid by the Legislature, which at its first subsequent session passed unanimously "the Enabling Act," thereby relieving me from the heavy personal responsibility I had incurred."*

For a State so noted, in the "Seven Years' War" with the French, in the "War of the Revolution," and the "War of 1812–15" with the British, for its militia and military operations both of offence and defence, this was a most humiliating position; and it is to be hoped that the wisdom of future legislatures will take care that the State shall never again suffer a like humiliation, by fostering the true interest of the State and the country at large,—"a well-regulated militia, the proper, natural, and sure defence of a State."

In May, 1775, Gov. John Wentworth left the Province, and the military affairs of the Province were managed by a Convention of Delegates from the people. January, 1776, a Convention met, and established a temporary Constitution, which continued during the war; under which all military affairs were managed by the Council and Assembly when in session, and, when not in session, by a committee chosen from their own number, called "The Committee of Safety." Under this arrangement, Maj.-Gen. Nathaniel Folsom, of Exeter, was Commander-in-chief during the War of the Revolution. In 1784, a new Constitution was formed, and by this the chief executive officer was styled "the President."

Adjutant-Generals of the New-Hampshire Militia.

- 1. Nathaniel Peabody, of Exeter. (See page 343 for sketch of him.)
- 2. Michael McClary, of Epsom. (See page 382 for sketch of him.)
- 3. Benjamin Butler, of Deerfield. Was the son of Rev. Benjamin Butler, of Nottingham, and was born in 1760. He represented the town of Deerfield in the Legislature in 1813. He was appointed Adjutant-General of the New-Hampshire Militia, May 18, 1813, as successor to Gen. McClary, who had resigned. Gen. Butler resigned the office of Adjutant-General, Dec. 14, 1820. He died in 1828, aged sixty-eight years.
- 4. Joseph Low. Was of Amherst (the son of William Low), where he was born, July 24, 1790. He was appointed Ensign in the United States Army, May 26, 1812, and attached to the Twenty-first Regiment, commanded by Col. E. W. Ripley, of the "District of Maine." In the summer of 1812, he was appointed Second Lieutenant of Capt. Wm. Bradford's company, attached to the volunteer regiment from New-Hampshire then being raised, and, upon the organization of that regiment in November of that year, was chosen Adjutant of the regiment. He declined the appointment, but accepted that of Quartermaster, and subsequently that of Paymaster. In the spring of 1813, Col. Davis's regiment of volunteers having been disbanded, Lieut. Low repaired to Concord on recruiting service; and such were his exertions and perseverance, and popularity with the men of the disbanded regiments, that he recruited the Forty-fifth Regiment, commanded by Col. Denny Mc-Cobb, in a very short time. Upon the close of the war, Lieut. Low settled in Concord, and was appointed Postmaster in 1815 by President Madison. He held this office until 1829, when he was succeeded by his brother, William Low. In 1819, he was appointed by Gov. Samuel Bell on his staff as Aide-de-camp, and again in 1820. December 19, 1820, Col. Low was appointed Adjutant-General. Under his direction, this office became of more importance, the militia better systematized, and the records more complete. He was elected a Representative from Concord in 1838, but did not take his seat. He was the first Mayor of the city of Concord, being elected in 1853 and '54. Gen. Low was a patriotic, energetic man, having and deserving the confidence and respect of his fellow-citizens. He died Aug. 28, 1859, aged sixty-nine years.

- 5. Charles H. Peaslee, of Concord. Was born at Gilmanton, Feb. 6, 1804. He graduated at Dartmouth in the class of 1824. He read law with Stephen Moody, Esq., of Gilmanton, and at Philadelphia, and commenced its practice at Concord in 1828. He was Representative in the Legislature in 1833, '34, '35, and '36. He was appointed Adjutant-General of the New-Hampshire Militia, July 6, 1839, and continued to hold the office until November, 1847, when he resigned, having been elected a Representative to Congress from this State. He was in Congress three terms from this State, from 1847 to 1853. He was appointed, by President Pierce, Collector of the ports of Boston and Charlestown in 1853, and continued in that position until 1861, when he removed to Portsmouth. Gen. Peaslee died at St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 20, 1866, aged sixty-two years.
- 6. John Wadleigh, is of Meredith. He was commissioned Lieutenant of the Second Company of Infantry in the Twenty-ninth Regiment, April 8, 1830; Captain, April 29, 1831; Adjutant of the Twenty-ninth Regiment, April 15, 1833; Colonel of the same, July 1, 1834; Brigadier-General of the Second Brigade, Sept. 4, 1837; and Major-General of the First Division, June 27, 1839. He was Representative from the town of Meredith in the Legislature in 1844 and '45, and was appointed Adjutant-General of the New-Hampshire Militia, Dec. 7, 1847, and held the same until July 3, 1855.
 - 7. Joseph C. Abbott. Is the son of Aaron Abbott, of Concord, and was born in 1825. He read law for a time with Hon. David Cross, of Manchester, and was proprietor and editor of the "Manchester American" from 18—to 18—. He was appointed Adjutant-General July 11, 1855, and held the office until July 30, 1861, when he resigned. October 2, 1861, he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Seventh Regiment New-Hampshire Volunteer Infantry; promoted Colonel July 22, 1863, in place of Col. H. S. Putnam, killed at Fort Wagner. He acted as Brigadier-General on several occasions prior to the attack on Fort Fisher, and was brevetted Brigadier-General on that occasion for gallant and meritorious service. After the close of the war, he purchased timber lands in company with others in North Carolina, erected mills, and engaged extensively in the timber business. He now resides in North Carolina.

- 8. Anthony Colby. Was born at New London, Nov. 13, 1792. He was bred a merchant as well as farmer. He has been much in public life. He was appointed Ensign of the Second Company of Light Infantry in the Second Battalion in the Thirtieth Regiment, Sept. 13, 1814, by Gov. John Taylor Gilman; Captain of the same, June 22, 1819; Major of the Thirtieth Regiment, June 25, 1825; Lieutenant-Colonel, June 28, 1825; Colonel, June 26, 1825; Brigadier-General, July 1, 1834; and Major-General, July 3, 1837. He represented the town of New-London in the Legislature in 1828, '29, '30, '31, '32, '37, '38, '39, and '60. He was elected Governor of the State in 1836, and served one year in that capacity. He was appointed Adjutant-General of the New-Hampshire Militia, July 30, 1861, and resigned Aug. 20, 1863, having had the responsibility of putting into the field the greater number of regiments of the volunteer infantry from New-Hampshire.
- 9. Daniel E. Colby. Is a son of Gen. Anthony Colby, and was born at New-London, in 1816. He graduated at Dartmouth College in the class of 1836, and entered upon mercantile pursuits in his native town. He was appointed as an Aide-de-camp, July 14, 1837, upon the staff of Major-General Colby. He was Representative in the Legislature from New London in 1857. He was appointed Adjutant-General of the New-Hampshire Militia, Aug. 21, 1863, and resigned the office March 25, 1864. He still resides in New-London as a merchant.

This completes the list of Adjutant-Generals, down to the date of appointment of the present incumbent, which was made by Gov. Gilmore on the 25th of March, 1864. It is possible that others may have served in this capacity; but, if so, no record of their appointment or service can be found.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

During the examination of the Revolutionary Records, making the extracts therefrom, and arranging the same, the writer was suffering under a partial loss of sight, and had to resort to a copyist and amanuensis to perform the duties assigned him. This fact must excuse, in part, the omissions and inaccuracies that occurred in the latter part of the history of the Revolutionary period, as given in the Report of 1866, vol. ii. Some of those are here corrected, and omissions supplied.

I. In the note as to Capt. John Hazen, page 211, vol. ii., Adjutant-General's Report of 1866, an error occurs. Capt. John Hazen died at Haverhill, N.H., before the close of the War of the Revolution. Moses Hazen was the man who resided at St. John's, joined Gen. Sullivan, and became a General in the War of the Revolution.

II. On page 261, vol. ii., Adjutant-General's Report, it is named that Col. Thomas Stickney was in command of the lately formed Eleventh Regiment. He was in command of that regiment, but not until after August, 1774. Prior to August, the Eleventh Regiment had for field officers,—

Andrew McMillen, Colonel. Thomas Stickney, Lieutenant-Colonel. Benjamin Thompson, Major.

Col. McMillen moved to Conway in August, 1774, and Lieut.-Col. Stickney succeeded him as Colonel of the regiment.

III. It appears from a petition from the soldiers themselves to the Legislature that, in 1777, Fort Sullivan, at "the Narrows," near Portsmouth, was garrisoned by a company of at least forty-eight men, under command of Capt. Eliphalet Daniel. IV. A company of thirty-four men went from Haverhill and Bath against Burgoyne, under Capt. Joseph Hutchins, and was out from Aug. 18, 1777, to Oct. 5 of the same year.

Joseph Hutchins, Captain. Timothy Bedel, First Lieutenant. Josiah Howe, Second Lieutenant. Ezekiel Ladd, Ensign.

This roll is separate from the other rolls in the like service, and nothing in the caption or heading of it to show its character. On the bottom of it, however, the above officers are endorsed. Hence its omission. Other rolls may be omitted in like manner; and it is to be hoped that any one discovering like mistakes will notify this office of them, that they may be corrected.

V. Sept. 27, 1779, the following troops were ordered out for the defence of Portsmouth:—

Capt. Lovering with sixty men; Capt. Benjamin Sias with fifty-three men; Capt. Nute with thirty-nine men; and Capt. Brown with thirty-two men.

VI. I have not been able to find the staff roll of Col. Reynolds's regiment in 1781, referred to on pages 333 and 334, vol. ii., Adjutant-General's Report of 1866. I find two companies - one commanded by Capt. Joseph Parsons, and the other by Capt. John Mills, of Merrimack - that probably belonged to his regiment, their rolls bearing evidence of the fact; and that Capt. Mills marched to Charlestown Sept. 28, 1781, and Capt. Parsons marched the 28th of the same month. It may be that Col. Reynolds's regiment marched by detachments to join our army in New York, by the way of Charlestown, and that his regiment was fully organized and on duty; but the following letter to him from Col. George Reed, after the surrender of Cornwallis, would seem to show that he was in Derry in October, or that Col. Reed thought he was in Derry, and not in the service: -

"Return of Prisoners, Ordnance Stores, Shipping, &c., taken in the Garrisons of York and Gloucester."

"One lieutenant-general, one brigadier-general, two colonels, fifteen lieutenant-colonels, seventeen majors, ninetyseven captains, one hundred and eighty lieutenants, fifty-five ensigns, four chaplains, fifteen surgeons, twenty-five mates, nineteen commissaries of different departments, three hundred and eighty-five sergeants, one hundred and seventy-nine musicians, six thousand and thirty-nine regular troops, four hundred and six mounted dragoons; eight hundred and forty seamen, exclusive of those belonging to the transports; three hundred and five rank and file killed during the siege, forty-four deserted to us; seventy-five pieces of brass ordnance, one hundred and sixty-nine pieces of iron, twentyfour standards, four union colors, two thousand one hundred and thirteen £ in the military chest. Ships-of-war taken; viz.: The 'Chanon,' of forty-four guns, blown up; the 'Iris,' of thirty-six, taken; the 'Richmond,' thirty-two; the 'Fowey,' of twenty; the 'Boneta,' of ten; the 'Viper,' of ten, all taken; also, fifty ships, snows, and brigs, beside one hundred and twenty sail of smaller vessels.

"Is taken: The Third Regiment British Light Infantry; the Second Regiment King's Guards; two do. Anspach; two of Hesse, and one of the Queen's Rangers, in which is Ensign Richard Holland. The Thirty-third, Seventy-first, Seventy-sixth, and Eightieth, established regiments; and Tarleton's corps of horse and foot.

"If you can make out to read this, you'll comfort our dear beloved friends, the Tories, in Derry with a sight of it. Excuse scarcity of paper. Yours, "GEORGE REED.

"DANIEL RUNELS, Colonel."

Still this letter may have been written to Col. Reynolds, then with the Northern Army in New York, for him to carry home, and "comfort our dear beloved friends, the Tories, in Derry."

VII. A mystery has existed, not to be explained by the records of "the Committee of Safety," of the Assembly, or of "The Revolutionary Papers," as to the raising and employment of the two regiments of Col. Bedel, raised, the one in the fall of 1777, and the other in the spring of 1778. But this mystery is explained by the following information, furnished by Gen. John Bedel, of Bath. Says Gen. Bedel:—

"Both of those regiments were raised in contemplation of expeditions into Canada, which never transpired; and the resolves in regard to raising the men are only to be found in the secret journals of Congress, first authorized to be printed by joint resolutions of March 27, 1818, and April 21, 1820, and first published in 1821. For instance, see —

"'IN CONGRESS.

" Dec. 3, 1777.

"" Whereas, destroying the enemy's shipping at St. John's, or elsewhere on Lake Champlain, during the winter season, is an enterprise of the utmost importance, and there being a great prospect of success, provided it can be conducted with prudence, resolution, and secrecy; therefore -

"'Resolved, That James Duane, Esq., . . . communicate the enterprise to Brig.-Gen. Stark, who is appointed to the command; . . . that Brig.-Gen. Stark be authorized, with the utmost secrecy, to select or raise a competent number of volunteers for this service; . . . that, if the enterprise prove successful, the sum of $20,000 shall be paid to the said Brig.-Gen. Stark, and his officers and men, to be divided among them in proportion as the pay of Continental officers and men bear to each other, as a reward for their service, and in full satisfaction of all wages and claims, or in such proportion more advantageous to privates as the General and his officers shall ascertain. if stipulated wages should be preferred to the chance of such reward, the General shall be at liberty to retain the officers and men at double pay and rations, during the expedition, in consideration of the inclemency of the season, and the importance of the service.

"'That Brig.-Gen. Stark be engaged to keep secret the said enterprise, and not to communicate it until the nature of the operations shall render it necessary.

"'That a warrant in the words following, subscribed by the President, be transmitted to Gen. Stark:—

"" IN CONGRESS.

"" YORKTOWN, Dec. 3, 1777.

"" Whereas, Brig.-Gen. Stark is appointed to command a secret expedition during the winter season, you are therefore directed and required, upon his order, to supply him with such sum of money, not exceeding $5,000, and such carriages, military stores, and provisions, as he may require, taking his vouchers for the same, and for which he is to be accountable by order of Congress.

- "" To the Commanding Officer, Paymaster, Quartermaster, and Commissioner of Stores and Provision in the Northern Department."
- "'That, if, from any unforeseen accident, Gen. Stark shall be unable or unwilling to engage in the said enterprise, the commanding officer in the Northern Department be in such case authorized and directed to appoint some other brave and diligent officer to the said command; and that such officer so commanding shall have the same powers, and, with the officers and men, the same reward or pay, as are before proposed.

"'That all officers in the service of the United States be required, and all civil officers and others requested, to give every aid and assistance in their power for forwarding and securing the success of said enterprise.'

"" Previously to this, on the 10th of November, 1777, my grandfather received a commission as Colonel from the Continental Congress, signed by Henry Laurens, President, and countersigned in the margin by Horatio Gates, Major-General, President of Board of War, to continue till revoked. Under this commission, and under the foregoing authority of Congress, he was selected; and the Lieutenant-Colonel and Major engaged to receive pay from Nov. 15, 1777; all the other field and company officers engaged Dec. 15, 1777; and the soldiers enlisted between the 15th day of January and the 8th day of March, 1778. You will notice that Benjamin Whitcomb, who had been appointed a Continental Captain Commandant Oct. 15, 1776, was selected as the Major of this regiment; so that the Colonel and Major both held Continental commissions. The expedition failed of being attempted, and all except the Colonel and Major were discharged March 31, 1778, and paid, as Continental soldiers, double pay, according to the resolve. They were raised by the Colonel under the Continental commission, paid by Congress; and hence the State of New-Hampshire had nothing to do with the rolls; and this accounts for their entire absence at the State Department. I have the original muster and pay rolls of this regiment, except the staff roll, which was probably forwarded by my father to Washington in some pension case, and was returned from the Pension Office in 1841 with the other New-Hampshire rolls. In addition to those company officers on the staff roll, I have the original muster and pay rolls of Capt. Seth Wheeler and Lieut. Thomas Butterfield. This additional captain might have been allowed on the ground that Capt. Nehemiah Lovewell went with a flag of truce, under orders from Gen. Gates, to Canada, in December, 1777, and was detained as a prisoner for twelve months,—the flag, by some misunderstanding, not being recognized by the authorities in Canada.

"Before the expedition was undertaken by Gen. Stark, it appears that Congress concluded to entrust it to Gen. Lafayette; for in Congress, Jan. 28, 1778, it was resolved that the Marquis de Lafavette, or the general officer commanding the irruption into Canada, be furnished with bills of exchange . . . to amount of 30,000 French livres. It was decided before Jan. 31 that Gen. Lafayette should proceed to undertake this expedition; but, upon his arrival at Albany, he found things in such a backward state of preparation as to deter him from proceeding further: and Congress, March 2, 1778, instructed him to suspend for the present the irruption, and authorized Gen. Washington, March 13, 1778, to order him to join the main army. to keep up the show of striking the blow in this direction, and be prepared to take advantage of any favorable turn of military events, Gen. Lafavette, on the 16th of March, 1778, before leaving Albany, ordered my grandfather to engage a thousand men for the campaign, service to commence from the date of the discharge of the First Regiment, March 31, 1778. I have the general order, which I found among the files of claims in the United States Senate archives. Under this order he raised eight companies for one year, four of which went to Albany, and four remained in this vicinity and Royalton, Vt. Application was made to Gen. Washington and Congress in November, 1778, through Lieut.-Col. John Wheelock, to recommend that the regiment be continued on the Continental establishment; but Congress resolved that it be disbanded. But, at the expiration of the term, April, 1778, Gen. Hazen's regiment, which had been ordered to this quarter, having failed to reach this point as early as anticipated, Bedel's regiment was retained in service till into May, 1779, and some of the men longer. It was in the Continental service, and claimed pay from the Congress of the United States; but a dispute arose on this point, which was settled by a resolution, passed Congress Nov. 3, 1783, on the recommendation of Gen. Lincoln, Secretary of War, 'that John Pierce, Paymaster-General of the United States, be directed to settle the accounts of the late regiment of Col. Bedel, and give certificate of the balance or balances, should there be any due, as is given to the line of the army.' Here they were clearly recognized as Continental troops. I have recently succeeded in ascertaining the fact that this regiment was paid by said John Pierce, Paymaster-General, as Continental troops, and the pay computed up to Jan. 1, 1780, and the balance paid in his final settlement certificates in 1784 and '85."

The company officers complete in Col. Bedel's regiment, raised in the spring of 1778 (a part of which only are given on page 353, vol. ii., of Adjutant-General's Report for 1866), were,—

- Ezekiel Ladd, Captain.
 James Ladd, First Lieutenant.
 Ephraim Patterson, Second Lieutenant.
- Charles Nelson, Captain.
 Ezra Moore, First Lieutenant.
 Silas Hamblin, First Lieutenant.
 Jonathan Darby, Second Lieutenant.
- Timothy Barron, Captain.
 Moses Chamberlain, First Lieutenant.
 Joseph Haynes, Second Lieutenant.

- Simeon Stevens, Captain.
 Ebenezer Martin, First Lieutenant.
 Robert Hunkins, Second Lieutenant.
- Solomon Cushman, Captain. Elias Stevens, First Lieutenant.
- Thomas Taylor, Captain.
 Joshua Young, Second Lieutenant.
- William Tarleton, Captain.
 George Moore, First Lieutenant.
 Ezekiel Elliot, Second Lieutenant.
- 8. Luther Richardson, Captain.
 Benjamin Sawyer, First Lieutenant.
 John Clark, Second Lieutenant.

VIII. Errors occurred on page 366, vol. ii., Adjutant-General's Report for 1866, as to the object of raising Bedel's regiment in the fall of 1777 (which is corrected on page 387), and in making the companies of Capts. Paine, Stowe, Eames, Heath, and Runnels to have been of Maj. Whitcomb's battalion. They were companies of Rangers, raised by the State for the defence of the frontiers, and had no connection with Maj. Whitcomb's battalion. He had command of an independent battalion of Rangers. He was of Westmoreland originally, and was a Lieutenant in Capt. Samuel Young's company, Col. Bedel's regiment, in 1776. He afterwards was in command of a company of Rangers, probably in the fall of 1776, and was subsequently promoted to Captain Commandant, by Congress, of two companies of fifty men each, by resolution of date Oct. 15, 1776, and had the nomination of the officers.

Capt. Whitcomb's company was doubtless transferred to the Continental service, as one of the two companies to be commanded by him under the resolution of Congress of Oct. 15, 1776, as a roll of his company is on file with the following caption: "Capt. Benjamin Whitcomb's company of Independent Rangers, from Oct. 14, 1776, to the last day of December, 1779"; showing the company in existence one day at least before the resolution was passed by Congress making him Captain Commandant of the two companies to be raised.

This company consisted of thirty-five officers and men.
The officers were thus:—

Benjamin Whitcomb, Captain. Thomas Lyford, First Lieutenant. Nathan Taylor, Second Lieutenant.

Subsequently Capt. Whitcomb was promoted to Major, and his command consisted of his own company, and one under Capt. George Aldrich, of Westmoreland. The latter company, from October, 1779, to Dec. 31, 1779, comprised nineteen officers and men. The officers were:—

George Aldrich, Captain.

Jonas Butterfield, First Lieutenant.

David Goodenough, Second Lieutenant.

Maj. Whitcomb's Independent Corps of Rangers, July 4, 1779, comprised fifty-two officers and men. The officers were thus:—

Benjamin Whitcomb, Major and Captain. George Aldrich, Captain. Thomas Lyford, First Lieutenant. Jonas Butterfield, Second Lieutenant. Nathan Taylor, Second Lieutenant.

Maj. Whitcomb's company, from Oct. 31, 1780, to Nov. 1 of same year, consisted of twenty-three officers and men. The officers were thus:—

Benjamin Whitcomb, Major. Thomas Lyford, First Lieutenant. Nathan Taylor, Second Lieutenant. Samuel Parker, Second Lieutenant.

IX. In the "Ranger Service," as spoken of on page 365, vol. ii., of Adjutant-General's Report for 1866, the names of several meritorious officers are omitted, who had command of companies or scouts at different periods of the Revolution upon our Northern and Northwestern frontiers.

In 1775, July 15, a company of twenty Rangers was stationed at Conway, under the command of Captain James Osgood.

In 1776, Capt. Heath was in command of a company at Conway, and by direction of "the Committee of Safety" had "a talk" with the Indians upon the Androscoggin on the 19th of October, 1776, and agreed on the part of this State to furnish them with supplies, as they were in need of provisions and ammunition, and were about to go to Canada to obtain them from the British. They kept their word and remained neutral until 1781, when the emissaries of the British had doubtless supplied their wants more abundantly.

Capt. Jeremiah Eames was upon the frontiers from July 5 to Oct. 12, 1776, with a party of fifty officers and men, and, from Oct. 14, 1776, to Dec. 1 of the same year, with a party of Rangers of twenty-six officers and men; and, again, he had command of ten men on a like service from Dec. 2, 1776, to April 15, 1777.

Capt. Thomas Simpson commanded a party of Rangers, upon the frontiers, of fifty-three officers and men. They began service Sept. 14, 1776, and were discharged Dec. 5. The officers were:—

Thomas Simpson, Captain. Joshua Howard, Lieutenant. Thomas Simpson, jr., Ensign.

A scouting party of five men was "stationed at and near the Upper Coös," * 1779, from July 15 to Oct. 1 of that year, by order of "the Committee of Safety," commanded by Josiah Chapman, Lieutenant.

^{*} This was probably at Northumberland, as the receipts of the month's pay in advance, of twelve pounds, and bounty of six pounds each, were dated at that town.

Capt. Joseph Hutchins had command of a party, in 1780, of twenty-five men. Its officers were:—

Joseph Hutchins, Captain. John Sanborn, Lieutenant.

Lieut. James Ladd, of Haverhill, had command of a detachment that joined Capt. Nehemiah Lovewell in Vermont, and was in service January, February, and March, 1780. Its officers were:—

James Ladd, First Lieutenant.
John Thompson, Second Lieutenant.

June 15, 1781, a party marched from Plymouth, enlisted by Col. David Webster for the defence of the frontiers, under the command of Lieut. Peter Stearns.

The 3d of August, 1781, a party of Indians made an attack upon the inhabitants of Bethel, Me., and the adjacent towns on the Androscoggin River; killing three men, and capturing three others, whom they took to Montreal. About the middle of August, they made prisoners of Col. Joseph Whipple, of Jefferson (a gentleman from Portsmouth and a large landholder), and a Mr. Gotham, who carried on his farm; both men, however, escaped from Great alarm existed on the Northern frontiers on account of these attacks. The town of Conway immediately raised scouting parties, consisting of Capt. James Osgood and three men, Lieut. Ezekiel Walker and nine men, and Elijah Dinsmore and two men; and they were on duty from ten to twenty-eight days, from Aug. 16, 1781, at Conway and adjacent towns, as a defence against the incursions of the Indians.

"The Committee of Safety" also took immediate measures for the defence of the inhabitants in that quarter, placing a force there under the direction of Col. Joseph Whipple and Col. David Page for the defence of the "Northern Frontiers," consisting of forty-nine officers and men. They were in the service from Aug. 29 to Nov. 6, 1781, and were under the command of—

Jacob Smith, Captain.

Josiah Sanborn, First Lieutenant.

Peter Gilman, Second Lieutenant.

Sergt. James Ladd's party of eleven men, "for the defence of the Western frontiers at Haverhill, Coös," was in that service for two months and three days, from Jan. 28, 1782.

Capt. Ebenezer Webster was incidentally named as being in command of a company of Rangers in 1782. This company was raised "for the defence of the Western frontiers," and was in the service from April 1 to November, 1782. The company consisted of sixty-seven officers and men:—

Ebenezer Webster, Captain. James Ladd, Lieutenant.

Sergt. James Blake's party, "for the defence of the Upper Coös," consisted of eleven men, and was in that service seven months and eighteen days, from April 13, 1782.

A party of thirteen men was raised "for the defence of the Western frontiers" in the year 1782, and was on duty from July 4 to Sept. 30 of that year, commanded by—

> Jonathan Smith, Captain. Adam Johnson, Lieutenant.

Sergt. Phillip Page and five men were drafted for duty at "Androscoggin River" in 1782. They were in that service from Aug. 19 to Nov. 25 of that year.

X. The following roll is that of Capt. Tobey's company in the gallant Twenty-first Regiment United States Infantry, commanded by Col. James Miller in "the battle of Niagara," to which was attached Col. Joseph Cilley as Second Lieutenant (see page 236). It has been submitted to Col. Cilley's inspection, and he has designated from recollection the men from New-Hampshire in the company. Their names have a star annexed, and it will be seen that a majority of the men were from New-Hampshire.

XI. The caption of the roll on page 161 should read "Lieut. Asa Head's detachment" instead of "company." The men under his command belonged to Capt. Fuller's company, of which Head was Lieutenant. It is given as copied from the rolls at Washington; but, on a roll in the possession of the writer, the men from Pembroke under Lieut. Head are placed down as a detachment of Capt. Fuller's company, and this corresponds with other well-known facts. This detachment was made up of volunteers from a company of light infantry in Pembroke, commanded by Capt. Edward Fuller. They volunteered some days before the company of "drafted militia" commanded by Capt. Fuller was detached or drafted, marched to Portsmouth, and were discharged about a week sooner than his company.

XII. On pages 59 and 68 occurs the name of John V. Barron as Ensign and Lieutenant. Lieut. Barron was a meritorious officer, deserving of notice; but no particulars could be obtained of him until too late for insertion in their appropriate place.

John V. Barron was of Woodstock, N.H. (formerly Peeling), and was born May 2, 1787. He was appointed Ensign in Capt. Jonathan Stark's company, of the Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, March 15, 1812, and was transferred and commissioned Second Lieutenant in Capt. V. R. Goodrich's company in the Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, June 26, 1813. He was in many of the hard-fought battles of the "War of 1812," and was wounded in the battle of Niagara. He still lives, residing in Laconia, and carries in his leg a memento of the "War of 1812" in the shape of a ball carelessly fired by some British soldier in the battle of Niagara. He is one of the few surviving soldiers of that war in the State, still active at the age of eighty-one.

XIII. As was named on page 334, there was formed from the tall men of the Ninth Regiment a company of grenadiers under Capt. Bodfish, of Maine; and from the short men a company of riflemen under Capt. Rowe, of New-Hampshire. These companies were made up from recruits from all the New-England States, but mainly from Maine and New-Hampshire. No rolls of these two companies have been found at Washington, or elsewhere. The men from New-Hampshire belonging to these two companies were as follows:—

It is possible that the rolls of the grenadier and rifle companies attached to the Ninth United States Infantry are on file at Washington; but, if so, I have not been able to obtain them, and, from the fact that they were made up from existing companies, I am inclined to think that they were not mustered or paid as distinct companies. And, in closing, I would also say, that it is not certain, nor is it probable, that all of the rolls of New-Hampshire soldiers in the various wars are given in this or the volume published in 1866. Doubtless some still remain in private hands; and there is reason to believe that others are yet on file in the departments at Washington, strictly the property of the State, copies of which are denied us, and even the privilege of looking at them.

But I have done the best I could, and hope that we may yet succeed in obtaining copies of all the records pertaining to the part taken by New-Hampshire in the Revolution and subsequent wars, that the same may be placed on file in our military archives; and trust that never again, will such important records be tossed about, loaned, and kept in so loose a manner as has been the practice in the past. Such documents are of vital importance to our State, and should be tenderly cared for, inasmuch as they are the evidence of the patriotism and valor of the sons of our own granite hills.
